From the Editors

The Heterodox Economics Newsletter marked its 9th anniversary on September 29. We believe that the Newsletter will continue to be the main source of information for heterodox economists, as it has done for the past nine years. See the subscription and access data summarized here. At this juncture, we announce that the current issue will be the last one edited by Tae-Hee Jo and Ted P. Schmidt. Yes, we are telling you that we are stepping down and a new editor is coming to the Newsletter.

Dr. Jakob Kapeller at the University of Linz, Austria is the new editor. He is a heterodox economist and philosopher. He is also the editor of Momentum Quarterly. Dr. Kapeller has already published many articles and books at his early stage of academic career (for more information about Dr. Kapeller, visit his website). Personally, I [Tae-Hee] got to know him a couple of years ago through his article published in the Journal of Economic Issues (Jakob Kapeller and Leonhard Dobusch. 2012. "Heterodox United vs. Mainstream City? Sketching a framework for interested pluralism in economics." Journal of Economic Issues, Vol. 46, No. 4: 1035-1057). I was one of the referees and very much liked his articulated argument as to how heterodox economics can move forward in the spirit of "interested pluralism." That is to say, heterodox economists have to build a pluralistic alternative to the hegemonic mainstream economics in a positive and non-dogmatic manner. As we've reported, attacks on heterodox economics have been taking place around the globe--for example, Australia, UK, France (follow the links to find some bad news happening in those countries). The only way to protect heterodox economics is to offer a more relevant theory and policy (than the mainstream one) as well as to unite our efforts ("Heterodox United!"). Self-interested isolated homo economicus has no place in the real world in which we live, we explain, and we change. We are the economists caring for each other and making good things happen for the 99%. Together we can make a difference. This is precisely the reason why the Heterodox Economics Newsletter was established 9 years ago. Dr. Kapeller will follow suit and make the Newsletter even more informative and useful by bringing in fresh enthusiasm.

As evidenced by the growth in membership of the newsletter, interest in heterodox economics continues to grow around the globe. We hope that we've served our intellectual community well and that in some way we have contributed to this growth. Of course, we are not going to disappear. We will meet you on different occasions at some of the many conferences, workshops and seminars announced in this newsletter (for example, Tae-Hee along with Fred Lee will be organizing the Heterodox Economics Booth at the upcoming ASSA meetings). If you want to contact us personally, please send messages to taeheejo@gmail.com (Tae-Hee) and/or schmidtp@buffalostate.edu (Ted).

Finally, I Personally (Ted) want to publicly acknowledge Tae-Hee's yeoman's efforts throughout our tenure in publishing the letter. Yes, it was a co-editorship, but Tae-Hee deserves much of the credit for maintaining both the technical aspects and the timeliness of publications. Job well done my friend.

Note that Dr. Fadhel Kaboub remains as the book review editor. The website (<http://heterodoxnews.com>) and the email (heterodoxnews@gmail.com) stay the same. The upcoming issues of the Newsletter will be sent from the existing listservs (HEN-xxx@buffalostate.edu) until new lists are created.

Thank you and goodbye for now.

Nine Years of the Heterodox Economics Newsletter by Numbers

The first issue edited by Frederic Lee at the University of Missouri-Kansas City was sent to 1,538 heterodox economists around the world. Now the current issue of the Newsletter goes to 4,946 subscribers (221% increase over the period). In September 2013 alone, 5,651 unique visitors from 132 countries viewed 23,116 pages on the Newsletter website. On average the Heterodox Economics Directory (5th edition, 2013) is downloaded 200 times. We editors trust that the community of heterodox economists will be growing down the road, if we all--individual heterodox economists and heterodox associations--engage with each other and make contributions to the development of our community.

Association for Social Economics

Submissions are now open for the Association for Social Economics sessions at the 2014 Eastern Economic Association meetings, being held in Boston from March 14-16, 2014. Individual papers and organized sessions on any topic related to social economics are welcome. As usual, proposals dealing with economics and philosophy are particularly encouraged. All whose proposals are accepted must register for the conference but do not have to pay the paper submission fee. Please email Professor Mark D. White (profmdwhite@hotmail.com) with your proposal and any questions about the meetings by November 1. (This is slightly earlier than usual to allow any papers not accepted in the ASE sessions to be submitted to the general conference by its deadline of November 15.)

Union for Radical Political Economics

DEADLINE FOR SUBMISSION: FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 2013

URPE@EEA continues to provide a forum for URPE members and economists across the heterodoxy to meet and engage each other and continue to develop the frontiers of heterodox economic theory. Last year, URPE had 23 organized sessions at the meetings. Please consider putting together entire panels and/or submitting individual papers. The URPE deadline for submission is NOVEMBER 15, 2013. To participate one must be a current dues-paying member of URPE. Please send panel and/or paper proposals and any other inquiries to URPE at EEA@yahoo.com

European Society for the History of Economic Thought Annual Conference: Lausanne 2014

29-31 May 2014 | Lausanne, Switzerland

Deadline for submissions: January 13th, 2014

The Conference is organized by the Centre Walras-Pareto and will be held at the University of Lausanne in Switzerland.

Proposals for papers of sessions on all aspects of the history of economic thought are welcome. An abstract of about 400 words for a paper and 600 words for a session should be submitted on the conference website, <http://www.unil.ch/eshet2014>, no later than January 13th, 2014.

