This issue of the Heterodox Economics Newsletter can be understood as a large-scale test of the new technical infrastructure we have implemented over the last weeks. Specifically, we moved our mailing-lists to a new listserv hosted by the University of Duisburg-Essen⁴. This service is closer to the technical state-of-the-art, which, among other things, allowed for merging the seven different mailing-lists (for different geographical areas) implemented so far into one single list operating under the label "[HEN]".

The main aim of this transfer is not only to implement a technically more sophisticated solution, but also to create a more user-friendly environment, e.g. by offering a button for one-click unsubscriptions (which you, hopefully, won't need but should find at the end of this email). We would very much appreciate if you could inform us about any problems that might arise in the context of this transition - be it misaligned formatting, broken links or anything else that does not work as it did in past issues. Any notes on malfunctions or strange behavior should be sent to newsletter@heterodoxnews.com⁵, so we can try to fix any arising problems. Similarly, I tried to deactivate all standard notifications and info-mails that are by default sent out by the mailing operating system to keep the number of emails you receive to a minimum. Again, if you receive any notifications, please report this to newsletter@heterodoxnews.com⁶ so that we are in a position to implement relevant fixes and corrections to the new service in a timely manner.

Many thanks for your understanding and your support!

All the best,

Jakob

Call for Papers

1st Congress of the German Labour History Association on "On the Freedom of Labour in Capitalism" (Bochum, Feb. 2020)

6-9 February 2020 — Bochum, Germany

Labour History in the last two decades has been characterised by two currents: On the one hand, it was interested in the construction of work and working subjects in the context of (large-scale) business, the nation and the welfare-state in the 20th Century global north. The research focused on processes of scientisation and national framing, on institutional and discursive inclusion and exclusion, on modes of leadership, on the establishment of social security systems and labour markets or on the relationship between work and consumption. On the other hand, Global Labour History has inspired scholars to analyse the variety of work arrangements in capitalism. They have put emphasis on the significance and persistence of the division of labour and - in the largest sense - "unfree" labour on a global scale: Covering from slavery over indentured labour to present-day household labour of irregular migrants. At the same time, they have examined practices of resistance and social movements in the context of these various types of "free" and "unfree" labour, taking into consideration their entanglements as well as contradictions.

Both trends share an understanding of labour in capitalism as a highly complex form of producing goods and providing services that is marked by multiple dependencies. Whereas the latter has shown that capitalism has always been based on the exploitation of "unfree" labour, the former has emphasised the preconditions and historical specificities of "free wage labour" systems in industrialised world regions in past and present. In both cases, freedom constitutes a vanishing point: In the first case, it serves as a counter-model, delimitating the object of research; in the second case it figures as a (never reached) goal of the observed institutions and practices. Labour History however has rarely discussed this function explicitly.

Against this background, the first congress of the German Labour History Association intends to analyse "free wage labour" and its relation to capitalism from the following three perspectives: First, it asks for the role the concept of freedom plays in labour historiography: What notions of "free" work did historiography use with respect to different regions, historical periods and arrangements of production? What concepts of "unfree" forms of work did Labour History oppose to "free wage labour"? How did historiography analyse the interdependence of freedom and unfreedom in global capitalism?

Second, the conference aims at discussing the history of the freedom of labour empirically: What role did it play as a norm for the workers' movement and other social movements? How have semantics of freedom changed during the last two centuries? How did the history of knowledge of labour and the categorisation of labour relations refer to the concept of "free wage labour"? To what extent has recent labour historiography altered and extended our knowledge of "free" forms of work on a global scale? Among others, contributions covering the following areas are welcome:

- the history of labour contracts and contract breaking
- the emergence and negotiation of labour markets
- the history of reproductive work, of "free professions", of "free wage labour" as a frame in labour conflicts or of the relation between the freedom of work and inequality

They may follow perspectives of global, micro, social and/or cultural history.

Third, with respect to the future of Labour History we welcome contributions focussing the advantages and disadvantages of more firmly theorising the freedom of work. To what extent does it allow to unveil blind spots of previous research? Does it enable us to bring together the different subfields of Labour History more closely? We also encourage reflections on other concepts that may advance labour historiography. To what extent does it make sense to take an unspecific notion of "work" as a starting point and to study "free wage labour" as one of its varieties? What advantages or disadvantages do alternative concepts such as "livelihood" offer?

