

Heterodox Economics Newsletter

Issue 214 — May 29, 2017 — web¹ — pdf² — Heterodox Economics Directory³

This issue of the Heterodox Economics Newsletter is an especially hasty one, as it contains many calls and job postings with deadlines only a few days away - so scroll through this issue with great care!

To further reinforce this general flavor of urgency, I wanted to point you to a spectacular project in pluralist economics, namely *Exploring Economics*⁴. As you can see for yourself, Exploring Economics is a website dedicated to explaining the diversity of economic thought from different vantage points. In doing so, it also provides very apt and well-written introductions to different traditions in economics, which are highly useful for giving students pointers to answer the question "where to start" their scholarly activities. Even more impressing, Exploring Economics is a fully student-led project, which aims to further expand by providing a summer academy (check it out here⁵), introductory workshops, partnerships with universities and, of course, additional content on pluralist economics.

For doing so, Exploring Economics needs your help. As the editor of your most favorite Newsletter, I would urge you to take a look at their efforts⁶ and donate to their current crowdfunding project⁷. It is quite incredible what these students achieved without financing - so let's give them the push they deserve!

Many thanks and all the best,

Jakob

Call for Papers

1st International Conference on Modern Monetary Theory (Kansas City, Sept 2017)

September 21–24, 2017 — University of Missouri, Kansas City

Modern Monetary Theory has transformed the economics discipline. Its influence extends beyond economics, reaching deep into the fields of law, history, finance, banking, public policy, and philosophy. Join the world's leading MMT practitioners, and explore the cutting edge of modern economic thinking.

Call for Papers

Submissions are welcome on any aspect of Modern Monetary Theory, such as: fiscal policy, economic development, employment policy, framing and marketing of MMT, taxation, inflation and reforming the financial system. Please send your individual abstract (200 words max) or panel submission with a short description before June 15 to mmtconference@umkc.edu⁸.

Annual Conference Centre for Applied Philosophy, Politics and Ethics (CAPPE) on "Empire, Capital & Transnational Resistance" (Brighton, Sept 2017)

13-15 September, 2017 — University of Brighton, Brighton (UK)

THEME: EMPIRE, CAPITAL, AND TRANSNATIONAL RESISTANCE: PHILOSOPHICAL AND INTERDISCIPLINARY APPROACHES*

The past decade has witnessed widespread resistance to neoliberalism across the world. Unlike the anti-colonial revolts of the 1950s and 1960s, this resistance has tended either to fizzle out or to be appropriated by states. This conference considers recent forms of resistance to corporate, neoliberal and state power in the context of the post-colonial world. It looks towards the emergence of transnational forms of resistance linking different parts of the globe, exploring their limits and their potential.

The Centre for Applied Philosophy, Politics and Ethics at the University of Brighton welcomes interdisciplinary papers on any aspect(s) of such resistance from, among others, those working in philosophy, politics, ethics, area studies, global ethics, geography, cultural and critical theory.

Possible themes include:

- What is resistance?
- What is political action? What counts as political resistance?
- What is political about political philosophy and or politics?
- How should we understand 'the state', 'empire' and 'capital' in today's world?

⁸<mailto:mmtconference@umkc.edu>

- How does the changing relationship between state and corporation affect understandings of citizenship?
- What are the interrelations between corporate and disciplinary power?
- What is "the question of difference" in the neoliberal conjuncture?
- What relationships are there between neoliberalism and populism?
- Borders
- Rethinking 'colonialism'
- Trump, Brexit and the Right: implications for realignments of resistance

Please email ABSTRACTS, of no more than 300 words, for a 20-min. presentation, to Bob Brecher⁹ by 30th June 2017.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER: JOHN CHALCRAFT (LSE)

The conference fee is £210. This includes refreshments, lunch on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday and a buffet dinner on the Thursday evening. There are a limited number of places available for graduate students and for people who have no institutional affiliation at the reduced price of £105. Please indicate if you wish to be considered for one of these places when sending your abstract.

Please note: the conference fee does not include accommodation and, unfortunately, we are unable to offer travel grants or other forms of financial assistance. A limited amount of reasonably priced student halls of residence accommodation is available on a first come first served basis.

Development Dialogue 15 @ the International Institute of Social Studies (ISS) (The Hague, Oct 2017)

11-13 October — The Hague, Netherlands

The 15th Development Dialogue conference⁶⁷ has published its call for abstracts! We warmly invite PhD researchers and practitioners to submit their abstracts and look forward to a fruitful and inspiring dialogue in October.

This year the conference coincides with the ISS' 65th birthday celebrations

Over the years, discourses and research on development and social justice have tended to focus on broad ideals of development, whereas societies' lived experiences in relation to development interventions has not been sufficiently engaged with. This sometimes conceals competing and conflicting local contexts of development interventions and the underlying conditions for which they are accepted, rejected or ignored.

Moreover, dominant global discourses on 'global development' and 'social justice' arising from certain schools of thought are recognized as increasingly problematic when placed alongside questions such as who benefits from 'global development', who decides how social justice is reached for whom and on what grounds, and related questions on the 'best' paths to reach social justice.

This year's event is therefore an attempt raise discussions on the vital issue of 'praxis', particularly referring to the experiences and responsibilities of PhD researchers and practitioners in engaging with their research, when engaging with literature, discourses, and with fieldwork.

Want to submit a paper?