Note that: a) already published papers are not eligible for submission; b) only one conference presentation is allowed per person (but more than one submission may be accepted, if involving co-authors who are also presenting); c) session proposals must conform with the normal conference-sessions format (3 papers, 90 min.) and must provide their own discussants.

Particularly welcome are proposals of papers and sessions that fall into the ESHET 2014 Conference theme: Liberalisms: perspectives and debates in the history of economic thought

The assertion of liberal principles and values and the crystallization of economic discourse both took place in the 17th and 18th centuries. This common origin crossed over the history of ideas and extended in intertwined relationships that translated into many semantic and theoretical evolutions. Despite those long debates and controversies, the 'liberal' label is still far from being a well-defined notion, in particular in economic thought. Its numerous denominations – 18th century 'liberté du commerce', classical liberalism, Paretian liberalism, Austrian liberalism, Kantian liberalism, Benthamite liberalism, neoliberalism, paternalistic liberalism, ordoliberalism, etc. – are an illustration of its polysemic nature.

The organizers invite proposals that focus on the debates that have crossed liberal thought, and the changes experienced by it.

Participants are also welcome to address additional transversal questions, such as:

- How were liberal thought and economic policy articulated during different episodes in the history of economic thought?
- How were economic phenomena (crises, income distribution, production) treated according to different streams of liberal thought?
- What role was envisaged for cooperation in societies primarily coordinated by a market mechanism?
- Has private property always been inextricably linked to liberal principles?
- Is there a common set of institutions promoted across different liberal economic lines of thought?
- Is there a best way to tell the story about the relationship between liberalism and methodological individualism? (Is the rational agent free to choose?)

Young Scholar Seminar

ESHET invites young scholars -- persons currently enrolled in a PhD, or who have been awarded a PhD no more than two years prior to May 2014 (and regardless of age) -- to submit their work to the Young Scholars Seminar to be held on the occasion of the ESHET Conference.

Up to six submissions will be selected: ESHET will cover travel expenses up to €300, accommodation costs up to €80/night for three nights, and the registration fee. The authors of the selected papers will have 20 minutes each to present the paper, and a senior scholar will discuss it. Papers may be on any topic relevant to the history of economics, and are not restricted to the conference theme. Candidates should e-mail a paper no longer than 9000 words to Professors Catherine Martin (catherine.martin@univ-paris1.fr) and Manuela Mosca (manuela.mosca@unisalento.it) by January 27th, 2014.

Please include documentation of your (and your co-authors) position vis à vis your PhD, and indicate in the Subject of your e-mail: for Young Scholar Seminar.

ESHET encourages young scholars to participate in the conference. A one-year ESHET membership is offered to all young scholars who submit a paper. Papers that have not been selected will be considered for presentation at other conference sessions.

Forum for Social Economics: Formal Methods for Integrated Socio-Economic Analysis

Special Issue of the Forum for Social Economics, Issue 3-2014 (November)

Theme: Formal Methods for Integrated Socio-Economic Analysis

Special Issue Editor: Tara Natarajan, Associate Professor, Economics, Saint Michael's College, Colchester VT, USA

The Special Issue of the Forum for Social Economics invites papers on the following topics:

a) Use and applications of the Social Fabric Matrix Approach (SFM-A): Descriptive and analytical uses, applications and extensions of the SFM-A to recent domestic/ international/ global socio-economic problems, and contemporary policy matters. Use and applications of other integrated methodologies such as Ostrom's Institutional Analysis and Development Framework (IAD) to recent domestic/ international/ global socio economic problems, and contemporary policy matters are also sought.

Employing contextually relevant quantitative methods such as econometrics, complex modeling, embedded game theory, system dynamics and/ or computer simulations to the integrated framework of choice is particularly encouraged. Discussions of internal consistency, extensions between the integrated framework of choice, and quantitative analytical technique are highly encouraged.

b) Discussions: Are there congruencies between integrated frameworks (e.g., SFM-A and IAD)? Can integrated methodologies reach beyond case studies and heterodox schools of thought? Perspectives on the question of broader applicability of integrated approaches in the field of economics are highly encouraged. Are these integrated approaches largely limited to heterodox thought? Are there certain sub-fields within economics that find a natural congruence with holistic frameworks? What are some of the critical questions that need to be asked of holistic methodologies, frameworks, and approaches in the interest of broader applicability within and beyond heterodox economics?

Motivation and Description

The SFM-A (Hayden) and IAD (Ostrom) are two examples of integrated approaches to analysis and policy making that help delineate, distill, and analyze complex socio economic issues in a holistic, non-reductionist framework. These frameworks are designed to help researchers understand institutions and evolutionary socio-economic processes and allow for embedding the complexity of social interaction into the analysis. The SFM-A (Hayden 2006) is designed to identify cultural values, social beliefs, institutions, technology, prevailing attitudes, and environmental context of any socio economic process (Natarajan, Fullwiler, and Elsner 2009). The IAD framework comes out of the Workshop in Political Theory and Policy Analysis and focuses on understanding institutions at all scales (Ostrom 2005). While there are divergences between the SFM-A and IAD, there is a convergence in their goal; both seek to retain institutional complexity and thus expand the informational base of analyzing any socio-economic process. Both methodologies seek to identify institutional rules and reasons for individual and social behaviors.