Please send your abstract (max. 500 words) and a short biography (max. 200 words) to Anna Strommenger⁷ and Jan Kellershohn⁸. 2019 Annual Conference of World Association of Political Economy (WAPE) on “Class, State and Nation in the Twenty-First Century” (Winnipeg, July 2019)

19-21 July 2019 — Winnipeg, Canada

You are cordially invited to submit paper/panel proposals to the forthcoming 14th Forum of World Association for Political Economy (WAPE), to be held on July 19-21, 2019 at the University of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Canada in conjunction with the Geopolitical Economy Research Group (GERG) at the University of Manitoba.

The theme of this year’s WAPE Forum is “Class, State and Nation in the Twenty-First Century” and the topics for papers and panels include:

1. Understanding 21st century capitalism
2. 21st Century Visions and models of socialism
3. Left and progressive movements in the 21st century, including Labour, Indigenous, anti-racist, peasants’, land-reform, anti-imperialist, women’s and environmental movements
4. Right, far right and fascist movements and rising authoritarianism
5. Nationalisms, progressive and reactionary
6. Imperialism and resistance in the 21st century
7. Multipolarity and changing South-South and North-South Relations and regional cooperation
8. Sanctions, trade wars and international struggles
9. Contemporary flashpoints: Political economy of international migration, Middle East, the political economy of war

Both individual papers and complete panels on the above theme and proposed topics are welcome. You are also welcome to propose other topics on the theme. The World Association for Political Economy (WAPE) is an international academic organization founded in 2006 by Marxian economists and related groups around the world. The mission of WAPE is to utilize modern Marxian economics to analyze and study the world economy, reveal its laws of development, and offer policies to promote economic and social progress on a national and global level. The previous thirteen WAPE forums were held in Shanghai (China), Shimane (Japan), Beijing (China), Paris (France), Suzhou (China), Amherst (USA), Mexico City (Mexico), Florianopolis (Brazil), Hanoi (Vietnam), Johannesburg (South Africa), Patiala (India), Moscow (Russia), and Berlin (Germany) during 2006-2018. Participants in past WAPE forums have come from over 50 countries in Asia, Africa, Europe, North America, Oceania, and South America. WAPE sponsors a quarterly peer-reviewed academic journal—World Review of Political Economy, and two academic awards—World Marxian Economics Award, and Distinguished Achievement Award of World Political Economy of The 21st Century.

The Geopolitical Economy Research Group (GERG) at the University of Manitoba will be an influential policy research institute, conducting high quality research and analysis dealing with nations and their relation to the world economy. It will critically analyze, and propose, policy alternatives for managing the interaction of national economies and states to promote human development and mutual benefit in today's multipolar world.

Please send a paper abstract of 500 words and your full curriculum vitae in English to contact@gergconference.ca⁹.

2019 Australia New Zealand Society of Ecological Economics (ANZSEE) Conference on "Ecological Economics: Solutions Now and In the Future" (Melbourne, Nov. 2019)

24-26 November 2019 — Melbourne, Australia

The urgency for ecological solutions continues to mount with delays in addressing significant local to global environmental and social problems of a changing climate. Appropriate approaches and techniques for re-balancing human–nature interaction are central to ecological economics and a viable future for humankind. This conference will debate both the future of ecological economics as a transdisciplinary area of studies and roles for ecological economics in our future.

Please send abstracts (250-word limit) and bios (150-word limit) to conference coordinator Anitra Nelson¹¹. Include a short title and up to four keywords for your contribution.

2019 Marx & Philosophy Society Annual Conference (London, June 2019)

15 June 2019 — London, UK

Papers are invited from graduate students for the 2019 annual conference of the Marx & Philosophy Society. The conference will be held on the 15th June 2019 at the Institute of Education in London. The topic of this year's conference is 'The Legacy of Georg Lukács'.

For those interested, please send an abstract of no more than 400 words to Jan Kandiyali¹³. Accepted papers should be planned to last for 20 minutes. Submissions dealing with any aspect of Lukács work and/or its legacy will be considered. The Society will cover travel expenses within the UK and an evening meal. Unfortunately, we cannot pay for accommodation or for travel expenses from outside the UK.