If you would like to submit a paper for consideration, please read the following and ensure that you comply with all application procedure as explained in this Final Call

⁶⁶mailto:jramasco[at]ifisc.uib-csic.es

⁶⁷https://www.iss.nl/research/conferences_and_seminars/development_dialogue/15th_development_dialogue/document⁶⁸.

Conference theme and questions(see also here⁶⁹)

Some of the pertinent questions to be raised through this dialogue would be:

- What has been the scope for scholar activism and the responsibilities of PhD researchers and practitioners in contexts where social justice considerations are paramount?
- How do we as researchers situate developmental discourses within the everyday lives of people from varying backgrounds?
- How should researchers approach local knowledges and embodied experiences when conducting research?
- How does the interaction of doctoral researchers' expectations and assumptions with ground realities influence research outcomes?
- How can doctoral researchers contribute to alternative narratives or discourses to dominant discourses on global development and social justice through their research?
- Discussion points

The discussions during this conference will not be limited to specific local contexts and ethnographic approaches only, but will span governance scales and borders both among researchers and the researched.

Some of the sub-themes for this year's conference (but not limited to) are:

- Participatory methodologies,
- Epistemological diversity,
- Field work ethics,
- Migration,
- Sexuality,
- Humanitarian aid,

Historical Materialism Sydney Conference 2017: "Capital and the revolt against capitalism" (Sydney, Dec 2017)

7-8 December, 2017 — The University of Sydney, Sydney, Australia

Call for papers

This year marks the 150th anniversary of Marx's "Capital" and the centenary of the Russian Revolution. Both anniversaries raise vital questions for Marxist theory and practice today. How can value theory inform an analysis of modern capitalism? What can we learn from history and how do we understand theory and politics in the changed conditions of the 21st century in Australasia and around the world? What do contemporary debates around social reproduction mean for the Marxist tradition? And how should Marxist theory and practice inform an understanding of and resistance to today's ecological crisis?

HM Sydney 2017 Conference: "Capital" and the revolt against capitalism* welcomes papers addressing the questions of "Capital", capitalism and anti-capitalist politics. We continue to welcome papers on all general topics of interest to the Marxist tradition but particularly encourage papers on the following themes:

⁷⁰https://www.iss.nl/research/conferences_and_seminars/development_dialogue/15th_development_dialogue/final_call/

- "Capital" and value 150 years on
- Socialism and ecology
- Social reproduction and oppression
- "Capital" and critical receptions of /Capital/
- Revolutionary history and politics since 1917
- Art and culture in and after the Russian revolution
- Socialism and populism today

This year the conference will feature a keynote by Jason W. Moore, Associate Professor, Department of Sociology, Binghamton University, and Coordinator of the World-Ecology Research Network. In 2015 Jason published the widely praised and debated "Capitalism in the Web of Life: Ecology & the Accumulation of Capital" (Verso). His research fields include political ecology, agro-food studies, historical geography, social and spatial theory, environmental history, environmental humanities, political economy, world history, and neoliberalism.

Please send proposals for papers and panels to hmaustralasia@gmail.com⁷¹ by Friday 4 August 2017. Proposals should be no more than 250 words. Papers should be 20 minutes long, and panels may include three speakers.

Interdisciplinary Workshop: "Talk on Trust and Europe's Crisis of Representation" (Cambridge, Dec 2017)

7-8 December, 2017 — Woolf Institute, Cambridge, UK

Convenors: Jan-Jonathan Bock (Woolf Institute), Caroline Humphrey (King's College, Cambridge), and Jonathan White (London School of Economics and Political Science)

Keynote speakers

- Richard Sennett (London School of Economics and Political Science)
- David Runciman (University of Cambridge)

⁷¹<mailto:hmaustralasia@gmail.com>

- Paul Weller (Coventry University)

We invite 250-word abstracts for an interdisciplinary workshop on the prevalence of talk on trust in Europe. The event will be held at the Woolf Institute in Cambridge, 7-8 December 2017. Please send your abstracts and a brief CV to Jan-Jonathan Bock (jjb71@cam.ac.uk⁷²) by 6pm on Friday, 2 June 2017. Selected participants will be asked to submit 6,000-word papers for pre-circulation in November.

Outline

Across Europe, the economic and political realities established after 1945 have come under strain. Capitalism has not recovered from the financial crisis and subsequent austerity regimes. Resistance to free-trade agreements unites pan-European movements, denouncing the failure of ‘the market’ to benefit citizen-consumers. Digital and sharing economies announce postcapitalist forms, remodelling the superficial social relations of precarious and competitive labour. In attempts to explain these crises, the decline of trust in capitalism’s ability to satisfy desires for protection, safety, and sociality is routinely invoked. Plural democracies face similar dissatisfaction. Brexit, anti-migration hostility, and new nationalisms interrupt the trajectory towards a more settled, multicultural, and multi-faith Europe. A sense of disenfranchisement is exacerbated by the failure of institutions to devise persuasive models of community life that address growing diversity and desires for solidarity. Cultural heterogeneity and religious difference are accused of undermining shared values. Diversity is assumed to erode social and political alliances. Pundits and citizens explain the rise of anti-establishment antagonism, anxiety, and dissatisfaction with pluralism by referring to ‘a lack of trust’.