How Class Works Conference: Stony Brook 2014

June 5-7, 2014 | SUNY Stony Brook, US | website

The Center for Study of Working Class Life is pleased to announce the How Class Works – 2014 Conference, to be held at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, June 5-7, 2014. Proposals for papers, presentations, and sessions are welcome until December 11, 2013 according to the guidelines below. For more information, visit our Web site.

Purpose and orientation: The conference seeks to explore ways in which an explicit recognition of class helps to understand the social world in which we live, and ways in which analysis of society can deepen our understanding of class as a social relationship. Presentations should take as their point of reference the lived experience of class; proposed theoretical contributions should be rooted in and illuminate social realities. Presentations are welcome from people outside academic life when they sum up social experience in a way that contributes to the themes of the conference. Formal papers will be welcome but are not required. All presentations should be accessible to an interdisciplinary audience.

Conference themes: The conference welcomes proposals for presentations that advance our understanding of any of the following themes.

- The mosaic of class, race, and gender. To explore how class shapes racial, gender, and ethnic experience and how different racial, gender, and ethnic experiences within various classes shape the meaning of class.
- Class dimensions of poverty. To explore why and how poverty is something that happens to the working class.
- Class, power, and social structure. To explore the social content of working, middle, and capitalist classes in terms of various aspects of power; to explore ways in which class and structures of power interact, at the workplace and in the broader society.
- Class and community. To explore ways in which class operates outside the workplace in the communities where people of various classes live.
- Class in a global economy. To explore how class identity and class dynamics are influenced by globalization, including experience of cross-border organizing, capitalist class dynamics, international labor standards.
- Middle class? Working class? What's the difference and why does it matter? To explore the claim that the U.S. is a middle class society and contrast it with the notion that the working class is the majority; to explore the relationships between the middle class and the working class, and between the middle class and the capitalist class.
- Class, public policy, and electoral politics. To explore how class affects public policy, with special attention to health care, the criminal justice system, labor law, poverty, tax and other economic policy, housing, and education; to explore the place of electoral politics in the arrangement of class forces on policy matters.
- Class and culture: To explore ways in which culture transmits and transforms class dynamics.
- Pedagogy of class. To explore techniques and materials useful for teaching about class, at K-12 levels, in college and university courses, and in labor studies and adult education courses.

How to submit proposals for How Class Works – 2014 Conference

Proposals for presentations must include the following information: a) title; b) which of the eight conference themes will be addressed; c) a maximum 250 word summary of the main points, methodology, and slice of experience that will be summed up; d) relevant personal information indicating institutional affiliation (if any) and what training or experience the presenter brings to the proposal; e) presenter's name, address, telephone, fax, and e-mail address. A person may present in at most two conference sessions. To allow time for discussion, sessions will be limited to three twenty-minute or four fifteen-minute principal presentations. Sessions will not include official discussants. Proposals for poster sessions are welcome. Presentations may be assigned to a poster session.

Proposals for sessions are welcome. A single session proposal must include proposal information for all presentations expected to be part of it, as detailed above, with some indication of willingness to participate from each proposed session member.

Submit proposals as an e-mail attachment to michael.zweig@stonybrook.edu or as hard copy by mail to the How Class Works - 2014 Conference, Center for Study of Working Class Life, Department of Economics, SUNY, Stony Brook, NY 11794-4384.

Timetable: Proposals must be received by December 11, 2013. After review by the program committee, notifications will be mailed on January 17, 2014. The conference will be at SUNY Stony Brook June 5-7, 2014. Conference registration and housing reservations will be possible after March 3, 2014. Details and updates will be posted at <http://www.stonybrook.edu/workingclass>.

International Workshop on Labour and Transnational Action in Times of Crisis - From case studies to theory: Oslo 2014

27 and 28 February 2014 | Centre for Advanced Study, Oslo, Norway

Neo-liberal globalisation and Europeanization have put national labour movements under pressure. The increasing transnationalization of production and centralisation of economic governance within multinational firms and supranational organisations (EU, ECB, IMF, WTO) have put national trade unions in competition with each other. And yet, workers are not without weapons. Too often the structural constraints of the global economy are emphasised, at the expense of potential agency of labour. These economic and political integration processes have also provided new strategic possibilities for trade unions. Key here is the way of how trade union action at the local and national level may be connected across borders in moments of transnational solidarity.

The purpose of the workshop is to analyse transnational labour action in times of crisis, historically and now. 'Labour' includes trade unions but also other, more informal forms of collective action by workers understood in a broad sense. The overall ambition is to move beyond empirical description of cases to a conceptually informed understanding of collective action across borders.

In sum, the key innovative aspects of this international workshop are (1) a focus on the theorisation of transnational action, and (2) an emphasis on the new strategic possibilities of labour within the changing global economy.

We invite papers in the following areas:

- What types of transnational labour solidarity can we observe in the past and in what way may they be useful for progressive strategies in the future?
- What factors have facilitated or hampered labour agency in the past as well as in times of neo-liberal Europeanization and globalisation?
- What are the new 'weapons' of labour movements in our times of transnational capitalism and are there experiences by labour movements in the European and Global South, from which Northern trade unions could learn?
- How is labour agency conditioned by the current setting of transnational capitalist social relations of production both within the European Union and across the globe?