Keynote speakers: Michael J. Thompson, Konstantinos Kavoulakos and Agnes Heller

2019 marks the centenary anniversary of the short-lived Hungarian Soviet Republic, a period that found Georg Lukács both as an active participant and as developing the ideas which would culminate in the collection of essays /History and Class Consciousness/. It is a timely commemoration in which, at present and despite international objection, the Hungarian regime of Orbán has seemingly enacted a mission to erase Lukács from collective memory. From the removal of the Lukács sculpture from Saint Stephen's park in Budapest to, more alarmingly, the recent closure and removal of the Lukács Archives by the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, it seems the fate of Lukács and his legacy hangs in the balance.

7th Latin American Conference of the History of Economic Thought on "Promoting History of Economic Thought in Latin America: richness, limits and challenges" (Curitiba, Nov. 2019)

20-22 November 2019 — Curitiba, Brazil

¹³<mailto:j.kandiyali@gmail.com>

The 7th Latin American Conference of the History of Economic Thought organized by the Latin American Society for the History of Economic Thought, Asociación Latinoamericana de Historia del Pensamiento Económico (ALAHPE) will occur on November 20, 21, and 22 (Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday), 2019, at the Federal University of Paraná – Universidade Federal do Paraná (UFPR) – Curitiba, Brazil.

Jeremy Adelman will give the Subercaseaux Lecture and Mauro Boianovsky and Malcolm Rutherford will be keynote speakers.

Proposals for papers (500 words) and sessions (1000 words) will be received from March 30 to June 30.

Call for book proposals: "Quantified Societies & Selves"

The recent surge of research on metrics, quantification, algorithmic calculation and data reflects a social and historical moment where machines and humans appear on the brink of convergence and/or battle. Vast investment in machinic interventions is encouraged by a widespread belief that machines are superior in calculation, measure and quantification to humans. Metrics have begun to infiltrate everyday life, institutions, governance structures, the workplace, and healthcare; labour, bodies and increasingly, leisure must be made readable and trackable in terms of 'outcomes' and 'outputs'.

In the face of increasing automation of both unskilled and skilled work, the capacity of artificial intelligence to outthink humans is causing significant concerns. High profile developments such as the Go chess victory and the development of facial recognition and profiling technologies elicit breathless wonder at the capabilities of algorithms and big data, combined with real anxiety at the dystopian potential of a machine-run world.

Books in the Quantified Societies and Selves series will examine the power relations that emerge in this context, where numeration is upheld as superior to human reasoning; where the search for objective 'truth' is increasingly glamorised. Books will explore not only the future possibilities indicated by quantification research but the developing regulation of algorithmic governance, covering institutional decision-making in the fields of (for example) healthcare, education, security, the workplace and justice.

Multidisciplinary in scope, Quantified Societies and Selves is an international series that welcomes contributions from a broad range of academic fields. Books will typically be between 80,000 - 120,000 words in length and will include both authored and edited works. Our books will be written for academic audiences and are peer-reviewed, although given the nature of the series we encourage authors to consider how their work can be made accessible to non-specialist readers.

Conference of the International Network for Economic Method (Helsinki, Aug. 2019)

19-21 August 2019 — Helsinki, Finland

The International Network for Economic Method²¹ , in collaboration with TINT – Centre for Philosophy of Social Science²² , University of Helsinki, is delighted to announce that the 14 biannual conference will take place in Helsinki, 19-21 August, 2019. We welcome proposals for contributed papers and symposia in all areas of the philosophy and methodology of economics. We particularly encourage submissions that combine philosophy and methodology of economics with other perspectives on studying economics offered, for instance, by history and sociology of economics, ethics, political philosophy, as well as by feminist approaches and social ontology.

Doctoral Day at the 2019 AFEP-IIPPE Congress (Lille, July 2019)

2 July 2019 — Lille, France

Following its previous editions, the 2019 AFEP Congress³⁰ will begin with a doctoral day, organized by and dedicated to the PhD students. The originality of this edition is that it will be shared with our colleagues of the International Initiative for the Promotion of Political Economy (IIPPE), co-organizer of the 2019 Congress.

Schedule presentation

The day will be divided into two periods: while each organization will organize its own session in the morning, the afternoon will be organized around common sessions.

After greeting the participants, the morning will be dedicated to two parallel sessions, respecting each organization own traditions. There will be: (i) a session entitled “Institutional issues and challenges of PhD research”, (in French), organized by the AFEP, and (ii) a “Training Session”, (in English), organized by the IIPPE. Both sessions are open to all participants, regardless of their affiliation.