In crisis talk, the decline of trust is offered as the key reason for deteriorating relations between citizens and community life, political institutions, and economic frameworks. We want to ask: why is there so much talk about trust, and what does this reveal about our time? What work is performed by discourses on trust, distrust, and the absence of trust in debates about disenchantment and crisis? When talk of trust is central in explanations of changing attitudes, what is perhaps neglected or concealed? What do debates about lacking trust reveal regarding expectations of statehood, representation, socio-religious relations, community life, the economy, and political agency? Are there new actors, groups, or ideologies to which citizens attach trust? Finally, does the discourse regarding a lack of trust towards economic, religious, and political actors affect how people talk about trust in personal relationships and private life? Through the use of trust as a central concept in crisis talk, citizens reflect on its meanings and consequences. We want to explore these reflections on trust and its significance for community life, and examine what they reveal regarding the political, religious, and economic conditions of a crisis-ridden continent.

We invite submissions that engage with one or more of the following questions:

⁷²<mailto:jjb71@cam.ac.uk>

- To what extent are discourses on declining trust connected with late capitalist cultures, their employment types, and precarity? Alternative economic practices challenge established models: what role is trust said to play in new economic activities that produce different ways of living, exchanging, and connecting? How does talk about economic crises affect trust discourses?
- What is the role of cultural and religious diversity in talk about declining trust? How does cultural or religious difference feature in accounts regarding the ability to trust others? How are heterogeneity and talk about declining trust connected? What is the role of the changing religious landscape – the decline of Christian affiliations, minority groups, and non-religious people – in talk about trust?
- What does the talk of trust reveal about attitudes towards public institutions? Under which political conditions do people claim to place trust in practices of representation? How do discourses on trust or distrust shape accounts of the crisis of democratic representation? How is citizenship assumed to intersect with trust? Should mature citizens confront the state and state actors with trust or suspicion? Is the ability to trust others always assumed to be positive? How do political actors strive to remake trust?
- What is the importance of the talk on trust in discourses about populism, disenchantment, fear, and anti-establishment forces? How do emergent nationalisms frame the ability to trust some individuals, institutions, or groups, but not others? What role does the rhetoric of trust play in emergent nationalist movements?

– FEPS Young Academics Network.

The FEPS Young Academics Network was established in March 2009 with an aim to gather promising progressive PhD candidates and young PhD researchers ready to use their academic experience in a debate about the Next Europe. Realised with the support of the Dr.-Karl-Renner-Institut, the project has gathered a large number of members. Their exchanges and interdisciplinary research have resulted in a number of stimulating studies, providing a relevant contribution to the European progressive movement.

This call is being launched with the new (6) cycle. It is addressed to outstanding, young, European, progressive academics holding a status of either PhD candidates or post-doctoral researchers, who are eager to get involved in the debate about the future of Europe and are characterised by the high degree of social competence allowing them to function well in a diverse environment. If selected as a new member, the candidate will be expected to:

- Remain committed to fulfilment of the goals for which FEPS YAN was established
- Actively contribute to achievement of the objectives set up by FEPS YAN within the long and short term work plans
- Participate in the FEPS YAN Seminars, as also in their preparations and debriefings
- Remain engaged in the times between the seminars
- Contribute to overall strengthening of FEPS, via work within the FEPS YAN and through its representation within other FEPS and third parties' research and activities.

The application should include three documents: (1) CV, focused on research achievements and objectives; (2) Letter of motivation of a candidate and (3) an abstract of a page explaining the research question the candidate would like to pursue within FEPS YAN in the upcoming cycle. The outcomes of the previous cycles and the final FEPS YAN papers can be consulted on the FEPS website. The language, in which documents should be completed in, is the same as the working language of FEPS YAN, which is English.

The applications should be sent by the 30 May 2017 to the FEPS YAN Coordinators (Dr. Ania Skrzypek, FEPS Senior Research Fellow: ania.skrzypek@feps-europe.eu and Elena Gil: elena.gil@feps-europe.eu, New Media Advisor), who may also be addressed in case of further queries regarding this Call.

Successful candidates will be invited to join the next FEPS YAN Seminar, scheduled to take place in Vienna, Austria from 1st to 4th September 2017.

Club of Rome Summer Academy: "Challenging an Unsustainable Economic System" (Sept 2017, Florence)

September 2017 — University of Florence, Italy

Theme: Challenging an Unsustainable Economic System - Ethical economic thinking, activist skills for change

Background

Today's economic system is failing humanity and the planet. It is the cause of climate change, resource depletion, environmental degradation, social inequality, enduring poverty, growing migration, greater political extremism, and persistently high unemployment. Many people understand this and yearn to take action. Yet, they are unsure of what to do and how to contribute to change.

The Club of Rome's "Reclaim Economics" project, launched in 2016, was designed to fill this gap by transforming the way our economic system is perceived and understood. It aims to promote new economic thinking, that puts human well-being and the planet at the centre. This year's Reclaim Economics flagship event will be the first Club of Rome Summer Academy in Florence, Italy.

The Academy

The 2017 Club of Rome Summer Academy is about new economic thinking. Mainstream economics is based on false premises, such as the idea that GDP growth always improves human well-being, a finite Earth poses no limit, and financial capital is the primary economic constraint. In the business world, short-term profit maximization, shareholder interests and efficiency gains remain key objectives. These wrong-headed ideas explain almost all of the failures of the current economic system.

The plan

The Club of Rome's Summer Academy offers in-depth, cutting-edge insights to mobilise students and academics, young professionals, aspiring entrepreneurs, young journalists, artists and activists. By bringing them together with some of the world's leading social and systems thinkers we want to inspire economic, ecological, and political movements towards action.

⁷⁸http://www.feps-europe.eu/en/news/967_call-for-new-members-of-the-feps-young-academics-network

We want to inspire, engage and equip a new generation of change-makers with the knowledge and tools to overcome today's barriers to change.