Confirmed speakers include Marcel van der Linden (International Institute for Social History, NL), Eddie Webster (University of the Witwatersrand, South Africa), Jane Hardy (University of Hertfordshire, UK) and Mark Anner (Penn State, USA).

Paper proposals of ca. 250 words should be sent to roland.erne@cas.uio.no by 15 November 2013. Colleagues will be informed by mid-December on whether their proposal has been accepted. There is no registration fee for the workshop and all participants will be provided with coffee/tea breaks, two lunches and one evening dinner free of charge. Up to five workshop grants consisting of a travel subsidy plus accommodation for three nights will be allocated on a competitive basis to the best paper proposals by advanced Ph.D. students or early career postdocs.

A special journal issue and/or edited book will be published based on contributions to this workshop.

The workshop is organized by the research group Globalization and the possibility of transnational actors - The case of trade unions (<http://transnationallabour.wordpress.com/>) and will be held at the Centre for Advanced Study at the Norwegian Academy of Science-and Letters in Oslo/Norway.

This research group is led by Knut Kjeldstadli (University of Oslo) and includes Ann Cecilie Bergene (Work Research Institute, Oslo); Andreas Bieler (University of Nottingham); Roland Erne (University College Dublin); Darragh Golden (University College Dublin); Idar Helle (Norwegian Union of General Workers); and Sabina Stan (Dublin City University).

Journal of Australian Political Economy (JAPE) Annual Research

Award for Young Scholars

JAPE is offering an annual award to a student or recent graduate wishing to undertake a short period of research in political economy. The award has a value of $2000.

Applicants may be of any age but must be in at least their third year of undergraduate study in political economy or a related social science subject. They may have already completed their degree. Students who are completing an honours thesis and would like the experience of doing further research during part of the following year (or the year after) would be particularly welcome to apply. Developing part of their thesis into a publishable article [e.g. for the Journal of Australian Political Economy] would be a suitable project for the purpose of this Award.

A period of at least a month full-time or two months part-time would be spent in a University undertaking the proposed project. This could be the Department of Political Economy at the University of Sydney, for example, but other places could be possible if the conditions below are met. The person receiving the Award would not have any employment relationship with the university.

Would you like to apply? If so, you should supply: [1] your curriculum vita, including your academic record; [2] an indication of the research topic or writing project on which you propose to work, supported by an explanatory statement of 300-500 words; [3] an indication of proposed time and place where the project would be undertaken; and [4] a brief statement from an academic indicating her/his willingness to provide some guidance or supervision during the period of research.

Applications should be submitted to Frank Stilwell [frank.stilwell@sydney.edu.au] by the last day of November.

A committee, comprising members of the JAPE editorial committee, will then select the successful applicant. The criteria for selection will include: [1] evidence of the applicant's capacity to undertake high quality work in political economy; [2] the nature of the proposed project, including its political economic significance; and [3] an assessment of the likelihood of the project's successful completion.

The successful applicant will be notified by mid-December.

Journal of Institutional Economics: Ronald Coase

Special Memorial Issue on Ronald Coase

No doubt you have heard of the sad death of Ronald Coase last month. The Journal of Institutional Economics (JOIE) is planning a memorial issue in his honour.

Five leading scholars (including one Nobel Laureate) have already agreed to contribute to this memorial issue of JOIE. We have space in this issue for additional essays of the highest quality, related to Coase and his work on institutions. Would you be interested in making a contribution? Articles can be critical or constructive. But we would like the links to Coase's own work to be explicit.

All contributions will go through our normal refereeing process. It is hoped to publish this memorial issue in early 2015. But, once accepted, articles for JOIE are published quickly online. Submissions for the Coase memorial issue should be online via <http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/joie>, before 31 January 2014. If your article is not accepted in time for the memorial issue, it can be scheduled for a following issue when it is accepted.

You can find out about JOIE and its guidelines for contributors here.

Mark Blaug Prize in Philosophy and Economics 2014

The Erasmus Journal for Philosophy and Economics invites submissions from Young Scholars for the Mark Blaug Prize. This annual academic prize is intended to promote and reward research by Young Scholars in the history, ethics, methodology and philosophy of economics. It is named in honour of Mark Blaug, a founder of the field of philosophy and economics, whose generosity and commitment to Young Scholars was recognized by all who knew him. The prize includes a cash sum of 500 Euros.

Œconomia – History/Methodology/Philosophy: Externalities in economic thought and beyond

Editors of the special issue : Steven G. Medema and Samuel Ferey

Expression of interest: November 15th, 2013
Deadline for submission: September 1st, 2014
Planned publication of the issue: 2015

Over the last sixty years, the concept of externality has become prominent within economics. It is common knowledge that the concept was first discussed by Marshall and then given an analytical content by Pigou (1920) in The Economics of Welfare, in which he analyzed the divergence between marginal private interest and marginal social interest in case of a negative externality and proposed to implement a tax system on polluting activities. Since Meade's (1952) now classic presentation of the effect of an externality through the fable of the apple grower and the beekeeper, the concept of externality has gained visibility in mainstream economic analysis. It has fostered a vast literature and many debates between economists intent on refining the definition and the actual scope of the concept. [Read More]

On the Horizon: Innovation and Creativity in Education

A special issue on Innovation and Creativity in Education.