³⁰<http://www.heterodoxnews.com/n/htn237.html#art-17592186078891>

The afternoon will be divided into two periods. The first part of the afternoon will be dedicated to parallel workshops, both in French & English, open to all participants regardless of their affiliation. The aim is for participants to discuss, in small groups with two or three researchers (AFEP and/or IIPPE), on questions and difficulties encountered while researching on their thesis subject. Two formats will successively be held: 1) thematic workshops, which allows discussing different ways to get into a common research theme, different theoretical frameworks that can be used; 2) methodological workshops, which allows discussing issues of common methods to approach a variety of research objects.

The end of the afternoon will close the day by an exchange (together with IIPPE PhD students) about economic imperialism and pluralism in social sciences.

Presentations during the workshops

As aforementioned we offer to organize workshops with a small number of participants during the afternoon, both around common themes and around common methodologies. Two or three researchers will head each workshop.

This call for presentation is not only addressed to PhD students in political economy but also extend to all PhD students in social sciences (sociology, history, geography. . .) willing to engage a discussion with political economy approaches within their PhD research.

We let each participant choose in which language (French or English) they want to use for their presentation.

We know that PhD students from different countries and with different research field will be there and we want to create consistent workshops. Therefore, we suggest that you return two documents according to the following instructions and calendar:

1. A short presentation: a 1-page document³¹ explaining who you are, what your thesis is about in a summary. This presentation has to be forwarded by March the 15th 2019 (new deadline).
2. A complimentary presentation: a 4-page detailed version of the thesis in order to ease further discussions with the participants of your groups during the workshops. This longer presentation has to be sent by early June 2019

Aforementioned documents have to be send by email³², as PDF files, with file titles and email subject being as follows: NAME-proposition-doctorialesAFEP2019 for the first document and NAME-complement-doctorialesAFEP2019 for the second.

International Conference on "The Future With Marx" (Moscow, May 2019)

24-25 May 2019 — Moscow, Russia

Jacques Derrida has famously stated that "there will be no future without Marx, without the memory and inheritance of Marx". The multiplicity of academic and popular events in the year of Marx's anniversary testifies to the truth of these words. Two hundred years after his birth, the thought of Karl Marx remains a rousing way to look at the future.

The fall of the Soviet project has effectively eliminated all major social alternatives from the current world order and impoverished the global political imagination. It is no accident that the two most recent decades have generated no utopias and in numerous polities witnessed the hegemony of nostalgic conservative projects of returning into an imagined past to become "great again." However, the dissatisfaction with the disappearance of the meaningful future is constantly growing, and Marx has now been rediscovered as a visionary who knew to see seeds of the future in the present. His books are read again globally as people are desperately searching for answers to the challenges of the XXI century: inequality, fundamentalism, imperial wars, and crisis of democracy.

One year after Marx's anniversary, we gather in Moscow to inquire about the future with Marx. How can Marxian thought help us imagine a better future? What is the hope that it provides today? How does Marxist imagination account for the Soviet experience and how can it operate within the societies that emerged from the Soviet past? What is the Marxist view of history today and what are the social classes capable of developing it? What do we learn from Marx after the end of classical Marxism?

Papers

The call for papers aims at organizing two panels within the conference, to invite the researchers in all areas related to Marx' political and philosophical legacies. Proposals from early career researchers are particularly encouraged. Please submit abstracts of not more than 250 words and two-page academic CV to marx@universitas.ru³³. The selected participants will need to apply for travel funding from their home institutions or elsewhere. The conference will issue formal invitations for the visa application process, if needed.

Papers should focus on these two topics:

Marxism without taboos - confronting oppressions, International Colloquium (Niterói - RJ, Aug. 2019)

26-30 August 2019 — Niterói - RJ, Brazil

In this second decade of the 21st century, we witness the growth of political and social movements guided by ultraconservative perspectives, with strong sexist, racist, LGBT-phobic, and xenophobic speech and violence. On the other hand, the emergence of powerful social movements in defense of the rights of such groups highlights the importance of their agenda to critical thinking and for contemporary political projects. Would Marx and the Marxist traditions have significant contributions to the discussion of oppression? The International Colloquium Marx and Marxism 2019 – Marxism without taboos: confronting oppressions – invites participants to reflect on questions of theoretical and/or historical order relative to these themes, from different angles but unified by the Marxist theoretical framework.