We are looking for:

- students (BA, MA, PhDs) who are critical of economics and business studies
- young professionals, especially from NGOs and associations working in related fields
- critical young academics and researchers from universities and think-tanks
- young journalists covering economic and environmental topics
- artists and activists with a deep interest in environmental and social challenges and a desire to utilise their talents and energy to strive for change
- those who are young-at-heart and keen to make a positive difference

What we will do:

- help participants understand the inter-linkages of humanity's challenges and their common root causes
- facilitate knowledge- and skills-sharing between experts and participants
- provide hands-on workshops
- build a coalition of participants, NGOs and CoR members

Cost: € 300. Covers lectures, seminars and workshops, lunches, participation at social events and dinners.

Application

Attendance is limited to a maximum of 100 selected participants. Applicants should send:

- completed application form⁷⁹
- a current resume/CV
- a 2-3 minute video statement (mobile phone camera is sufficient) OR a letter of intent (max. one page), explaining why you want to participate in the academy, what you will bring , and how you would like to change the economic system.

⁷⁹http://www.clubofrome.org/wp-content/uploads/2017/05/SA_Form.pdf

Please send your applications to reclaim@cluboffrome.org⁸⁰. Videos that are too large to be sent by email can be transferred via wetransfer⁸¹ or similar. Videos will be treated confidentially and deleted when the selection process is over.

You might also want to include:

- a letter of recommendation
- work samples (visual, text, video)

Selection Process:

1. Initial deadline (11th June, midnight CET). Applications are screened as they arrive, so apply early!
2. Approved applicants will have 14 days to accept and pay the participation fee
3. Those on the waiting list will be offered a place as they become available

Participation Fund

A limited number of grants are available of up to €200 per participant. These are intended to cover up to 50 % of travel and accommodation costs (not the participation fee), and can be applied for if you can show that your travel and accommodation costs exceed €200. To be eligible you need to be a full-time undergraduate / Masters student (or similar) / an unpaid PhD student, or currently unemployed, or involved in a project with no paid income.

Exploring Economics Summer Academy (Erfurt, Aug 2017)

4-11 August 2017 — Neudietendorf, Germany

We want to think outside the box and widen our view for new and different perspectives on the economy. We want to bring together people with different backgrounds and perspectives and develop a more detailed understanding for the foundations and limitations of economics. Because our world is more complex, than what one theory alone could grasp. And this is why we organise this summer academy. All information on the summer academy can be found here⁸².

⁸⁰<mailto:reclaim@cluboffrome.org>

⁸¹<https://wetransfer.com/>

⁸²<https://www.exploring-economics.org/en/summer-academy/>

The summer academy offers nine parallel workshops⁸³. This means that you choose one workshop and topic and stay with this workshop for the entire week. We are well aware that most of our participants would be interested in more than one workshop. You'll have time to exchange with your fellow participants from other workshops during the week.

In the run-up to the summer academy, you will receive some material from us, which will help you to prepare for your workshop. Please make sure, you have enough time to work through this material and think about the topics beforehand.

The participation fee of the summer academy is 150 Euros. This includes accommodation and food for the entire week. Solidarity scheme: We are grateful if you are willing to contribute more as this would help us to support those who are not able to pay this amount. You only have a low Budget? Please contact us⁸⁴, to apply for financial support.

The following documents are required for your binding registration until June 11, 2017 (as PDF):

- Your complete sign-up form,
- your CV (max. two pages),
- your motivation letter (max. 400 words),
- and, if necessary, your application for financial support.

When assigning the participants to the workshops, we will consider your stated preferences as well as your personal background (e.g. your motivation letter). If we receive more applications for a workshop than we have seats, we will have to do a selection. We will attempt to have a wide range of experiences and perspectives in the different workshops.

Please send all documents to summeracademy@exploringeconomics.org⁸⁵ !

Generally speaking, there is no application process. If, however, the number of applicants exceeds the number of beds we have, we'll first try to book more beds and then select the participants based on the documents you send us. As we aim for a diverse group of students, activists, and citizens, we may value higher the motivation and effort you show than your achievements so far.

Early-bird scheme: We will select 30 participants among those that registered until

⁸³<https://www.exploring-economics.org/en/summer-academy/workshops/>

⁸⁴<http://summeracademy@exploringeconomics.org>

⁸⁵<http://summeracademy@exploringeconomics.org>

May 31, 2017. The remaining 60 participants will be informed after the deadline on June 11, 2017. It will take us roughly one week to read the registrations and assign the workshops. Hence, please wait for our confirmation.

Workshop on "Rethinking Economics in a Post-Truth World" (London, July 2017)

1 July, 2017 — Goldsmiths, University of London, London, UK

The rise of populism and 'post-truth' politics is a rejection of a narrow, technocratic vision of economics. The distance between technical economic expertise and the democratic public sphere is a failing of economics. How can alternative perspectives on economic life contribute to more participatory and inclusive economic debates? What might rival disciplines contribute here?

The students of Goldsmiths Rethinking Economics Society and PERC, bring together a series of trans-disciplinary lectures and workshops based around demystifying economics. The day will consist of lectures, workshops and film screenings, with themes ranging from anthropological perspectives on the economy, to platform cooperatives, environmental policy, and decolonising economics. The talks and interactive workshops aim to inspire a broader definition of economics, and through a pluralist and multi-disciplinary lens, confront the prevailing power of economics, and its role in contemporary political debates.