Both arenas, Innovation and Creativity have, until recently been encouraged and developed outside of The Academia. Consulting organizations have worked with the private sector and much has been written about “Skunk Works” developing surprising products and services within the business communities.

With the recent emphasis on startups, and the need for job-seekers to be entrepreneurial, there has been a surge of programs and courses outside the traditional areas of engineering, art, architecture and design. This includes MBA and business programs, education, humanities and social studies arenas.

Workshops, seminars, conferences have emerged, almost overnight and have started to draw cross-overs between education and the private sector. Greater emphasis on problem solving has included programs in K-12 as well as universities. Publications have been dusted off and new materials prepared both for self-directed learning and for use in programs and courses.

The Challenge

1. Is this the “idea” of the moment with the ability to become established in its right, or will it become a part of a larger program? What will these efforts look like?
2. Are creativity and innovation forward thinking or identified only when surfacing from analysis of the past?
3. How will this area, re-emergent and amplified, impact and/or be impacted by the current problems facing the world and how will this larger set of issues impact or transform the current efforts in creativity and innovation. The issues range from climate changes and the environment to the current world economic crisis and the social unrest characterized by the “Arab Spring”.

“Creative and Innovative” addressment of this topic is encouraged in content and in presentation. The journal accepts active internet links. The electronic version can use color if it can also be presented in B/W in print.

Progressive Economy Academics Conference: Brussels 2014

5-6 March, 2014 | Brussels, Belgium | website

In view of this conference, Progressive Economy organises a call for papers on four research topics under the authority of its Scientific Board, being composed of fifteen leading academics (see hereafter). Interested researchers are invited to submit an abstract of their paper in English by 25th of November 2013, using the online procedure on our website. Researchers whose abstract will have been selected by the Scientific Board will be informed by 16 December 2014. They will then be requested to submit their full paper by 24th of February 2014 and will be invited to attend the Academic Conference at the organiser's expense in order to present this contribution. The Scientific Board will subsequently select a total of six best papers, to be announced during a special session at the Annual Forum on 7 March 2014.

The four research topics are:

- * Inequality and the crisis;
- * Alternatives to austerity;
- * Reforming European economic governance;
- * Rethinking economic policy.

Progressive Economy networking project among economists active in the scientific community, of which the annual call for papers is a major part. PEAC also takes inspiration from the work "peak": the point of highest activity, quality, or achievement (www.oxforddictionaries.com).

Book, The Two Great Invisibilities: Perspectives on Workers and Animals in the Food System

Editors: Linnea I. Laestadius, PhD, MPP and Garrett M. Broad, PhD

The past decade has brought tremendous and much needed attention to the connections between food choices, health, and environmental sustainability. Despite this exposure, however, several foundational aspects of the contemporary food system have remained at the margins of most mainstream debates. Notably, concerns related to the rights of food system workers, as well as considerations for the interests of non-human animals, have often been overlooked. Rather than confronting significant ethical questions about the often intersecting exploitation of working people and animals, the topics tend to be handled separately from larger questions about health, equity, and sustainability in the food system.

In light of this, we are seeking contributions for an edited volume that aims to bridge theory and practice by highlighting the connections between workers and animals in the food system. Contributions should strive to push the dialogue on food systems toward an intersectional, inclusive and actionable approach. We are open to scholarship from any number of social science and humanist disciplines, as well as from diverse philosophical and methodological perspectives, including engaged and participatory action research. Works that interrogate these intersectional issues across any level of food production, distribution, or consumption are welcome. Thematic topics include, but are not limited to:

1. critical theory related to animals, gender, race, and class in order to explain the current status of working people and animals in the food system and how their struggles are inherently linked;
2. the industrial food system's social, economic, ethical, and public health impacts on workers and animals alike; and
3. the historical and contemporary experiences of labor and animal advocates who seek to reform current practices and shed light on enduring injustices.

We invite interested researchers to submit a brief paragraph expressing their interest and their proposed manuscript topic. Extended abstracts will be requested from selected contributors. We are not seeking previously published manuscripts at this time. Researchers who have studied either working people or animals in the food system are encouraged to take this opportunity to broaden the scope of their work and submit relevant proposals.

Inquiries and proposed topics should be emailed to Dr. Linnea Laestadius (LLaestad@uwm.edu) and Dr. Garrett Broad (gbroad@asc.upenn.edu). Please include "Food System Workers and Animals" in your email subject line and your proposed topic in the body of the email.

Proposals need to be received no later than October 15th, 2013. To date, the University of Nebraska Press has expressed strong interest in the edited volume.

Please circulate this CFP to any colleagues who might be interested. Apologies for any cross-postings.

CORRUPTION: The New School's Center for Public Scholarship presents the 30th Social Research conference: New York City 2013

Thursday and Friday, November 21 and 22, 2013 | The New School, US | website

(Theresa Lang Student Center at 55 West 13th Street and the John Tishman Auditorium at 66 West 12th Street, NYC)

There is hardly anywhere one can look, in political or corporate life in the United States and around the world where corruption and the serious damage it causes is not painfully evident. At this conference, policy makers, historians, lawyers, and scholars will examine the private and public systems affected by rampant corruption and discuss how transparency and accountability protocols could serve to at least reduce, if not eliminate, the kinds of corruption we all live with.