Call for papers

The Colloquium will accept two different types of submission, both requiring the application of full papers:(a) Round tables on the themes defined by the thematic axes of the event, formed by 3 or 4 papers, and chaired by one of the participants;(b) Single papers on the themes defined by the thematic axes of the event.The Organizing Committee will preferentially select round table propositions, reserving its freedom to change their composition if necessary.

Wittgenstein Centre Conference 2019 "Demographic Aspects of Human Wellbeing" (Vienna, Nov. 2019)

11-12 November 2019 — Vienna, Austria

The scientific literature addressing human wellbeing is rapidly expanding in economics, psychology, sociology, and the health sciences, and is also becoming increasingly important in interdisciplinary studies of sustainable development. A large number of wellbeing indicators have been proposed in order to quantitatively capture and monitor progress towards better human wellbeing and study its determinants. Many of these indicators have demographic components such as life expectancy or studies explicitly address age- and gender-specific differentials in economic standing, life satisfaction, health/disability or consider other demographic differentials.

Researchers at the Wittgenstein Centre are currently involved in several studies around economic and health aspects of human wellbeing and an ERC Advanced Grant on "The demography of sustainable human wellbeing". In this context and with partial funding from this grant the conference wants to bring together researchers from around the world working on different aspects of human wellbeing with a specifically demo- graphic perspective. The aim is to put demography more prominently on the table as a discipline that has much to contribute to the scientific study of human wellbeing, both in terms of its measurement and the analysis of its determinants. There will be invited speakers as well as an open call for papers and posters. Travel funding will be available for a limited number of selected speakers.

Examples of topics include:

- Life expectancy based indicators of wellbeing
- Wellbeing over the life course and over time
- Applying demographic metabolism model to forecast wellbeing along cohort lines
- Demographic differentials/inequalities in wellbeing
- What matters more for wellbeing: age or gender, education or income?
- Wellbeing and intergenerational support
- Feed-backs from environmental change to human wellbeing

Conference on "Still Rethinking? The Need for Pluralism in Economics" (London, Mar. 2019)

30-31 March 2019 — London, UK

⁴¹<https://de.xing-events.com/fmmsummer2019.html>

⁴²<https://curaumss.wordpress.com/>

After the 2008 financial crisis, the call for different approaches and methodologies in Economics became irrefutable. But what has really changed in the way Economics is researched, taught and practiced? Is there progress towards a more pluralist agenda or are we facing a backlash from the established institutions? Should Economics be left entirely to economists?

At Still Rethinking, we want to look at the current state of Economics and the economy. The need for Pluralism in Economics and for interdisciplinary approaches seems to be more urgent than ever. Today, only a handful of universities offer pluralist programmes. Moreover, the ignorance of insights from other social sciences is concerning.

Our main aim is to look at challenges concerning economic theory, social relations, climate change, gender questions, inequalities, housing and Brexit, among other socially relevant and urgent issues of our time. What has Economics to offer with regard to these challenges? Still Rethinking wants to provide a platform for discussing Pluralism in Economics and also aims to introduce undergraduate students and the general public to Pluralism.

There will be five streams:

- The Need for Pluralism
- Environmental Issues
- Gender and Feminism
- Inequality
- Global Capitalism and Development

Who are the organisers?

Still Rethinking is being co-organised by Rethinking Economics Greenwich (REG) and the Institute of Political Economy, Governance, Finance and Accountability (PEGFA) at the University of Greenwich. approval. We are interested in candidates whose work complements the department's existing pluralistic orientation.

A highly selective liberal arts college, Bard is committed to innovative teaching and interdisciplinary curricular programs. The Bard campus is the home of the Levy Economics Institute and its innovative M.S. program in Economic Theory and Policy. The Levy Institute, which hosts conferences and seminars and publishes research on matters of economic policy, offers opportunities to faculty and students not typically available at an undergraduate college.

Qualifications

The successful candidate will teach finance courses (Accounting, Foundations of Finance and Investment, and Corporate Finance), other core economics courses, as well as electives in his or her specialty.

Candidates should be broadly trained, with active research agenda, and show promise of significant contributions to the discipline. Research areas of particular interest include but are not limited to financialization, liberalization, shadow banking, financial regulation, and globalization of finance.

Excellence in teaching at the undergraduate level in the liberal arts tradition and integration of teaching and research are of primary importance. Familiarity with Bloomberg terminal and data is desired.