Speakers include:

- Brett Scott, Campaigner and author of 'The Heretic's Guide to Global Finance: Hacking the Future of Money'
- Joe Earle, Co-author of The Econocracy

Position #3¹⁰⁰

Oregon Center for Public Policy, US

Job Title: Executive Director

The Oregon Center for Public Policy (OCPP or the Center), the leading public policy research institute in Oregon, seeks an Executive Director with a passion for advancing progressive state fiscal and economic policies that benefit all Oregonians. The Executive Director will oversee the Center's work providing high quality research, analysis and policy proposals; will maintain and build supportive coalitions to advance those proposals; will communicate the analysis and proposals to the legislature, the state government, political influencers, and at times the general public; and will raise funds to achieve the mission.

Oregon Center for Public Policy

OCPP is an independent, nonpartisan, nonprofit organization committed to improving Oregon's public policies, budgets and tax structures to better the economic and social conditions of all Oregonians, with special attention to low- and moderate-income families and to under-represented communities. The Center has a commitment to advancing diversity, equity and inclusion both in its policy work and organizationally.

OCPP works to increase both public and governmental understanding of issues related to the adequacy and equitability of Oregon's tax system and to the stability and adequacy of state and local public services. The Center publishes analyses of the state's budget and tax system, papers on "The State of Working Oregon", and numerous reports, fact-sheets, issue briefs and blog posts on the variety of subjects within OCPP's domain, such as income inequality, hunger, poverty and wage theft. In addition, OCPP maintains an active program of briefings for donors and others and other public education activities. OCPP is part of two consortia—the State Priorities Partnership, coordinated by the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, and the Economic Analysis and Research Network (EARN), coordinated by the Economic Policy Institute.

Although based in Portland, Oregon, some travel will be required throughout the state, especially but not limited to the state capitol in Salem, Oregon, and to occasional national meetings.

Responsibilities

The Executive Director is responsible for overall leadership of the organization, including the coordination of its tax, budget, and policy analysis, and communications work. The Executive Director oversees a staff currently consisting of five other people, is a major spokesperson for the organization, leads fund development effort and works with the Board of Directors. The Executive Director is accountable to the Board.

Specific responsibilities include:

- In conjunction with the OCPP Board, implementing and updating the organization's strategic vision for the future of OCPP as an organization and as a catalyst for policy change.
- Playing a visible and connected role as a leader in Oregon fiscal policy, including representing OCPP as a credible voice telling the story of the charts and facts before policymakers, stakeholders, the public, and the news media, as well as seeking out, establishing, and maintaining strong collaborations with other allied stakeholder organizations around the state.
- Directing the research activities of and reports by OCPP, such as analyzing state budget and revenue proposals and developing policy options and recommendations that advance progressive reform.
- Directing the work of OCPP staff and contractors, including inspiring, leading and empowering staff as strong, independent researchers functioning as an effective team.
- Overseeing all communications activities of OCPP, working with in-house communications staff or consultants as appropriate, to convey messages clearly and in a style aligned to each targeted audience type.

- Overseeing the fiscal health of the organization, including actively leading key revenue-raising and fund development activities (about 40% of the director's time), including but not limited to grant-writing and maintaining relationships with funders, with an emphasis on major donors, in accord with an overall fund development plan implemented with the development coordinator.
- Closely working with the board, fostering board development, and maintaining an appropriate level of communication about key issues and decisions.
- Representing OCPP in the two national consortia.

Qualifications

- Experience: Significant experience in public policy analysis; demonstrated capacity to work with a broad range of policymakers, advocates, members of the news media, and grass roots groups; and the ability to think strategically and collaboratively about opportunities to influence public policy. Knowledge of the state legislative and budget process in Oregon or in another state is desirable. Demonstrated experience fundraising for or managing a small nonprofit or similar organization required.
- Education: Preferably an advanced degree in a relevant field such as in economics, public policy, law, or business administration. Graduate degree preferred.
- Skills: Excellent written and oral communication skills, including the ability to communicate complex or technical information clearly to a range of audiences in writing, through public speaking, and to the media. Strong tax policy and budget analysis skills and deep understanding of fiscal issues is preferred.
- Qualities: Commitment to social and economic justice; strategic thinker with strong leadership skills; creative and entrepreneurial spirit; commitment to excellence; understanding and valuing of equity, diversity and inclusion; strong administrative skills.

Applying

This is a full-time position with salary and benefits commensurate with skills and experience with an expected range of $80,000 - $95,000.

Resumes will be accepted until the position is filled, with initial review of resumes starting by mid-May, 2017. To apply, submit – preferably as a single PDF file – a resume and a cover letter specifically addressing your interest in and qualifications for this position by e-mail to EDsearch@ocpp.org¹⁰¹. For more information e-mail EDsearch@ocpp.org¹⁰²

SUNY Empire State College, US

Job Title: Associate Dean for Labor Programs/Executive Director of the Harry Van Arsdale Jr. Center for Labor Studies

SUNY Empire State College seeks an Associate Dean for Labor Programs / Executive Director of the Harry Van Arsdale Jr. Center for Labor Studies in Manhattan. Located at the Van Arsdale Center in New York City, this person will be responsible for leading the current Van Arsdale labor studies program as well as leading and developing labor-related undergraduate programs throughout Empire State College.

The Van Arsdale Center, one of the founding programs of Empire State College, serves approximately 1,700 students through partnerships with various trade unions in New York City. Its labor-centered, liberal arts program was inspired by Harry Van Arsdale Jr. of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 3, and a major twentieth century labor leader, who promoted ongoing education for all union workers.