Conference participants include Peter Eigen, James Jacobs, Michael Johnston, Sheila Krumholz, Alina Mungiu-Pippidi, Susan Rose-Ackerman, Bo Rothstein, Alan Ryan, Debra Satz and Richard White. The complete conference program and speakers' bios are available online.

Hyman P. Minsky Summer Seminar 2014

June 13–21, 2014 | Levy Economics Institute of Bard College, NY, USA | website

The Levy Economics Institute of Bard College is pleased to announce that it will hold the fifth Minsky

Summer Seminar June 13-21, 2014. The Seminar provides a rigorous discussion of both the theoretical and the applied aspects of Minsky's economics, with an examination of meaningful prescriptive policies relevant to the current economic and financial crisis. The Summer Seminar is of particular interest to graduate students, recent graduates, and those at the beginning of their academic or professional careers. The teaching staff includes well-known economists concentrating on and expanding Minsky's work.

Applications may be made to Susan Howard at the Levy Institute (howard@levy.org), and should include a current curriculum vitae. Admission to the Summer Seminar includes provision of room and board on the Bard College campus. A limited number of small travel reimbursements of $100 for US fellows and $300 for foreign fellows, respectively, are available to participants.

Due to limited space availability, the deadline for applications is March 1, 2014. The Summer Seminar program is organized by Jan Kregel, Dimitri B. Papadimitriou and L. Randall Wray. For more information, please visit www.levyinstitute.org

IIPPE Marxist Political Economy Workshop: London 2013

6 November, 2013 | School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), UK

Following the success of previous Training Workshops, the International Initiative for the Promotion of Political Economy will run a one-day introductory training workshop in Marxist Political Economy on 6 November 2013 at the School of Oriental and African Studies, London, the day before the start of the annual Historical Materialism Conference (also at SOAS).

We are seeking an audience of engaged participants, including undergraduate, postgraduate students, junior academics and activists, who have a particular interest in acquainting themselves with the basic principles of Marxian political economy. As this is an introductory workshop, it will assume no prior knowledge and will be led by Simon Mohun and Alfredo Saad-Filho.

If you wish to attend the workshop, please send your name and occupation to Elisa Van Waeyenberge <ew23@soas.ac.uk> before 15th of October 2013.

LSE HPPE Seminar: London 2013

The seminar takes place at the London School of Economics in St Clements Building - STC.S221 at 1 pm. Everyone is welcome. The Michaelmas term programme is available here. For more details about the seminar, please contact the convenors at g.serra@lse.ac.uk or r.schwarzberg@lse.ac.uk

University of Greenwich Seminar (Thomas Goda): London 2013

Thomas Goda of the Universidad EAFIT, Medellín, on "Wealth concentration in the age of high net worth individuals" on 9 October, Wednesday, 4pm at the University of Greenwich in QA075.

Abstract:

Trends in wealth inequality have long been hotly debated. Some argue that wealth has an inherent tendency to become increasingly unequal distributed, while others argue that such a trend does not exist. This paper compares changes in relative and absolute wealth concentration, to establish the correctness of these claims. The findings indicate that today's relative wealth concentration is very high, but that it is not extraordinarily high in a historical perspective. The rising population size and wealth holdings of high net worth individuals indicate that, on the contrary, the level of absolute wealth concentration is higher than ever before.

The applicant must contribute to the continuing development of cross-disciplinary courses and research in the Institute.

In its research strategy for 2013-2016, the Institute gives priority to a number of research areas. Applicants are asked to describe how they see their own research plans and their publication record in relation to their potential contributions within the above-mentioned research theme.

Applicants with an interest and experience in project-based teaching and teaching in an interdisciplinary environment, and sympathetic towards teaching within several disciplines will be preferred.

The application should include

1. curriculum vitae
2. application letter containing information about relevant teaching experience
3. a publication list specifying publications that are considered to be particularly relevant for the job.
4. Applicants for the position can attach up to five publications. The assessment committee may ask for material not included here for candidates making the shortlist, which the applicant will then be required to submit.

Salary and employment conditions will be in accordance with the collective agreement between the Danish Ministry of Finance and the Danish Confederation of Professional Associations. Further information can be obtained by contacting the Head of Institute, Gorm Rye Olsen. Tel. +45 4674 3262, email: gormrye@ruc.dk or Professor Jesper Jespersen, tel. + 454674 2029, email: jesperj@ruc.dk Successful candidates who do not speak Danish (or possibly Swedish or Norwegian) will be requested to acquire the necessary skills in Danish within the first two years of service, so as to ensure that they can participate satisfactorily in teaching activities as well as in academic and administrative activities at the University. At the time of appointment, successful candidates must have successfully mastered English for academic purposes.

We only accept applications through our electronic recruitment system. To apply for the position you must go to the job advertisement on our homepage: www.ruc.dk/job/vip/ . Click on the button Apply for vacancy here which appears immediately below the job advertisement. Then you fill the application form and attach those in the job advertisement mentioned documents. Finish by clicking Submit.

We must receive your application no later than October 23, 2013. Material received after the deadline will not be considered. Roskilde University invites applications from all those who are interested regardless of age, gender, religion and ethnicity.