Application Instructions

To apply, please submit a cover letter, curriculum vitae, three letters of recommendation, examples of published research and working papers, a statement of research interests, a statement of teaching philosophy and evidence of teaching excellence through Interfolio.com.

International Labour Organization, Switzerland

Job title: Labour Economist

The position is located in the Inclusive Labour Markets, Labour Relations and Working Conditions Branch (INWORK) of the Conditions of Work and Equality Department (WORKQUALITY). INWORK aims to improve the working conditions and protection of workers through effective policies while contributing to achieving an inclusive labour market which provides access to quality employment for all. Supporting the development of sound labour relations is the cornerstone of the strategy to realize such outcomes and to ensure a just share of the fruits of economic and social progress for all. The Branch undertakes multidimensional analysis of workers' protection, vulnerability at work and labour market institutions, including the impacts of the latter on labour markets and economic performance and on equality. In doing so, it develops and, upon request, offers integrated policy advice which is responsive to national needs, priorities and resources.

The incumbent will contribute to the Branch's research, analytical and policy work concerning the design of sound and inclusive labour market institutions. He/she will develop a better understanding of the interplay between institutions, especially those governing work contracts and labour market security, which have a bearing on workers' labour supply, working conditions, labour market performance, development of non-standard forms of employment and job quality. He/she will provide policy advice to ILO constituents

A Structuralist Theory of Economics

by Adolfo García de la Sienna — 2019, Routledge

Economists have long grappled with the problem of how economic theories relate to empirical evidence: how can abstract mathematized theories be used to produce empirical claims? How are such theories applied to economic phenomena? What does it mean to “test” economic theories? This book introduces, explains, and develops a structural philosophy of economics which addresses these questions and provides a unifying philosophical/logical basis for a general methodology of economics.

The book begins by introducing a rigorous view of the logical foundations and structure of scientific theories based upon the work of Alfred Tarski, Patrick Suppes, Karl Marx, and others. Using and combining their methods, the book then goes on to reconstruct important economic theories – including utility theory, game theory, Marxian economics, Sraffian economic theory, and econometrics – proving all the main theorems and discussing the key claims and the empirical applicability of each theory. Through these discussions, this book presents, in a systematic fashion, a general philosophy of economics grounded in the structuralist view.

Offering rigorous formulations of important economic theories, A Structuralist Theory of Economics will be invaluable to all readers interested in the logic, philosophy, and methodology of economics. It will also appeal particularly to those interested in economic theory.

Capitalism: Concept, Idea, Image - Aspects of Marx's Capital Today

edited by Peter Osborne, Éric Alliez and Eric-John Russell — 2019, CRMEP books

Drawn from a conference held to mark the 150th anniversary of the first volume of Karl Marx's Capital: A Critique of Political Economy, these essays from a range of internationally established contributors offer readers a snapshot of debates about the book's current relevance across a variety of fields and contexts. The volume approaches Marx's Capital as an exemplary text in the continuation of the tradition of post-Kantian European Philosophy through transdisciplinary practices of critique and concept construction. The essays are grouped into four sections: Value-Form, Ontology & Politics; Capitalism, Feminism and Social Reproduction; Freedom, Democracy and War; The Poetics of Capital/Capital. Each section is accompanied by an image from the 2008 film by Alexander Kluge, News From Ideological Antiquity: Marx - Eisenstein - Capital.

Eating Tomorrow: Agribusiness, Family Farmers, and the Battle for the Future of Food

Few challenges are more daunting than feeding a global population projected to reach 9.7 billion in 2050—at a time when climate change is making it increasingly difficult to successfully grow crops. In response, corporate and philanthropic leaders have called for major investments in industrial agriculture, including genetically modified seed technologies. Reporting from Africa, Mexico, India, and the United States, Timothy A. Wise’s Eating Tomorrow discovers how in country after country agribusiness and its well-heeled philanthropic promoters have hijacked food policies to feed corporate interests.

Most of the world, Wise reveals, is fed by hundreds of millions of small-scale farmers, people with few resources and simple tools but a keen understanding of what to grow and how. These same farmers—who already grow more than 70 percent of the food eaten in developing countries—can show the way forward as the world warms and population increases. Wise takes readers to remote villages to see how farmers are rebuilding soils with ecologically sound practices and nourishing a diversity of native crops without chemicals or imported seeds. They are growing more and healthier food; in the process, they are not just victims in the climate drama but protagonists who have much to teach us all.