In concert with Academic Affairs leadership and the Vice President for Enrollment Management (VPEM), the Associate Dean/ Executive Director expands student success through the academic quality of the labor studies program, innovation in teaching, mentoring and learning, robust student and academic services addressing the needs of our working students, and outstanding faculty and staff. The Associate Dean/Executive Director will strengthen and grow partnerships with labor organizations across New York State and the U.S. and assess the potential for international partnerships.

The Associate Dean/Executive Director reports to, and works closely with, the Dean of Undergraduate Studies, and joins a collaborative peer group of Associate Deans supervising faculty in other broad disciplinary areas; and works closely and collaboratively with academic and enrollment management leadership throughout the college.

Responsibilities include supervision of faculty and staff; including recruitment, hiring and evaluation of full-time, part-time, and adjunct faculty and staff. This leadership position is responsible for faculty development related to mentoring, teaching, scholarship, as well as college and community service and continued growth. The successful candidate will promote a dynamic and collaborative environment supporting faculty and staff efforts college-wide in development of labor related learning opportunities across multiple teaching modalities, development of new degree programs in the field, assessment of learning outcomes and enhanced student support and enrollment services.

The Department is home to a vibrant community of scholars from all over the world, comprising nearly 40 full-time faculty and 16 PhD students. About 1/3 of the faculty members is non-Dutch and more than 80% of the PhD students come from outside the Netherlands. The GEM department engages in cutting-edge research in International Economics, International Business, and International Management.

GEM focuses on applied as well as fundamental research questions. The research expertise of faculty members covers a variety of interests and backgrounds, and embraces a range of research approaches and methods with a keen focus on quality in research and teaching. Their work has appeared in numerous top-tier general and domain-specific journals in recent years.

The Department is responsible for key courses in two BA programmes: the bachelor programme in International Business and the International Economics & Business track in the Economics & Business Economics bachelor programme. The Department is directly responsible for two MSc programmes: 'International Business & Management' and ‘International Economics & Business’, with two tracks: ‘Globalization, Growth and Development’ and ‘International Capital and Globalization’. In addition, the Department participates in the research master programme, a challenging 2-year master programme set up for students intending to pursue a PhD. The Department also contributes to the PhD training programme of the research school SOM.

Job description

Following a period of growth and continuing success, the department wishes to further strengthen its position. The Assistant Professor contributes to the research, teaching and management of the department. We are looking for candidates with significant research potential in International Economics, International Monetary Economics or Growth and Development. The successful candidate will contribute to the Department’s teaching needs across the BA and MSc programmes, as well as the research master programme. The successful candidate will be asked to develop and teach courses close to his or her field of research.

Qualifications

We are looking for candidates who meet the following requirements:

- a PhD degree in economics or a related discipline
- a publication record demonstrating the candidate’s ability (or potential) to publish in international academic publications, preferably in top tier peer-reviewed journals
- a good “track record” in terms of teaching, including proven interest and ability in developing courses and teaching at the undergraduate and graduate levels, and in mentoring students
- a relevant international network
- a team player with good communication skills
- the potential to generate external funding for research projects.

The Tenure Track system is a career path which, followed successfully, will lead to a full professorship. Tenure track positions at the Faculty of Economics and Business are temporary positions subject to a tenure decision after a period of six years. Formal tenure track requirements include criteria with respect to research prominence, teaching and external funds raising activities. During the tenure track period, 50% of the position is reserved for research and 50% is devoted to teaching activities.

We refer the applicants to the criteria for the Tenure Track system (for a complete description see <http://www.rug.nl/fab/work-with-us/job-opprtunities>).

Conditions of employment

The University of Groningen offers a salary depending on qualifications and work experience. For candidates at the Assistant Professor level, the salary ranges from a minimum of € 3,427 gross per month to a maximum of € 5,330 gross per month (salary scales 11 and 12 for Assistant Professor level 2 and 1 of the Collective Labor Agreement for Dutch Universities) for a full-time position, excluding 8% holiday allowance and 8.3% end-of-year bonus and participation in a pension scheme for employees. Favorable tax agreements may apply to non-Dutch applicants. The University is an equal opportunities employer. Because women are still underrepresented in a number of fields, they are particularly encouraged to apply.

The successful candidate will be appointed for a period of six years, on the condition of a positive mid-term evaluation in the third year of employment. On the basis of a positive final evaluation of the Tenure Track criteria in the sixth year of employment, you will be granted tenure to Associate Professor.

You may apply for this position until 31 May / before 1 June 2017 Dutch local time by means of the application form¹⁰⁷.

Are you an ambitious researcher looking for your next challenge? Do you have a background in Applied Economics with an interest in Eco-innovations, Ecological, Agricultural or Environmental applications? Do you want to further your career in one of the UK's leading research intensive Universities?

We are looking for a Postdoctoral Researcher to study the adoption of eco-innovations such as Integrated Pest Management (IPM), Environmental Management Systems (e.g. ISO14001) and ecolabels and their implications for crop value, farm productivity, and export income. You will also investigate how the distribution of these values may be affected by farm ownership and other social structures.

You will work in a multidisciplinary team with economists and ecologists, exploring these issues as they affect orchard crops in the Cape region of South Africa. You will have a flair for conducting analytical and field research (i.e. survey and interviews), along with an interest in cutting edge social science linking eco-innovations to sustainability and economic development.