Siena College, US

Tenure Track Position | Economics

The Economics Department at Siena College is accepting applications for a tenure-track position beginning fall 2014. The position is open, but fields in political economy and open-economy macroeconomics, and the ability to teach international trade and econometrics are of particular interest. Teaching experience and completed Ph.D. by fall 2014 are expected. We seek applicants with a passion for innovative undergraduate teaching, including heterodox approaches, and applied and interdisciplinary work. Domestic and international field experiences and mentoring undergraduate research are strengths. Applications received before November 27, 2013 will be considered for an ASSA meeting interview.

Application should include cover letter; c.v.; teaching portfolio to include statement of teaching philosophy, sample syllabi, and summary of student evaluations; job market paper; graduate transcript; and three letters of recommendation attesting to teaching effectiveness.

The communism of capital?

Current

The communism of capital? What could this awkward turn of phrase mean, and what might it signify with regards to the state of the world today? Does it merely describe a reality in which communist demands are twisted to become productive of capital, a capitalist realism supplemented by a disarmed communist ideology? Or does the death of the capitalist utopia mean that capital cannot contain the antagonism expressed by Occupy and other movements anymore, and therefore must confront communism upfront?

The 12 contributions to this latest issue of ephemera explore the valances of the paradoxical and seemingly incoherent expression that is 'the communism of capital'. Collectively they stake out new territory for the theorisation and organization of political struggle in a context in which capital has become increasingly aware that its age-old nemesis might today be lurking at its very heart.

Austerity Ireland: The Failure of Irish Capitalism

By Kieran Allen and Brian O' Boyle

Pluto Press, September 2013. ISBN: 9780745334011 | website

Ireland has been marketed as the poster boy of EU austerity. EU elites and neoliberal commentators claim that the country's ability to suffer economic pain will attract investors and generate a recovery. In Austerity Ireland, Kieran Allen challenges this official image and argues that the Irish state's response to the crash has primarily been designed to protect economic privilege. The resulting austerity has been a failure and is likely to produce a decade of hardship. The book offers a deeply informed and penetrating diagnosis of Ireland's current socio-economic and political malaise, suggesting that a political earthquake is underway which may benefit the left. Austerity Ireland is essential reading for all students of Irish politics and economics, as well as those interested in the politics of austerity and the eurozone crisis.

Biblical Economic Ethics: Sacred Scripture's Teachings on Economic Life

By Albino Barrera

August 2013. Lexington Books. ISBN: 978-0-7391-8229-1 (hb) | website

This book synthesizes the findings of scripture scholars and ethicists on what the Bible teaches about economic life. It proposes a biblical theology of economic life that addresses three questions, namely:

- What do the individual books of Sacred Scripture say about proper economic conduct?
- How do these teachings fit within the larger theology and ethics of the books in which they are found?
- Are there recurring themes, underlying patterns, or issues running across these different sections of the Bible when read together as a single canon?

The economic norms of the Old and New Testament exhibit both continuity and change. Despite their diverse social settings and theological visions, the books of the Bible nonetheless share recurring themes: care for the poor, generosity, wariness over the inordinate pursuit of wealth, the inseparability of genuine worship and upright moral conduct, and the acknowledgment of an underlying divine order in economic life. Contrary to most people's first impression that the Bible offers merely random economic teachings without rhyme or reason, there is, in fact, a specific vision undergirding these scriptural norms. Moreover, far from being burdensome impositions of do's and don'ts, the Bible's economic norms are, in fact, an invitation to participate in God's providence and governance of the world.

Building a Green Economy: Perspectives from Ecological

Economics

Edited by Robert B. Richardson

Michigan State University Press, September 2013. ISBN: 9781611861020 | Website

This new book presents a roadmap for an economy that prioritizes human welfare over consumerism and growth. The book has contributions from leading scholars in the field of ecological economics, and covers both theoretical perspectives and practical applications.

Challenging the Orthodoxy: Reflections on Frank Stilwell's Contribution to Political Economy

Edited by Susan K. Schroeder and Lynne Chester

Springer, October 2013. ISBN: 978-3-642-36120-3 (hb) | website

Political economy focuses on issues that are fundamental to individual and collective well-being and rests on the proposition that economic phenomena do not occur in isolation from social and political processes. One leading Australian political economist is Frank Stilwell. Highlights of his work include concerns with the creation and use of wealth, inequalities between rich and poor, the spatial implications of economic growth, and the tensions between economic growth and the environment. Stilwell has been especially prominent in developing alternative economic policies, with seminal contributions to understanding the radical shift in Australian economic and social policies since the early 1980s. He has also been a leader in the teaching of political economy to many cohorts of first-year university students. This collection, spanning these themes, honours Stilwell's contribution to Australian political economy after more than 40 years teaching at the University of Sydney. The book provides not only an opportunity to appreciate his contribution but also a greater understanding of these themes which remain of crucial contemporary relevance.