Playing a key role in collecting both quantitative and qualitative information, including the design and implementation of survey, and conducting interviews with farmers and farm labourers, you will also take a leading role in analysing the results using qualitative and quantitative methodologies.

University of Tyumen, Russia

School of Advanced Studies, University of Tyumen (Russia): 7 one-year postdoctoral positions (2017-2018)

The School of Advanced Studies is an innovative project to be launched in Fall, 2017. It will bring faculty from different countries together to work in interrelated multidisciplinary projects in social sciences and the humanities, including areas related to IT and the life sciences, as well as to teach in the SAS BA and MA programs. The SAS research agenda is organized around challenging problems of contemporary scholarship in order to produce results relevant for scholarly communities globally. Having completed the first round of hiring for faculty to work in three multidisciplinary teams starting August 2017, we now seek to fill seven postdoctoral fellowships to supplement the teams with necessary expertise.

The SAS postdoctoral fellowships will last one academic year and will involve research and teaching at the SAS BA program. Salary will be individually determined based on the candidate's qualifications. Fellows will also receive funds for research travel and medical insurance; relocation expenses will also be covered. All fellows will be eligible to apply for permanent faculty positions in the second round of the SAS faculty recruitment in Spring, 2018.

Please submit your application via e-mail to sas@utmn.ru¹¹⁴. Include a cover letter, explaining your potential contribution to one of the three projects outlined below, a full CV, and three letters of recommendation (letters should be submitted to the same e-mail address, either directly by your recommenders, or through an appropriate service such

Vienna University of Economics and Business, AT

Job Title: Postdoctoral researcher on Macroeconomics, Finance and the Environment

The Institute for Ecological Economics is currently inviting applications for a fulltime post-doc position. This employee position will be limited to a period of one year (additional funding opportunities might arise in the near future so to extend the contract to a longer period), starting on October 1st, 2017 (commencement date subject to change, we are flexible and will consider different starting dates should the successful candidate require it). Gross monthly salary, paid 14 times per year: Euro 3,626.60.

The Institute for Ecological Economics - with its 35 staff members - is a leading Institution for ecological economic research, teaching, learning, knowledge exchange, and community engagement. Research is grouped into five research areas: Climate Economics and Finance, Macroeconomics & Environment, Sustainable Work, Sustainable Resource Use, and Education for Sustainable Development. The successful candidate will contribute to the research conducted by the Climate Economics and Finance research group, coordinated by Dr. Emanuele Campiglio

Responsibilities:

The post holder will contribute to an ongoing international programme called ‘Mistra Financial Systems’ (MFS), funded by the Swedish Foundation for Strategic Environmental Research (Mistra). The aim of MFS – now in its second of four years - is to explore the links between the financial system and environmental sustainability. The Institute of Ecological Economics is leading one of the five MFS work packages, ‘Green Macro’. The objective of the Green Macro project is to develop economic modelling and analysis studying the dynamics links between macroeconomic, financial and environmental systems, with particular reference to the transition to a low-carbon economic system. The project will develop an empirical macroeconomic model calibrated to the Swedish economy, as well as a series of smaller models investigating specific research questions connected to stranded assets (physical and financial), climate mitigation policies (fiscal, macroprudential, monetary) and secular stagnation.

¹¹⁵<https://sas.utmn.ru/en/research/>

The post holder will also be invited to contribute to the writing of grant proposals that, when successful, might provide funding to extend the post-doc position to a period longer than one year. This position does not involve any teaching.

Your Profile:

Applicants should have:

- A doctoral degree or PhD in Economics, Finance, Environmental/Ecological Economics, Physics, Statistics, or related subjects (or be close to completion).
- A strong research focus, the capability of publishing in top-tier journals in economics and other social sciences.
- Strong analytical and modelling skills, knowledge of quantitative methods.
- An understanding of the linkages connecting macroeconomic dynamics, finance and environmental sustainability, and an interest in exploring them further through the development of high-quality academic and policy research.
- A good knowledge of climate finance issues (e.g. stranded assets), and possibly previous published research on the topic.
- An interest in policy analysis, design and implementation, especially in the environmental and finance field.
- Capability of disseminating the research findings to a broader audience (policy makers, media).
- Excellent written and communication skills in English (knowledge of German welcome but not required).
- The ability to work independently, as well as part of a team effort; and to respect tight deadlines.
- International and cross-cultural experience and understanding.

Given the nature of the project, knowledge and experience in the following fields will be considered as strong assets:

- Stock-flow consistent (SFC) modelling techniques.
- Econometric methods, with particular reference to time series analysis.

- Knowledge of R and linked programmes (Shiny, Markdown); system dynamics software (e.g Vensim); and/or GAMS.
- Input-output modelling (monetary and/or physical).
- Environmental accounting.
- Swedish economic/financial/environmental context.

Application materials can be submitted online until May 31st, 2017. Please apply here¹¹⁶. Reference Number: 3355.

Please submit: (i) a CV with the contact details of two referees; (ii) a letter of motivation discussing how you fit the role and its specifications; (iii) a sample of your work.

We expect to contact the shortlisted candidates immediately after the submission deadline, and hold the interviews in the week beginning on the 5th of June.

Debt as Power

By Tim Di Muzio and Richard H. Robbins — 2017, Bloomsbury Academic

In Debt as Power, Di Muzio and Robbins present a historical account of the modern origins of capitalist debt by looking at how commercial money is produced as debt in the late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries. They expertly demonstrate their key contention – that debt is a technology of power – and identify the ways in which the control, production, and distribution of money, as interest-bearing debt, are used to discipline populations. Their sharp analysis brings together histories of the development of the Bank of England and the establishment of permanent national debt with the intensification and expansion of debt, as a “technology of power”, under colonialism in a global context. The latter part of the book addresses the consequences of modern regimes of debt and puts forward proposals of what needs to be done, politically, to reverse the problems generated by debt-based economies. The final chapter presents a convincing case for the 99% to use the power of debt to challenge present inequalities and outlines a platform for action suggesting possible alternatives.

Crisis and Sustainability. The delusion of Free Markets

By Alessandro Vercelli — 2017, Palgrave Macmillan

This book argues that the neoliberal development trajectory pursued in recent decades is unsustainable, and posits that neither sound macroeconomics nor empirical data support the unqualified faith in free markets that inspired it. The first part suggests a broad critical perspective on key concepts such as freedom, free market, free trade, globalisation and financialisation, before going on to analyse the long and deep recent crisis as a result of the neoliberal policy strategy adopted since the early 1980s. The alternative narrative outlined in the book provides insights into the policy strategy required to achieve a sustainable development trajectory.

Economics of Development

By Anthony Thirlwall and Penélope Pacheco-López — 2017, Palgrave

The economic and social development of the world’s poorest countries, and the eradication of primary poverty, is one of the greatest challenges facing the world. This tenth edition of Tony Thirlwall’s classic textbook Economics of Development, now co-written with Penélope Pacheco-López, provides a clear, comprehensive and rigorous introduction to the theory of development economics and the experience of developing countries.

Knowledge in the Age of Digital Capitalism

By Mariano Zuckerfeld — University of Westminster Press

Knowledge in the Age of Digital Capitalism proposes a new critical theory concerning the functioning of capitalism and how we consider knowledge and information. This ambitious book systematically and lucidly introduces contemporary phenomena into the framework of cognitive materialism to address some of the great themes of the social sciences: knowledge, exploitation and social class in an account of capitalism's totality in the present day. Author Mariano Zuckerfeld reinvigorates materialist study of communications, presenting a typology of knowledge to explain the underlying material forms of information, intellectual property and cognitive work in contemporary societies. Using current examples the book also examines concerns such as free labour and the pivotal role of intellectual property.

The book offers nothing less than an introduction to the theory of cognitive materialism and an account of the entirety of the digital (or knowledge) capitalism of our time.

Omnia Sunt Communia: On the Commons and the Transformation to Postcapitalism

By Massimo De Angelis — 2017, University of Chicago Press

In this weaving of radical political economy, Omnia Sunt Communia sets out the steps to postcapitalism. By conceptualising the commons not just as common goods but as a set of social systems, Massimo De Angelis shows their pervasive presence in everyday life, mapping out a strategy for total social transformation. From the micro to the macro, De Angelis unveils the commons as fields of power relations – shared space, objects, subjects – that explode the limits of daily life under capitalism. He exposes attempts to co-opt the commons, through the use of code words such as 'participation' and 'governance', and reveals the potential for radical transformation rooted in the reproduction of our communities, of life, of work and of society as a whole.

The Selected Letters of John Kenneth Galbraith

Edited by Richard P. Holt — Cambridge University Press

The Selected Letters of John Kenneth Galbraith invites readers to join in conversations with presidents and first ladies, diplomats and schoolchildren, the McCarthy 'loyalty board', foreign heads of state and fellow economists, and a host of other correspondents. In his long and cosmopolitan life, Galbraith wrote thousands of letters, and Richard P. F. Holt has selected the most important of these from his archival research, now available in print for the first time. The letters provide an intimate account of the three main political goals to which Galbraith devoted his professional life: ending war, fighting poverty, and improving quality of life by achieving a balance between private and public goods in an affluent capitalist society. Showing his thoughtful insights and charming wit, this collection confirms Galbraith as a man of broad learning, superb literary skills, and deeply held progressive ideals.

Exploring Economics Initiative needs support

Dear Ladies and Gentlemen,

We are writing you because we believe that you share our concerns for pluralism in economics due to your research and teaching. We are the German-speaking student network Netzwerk Plurale Ökonomik which advocates for pluralism in economics. We form part of the International Student Initiative for Pluralism in Economics²⁵³.

The purpose of our email is to ask for your support for Exploring Economics' crowdfunding campaign. It begins on Monday, May 8, 2017, and runs until June 4, 2017.

Since the launch of Exploring Economics²⁵⁴ in December 2016, we have had great results! We received a lot of positive feedback and had more than 41,000 page views in the first month, as well as visitors from over 160 countries until now. Professors around the world have recommended Exploring Economics to their students and some have integrated Exploring Economics into their curriculum. In addition, Exploring Economics has organized an international writing workshop for students and young scholars, and has begun cooperating with two universities and one summer school.

Why does Exploring Economics need your help?

We have many plans for the coming months: we want to offer writing workshops for students and young scholars, integrate new materials and courses into the website and expand our partnerships with universities. We want to reach more students, lecturers and interested people in order to eventually, change the understanding of economics into one that accommodate people and the planet. In order to achieve this, we need financial support for the IT infrastructure, the writing workshops, the employees who maintain and update the website, and to coordinate volunteer work and partnerships.

What is Exploring Economics?

The online learning platform offers students of economics and non-economists the opportunity to discover and study a variety of economic theories, topics and methods free of charge. It is an alternative to neoclassical teaching at universities. The materials can be used in teaching and enable a creative analysis of economic issues such as inequality, financial crises, money and debt, as well as the environment and resources.