Contributing authors include: Geoffrey Harcourt, John E. King, Jane Kelsey, Andrew Mearman, Gabrielle Meagher, Brendan Gleeson, Mark Diesendorf and Frank Stilwell

The Clash of Globalizations: Essays on the Political Economy of Trade and Development Policy

By Kevin P. Gallagher

Anthem Press, July 2013. ISBN 9780857283276 (hb) | Website

Bringing together a series of essays on the political economy of trade and development policy, GDAE Researcher and BU Professor Kevin P. Gallagher explores the factors that have led to twenty-first-century trade politics being characterized as a “clash of globalizations.” His book addresses the following research questions:

- To what extent is the global trading regime reducing the ability of nation-states to pursue policies for financial stability and economic growth?
- What political factors explain such changes in policy space over time, across different types of trade treaties and across nations?

Gallagher explores the role of economic power, institutional structure, domestic politics, currency fluctuations and ideas about globalization in effecting changes to global trade policies.

Crucible of Resistance: Greece, the Eurozone and the World Economic Crisis

By Christos Laskos and Euclid Tsakalotos

Pluto Press. September 2013. ISBN: 9780745333809 (pb) | website

Crucible of Resistance seeks to challenge the mainstream account of the 'Greek Crisis' and situate it within a broader regional context and ultimately a critique of the world economic system. Christos Laskos and Euclid Tsakalotos argue that Greece's exceptionalism is largely a myth. They show how the causes of the 2008 global financial crisis lie in key features of the neoliberal economic order, including income and wealth inequalities and the hollowing out of democratic and deliberative institutions. A progressive exit from the crisis, for Greece and the eurozone as a whole, entails meeting head on the limitations of the neoliberal order. Crucible of Resistance argues that an effective response entails confronting not just the neoliberal order, but also the earlier social-democratic Keynesian regime. This book widens out the debate about the crisis in Greece and the eurozone linking it to socialist and class strategies at the international level.

In Marx's Laboratory: Critical Interpretations of the Grundrisse

Edited by Riccardo Bellofiore, Guido Starosta, and Peter D. Thomas

Brill, 2013. ISBN: 9789004236769 | Website

In Marx's Laboratory. Critical Interpretations of the Grundrisse provides a critical analysis of the Grundrisse as a crucial stage in the development of Marx's critique of political economy. Stressing both the achievements and limitations of this much-debated text, and drawing upon recent philological advances, this volume attempts to re-read Marx's 1857-58 manuscripts against the background of Capital, as a 'laboratory' in which Marx first began to clarify central elements of his mature problematic. With chapters by an international range of authors from different traditions of interpretation, including the International Symposium on Marxian Theory, this volume provides an in-depth analysis of key themes and concepts in the Grundrisse, such as method, dialectics and abstraction; abstract labour, value, money and capital; technology, the 'general intellect' and revolutionary subjectivity, surplus-value, competition, crisis; and society, gender, ecology and pre-capitalist forms.

Fifty Major Economists, 3rd Edition

By Steven Pressman

Routledge, August 2013; ISBN: 978-0-415-64509-6 (PB), 978-0-415-64508-9 (HB) | website

An introduction to the life, work and ideas of the people who have shaped the economic landscape from the sixteenth century to the present day. Now in a third edition, it considers how major economists might have viewed challenges such as the continuing economic slump, high unemployment and the sovereign debt problems which face the world today, it includes entries on:

- Paul Krugman
- Hyman Minsky
- John Maynard Keynes
- Adam Smith
- Irving Fisher
- James Buchanan

Fifty Major Economists contains brief biographical information on each featured economist and an explanation of their major contributions to economics, along with simple illustrations of their ideas. With reference to the recent work of living economists, guides to the best of recent scholarship and a glossary of terms, Fifty Major Economists is an ideal resource for students of economics.

Financial Liberalization and Economic Performance: Brazil at the Crossroads

By Luiz Fernando de Paula

Routledge, June 2013. ISBN: 978-0-415-72260-5 (pb). Series: Routledge Studies in the Modern World Economy | website

Since the beginning of the 1990s, Brazil has followed a pattern of economic development inspired by Washington Consensus. This framework includes a set of liberalising and market friendly policies such as privatisation, trade liberalization, stimulus to foreign direct investment, tax reform, and social security reforms. This book assesses the determinants and impacts of financial liberalisation in Brazil considering its two dimensions: the opening up of the balance of payments capital account, and the penetration by foreign bank of the domestic banking sector. The author combines theoretical and empirical analyses. Some make use of mathematical models and/or statistical techniques; however, they are only used when they are strictly necessary to the analysis.

Innovative Fiscal Policy and Economic Development in Transition Economies

By Aleksandr Gevorkyan

August 2013. Routledge. ISBN: 978-0-415-71035-0 (pb) | website

This book explores the problems of fiscal policy as an instrument of economic and social development in the modern environment, primarily focusing on the transition economies of Eastern Europe, Caucasus, and Central Asia. Evaluating the transformational experience in these countries, this work meets a need for a critical analysis in the aftermath of the 1990s market liberalization reforms, of current trends and to outline the roadmap for future development.

Time on Our Side: Why we all need a shorter working week

By Anne Coote and Jane Franklin

New Economics Foundation, September 2013 | website

Have you ever wondered why you're so busy, where your time goes, or how much your time is really worth? This book will radically alter your understanding of the nature and value of time. Authored by leading experts in social, economic and environmental sciences, it explains how moving towards shorter, more flexible hours of work could help tackle urgent problems that beset our daily lives – from overwork, unemployment and low well-being, to entrenched inequalities, needless high-carbon consumption and the lack of time to live sustainably.