Foundations of Real World Economics: What Every Economics Student Needs to Know 2nd Edition

by John Komlos — 2019, Routledge

The 2008 financial crisis, the rise of Trumpism and the other populist movements which have followed in their wake have grown out of the frustrations of those hurt by the economic policies advocated by conventional economists for generations. Despite this, textbooks continue to praise conventional policies such as deregulation and hyperglobalization.

This textbook demonstrates how misleading it can be to apply oversimplified models of perfect competition to the real world. The math works well on college blackboards but not so well on the Main Streets of America. This volume explores the realities of oligopolies, the real impact of the minimum wage, the double-edged sword of free trade, and other ways in which powerful institutions cause distortions in the mainstream models. Bringing together the work of key scholars, such as Kahneman, Minsky, and Schumpeter, this book demonstrates how we should take into account the inefficiencies that arise due to asymmetric information, mental biases, unequal distribution of wealth and power, and the manipulation of demand. This textbook offers students a valuable introductory text with insights into the workings of real markets not just imaginary ones formulated by blackboard economists.

A must-have for students studying the principles of economics as well as micro- and macroeconomics, this textbook redresses the existing imbalance in economic teaching. Instead of clinging to an ideology that only enriched the 1%, Komlos sketches the outline of a capitalism with a human face, an economy in which people live contented lives with dignity instead of focusing on GNP.

Macroeconomics in Context 3rd Edition

by Neva Goodwin, Jonathan M. Harris, Julie A. Nelson, Pratistha Joshi Rajkarnikar, Brian Roach and Mariano Torras — 2019, Routledge

Macroeconomics in Context lays out the principles of macroeconomics in a manner that is thorough, up to date, and relevant to students. Like its counterpart, Microeconomics in Context, the book is uniquely attuned to economic realities. The "in Context" books offer engaging coverage of current topics including financial crises, rising inequality, debt and deficits, and environmental sustainability, while also providing a clear and accessible exploration of economic theory and applications.

The third edition features:

- Clear explanations of basic economic concepts alongside more in-depth analysis of macroeconomics models and economic activity
- Expanded coverage of topics including, inequality, financialization and debt issues, the changing nature of jobs, and sustainable development
- Thoroughly updated figures and data
- A full complement of online instructor and student support materials such as additional tables and data, PowerPoint slides and a study guide

This engaging textbook offers students an excellent guide to macroeconomics. The latest addition to the "In Context" series, it combines real-world relevance with a thorough grounding in multiple economic paradigms.

Market Liberalism and Economic Patriotism in the Capitalist World-System

edited by Tamás Gerócs and Miklós Szanyi — 2019, Palgrave Macmillan

This volume broadens the scope of 'comparative capitalism' within the Varieties of Capitalism (VoC) tradition. It endorses the employment of multiple perspectives, including critical political economy, institutionalist systems of capitalism, structuralist-dependency scholarship and world-systems theory. The contributors deal with the theory of economic patriotism in a conceptual framework, as well as case studies regarding rent-seeking behaviour, the patronage state in Hungary and Poland, the conflict between national regulation and the European legal framework and the perspective of wage relations in the European institutional framework. The book concludes with the legacy of developmentalism and dirigisme in a core-periphery relation, based on the French state and a range of non-European cases including Iran, Brazil and Egypt.

Marx's Theory of the Genesis of Money: How, Why, and Through What Is a Commodity Money?

by Samezō Kuruma — 2019, Brill

In this volume, Marx's Theory of the Genesis of Money. How, Why, and Through What is a Commodity Money?, the first of the author's works to be translated into English, Samezō Kuruma examines the different angles from which Marx analyses the commodity and money in the first two chapters of Capital, Volume I. Kuruma carefully explains each of the theoretical questions raised by Marx, particularly the theory of the value-form, which unravels the mystery surrounding money. The theoretical knowledge Marx gains from his analysis of the commodity is the linchpin of Capital, but he recognises that this presents the reader with the 'greatest difficulty' – just as 'beginnings are always difficult in all sciences'. Kuruma helps to ease this difficulty by making the reader clearly aware of how and why Marx poses his theoretical questions.

This work includes an English translation of the full text of Kuruma's book, Kachikeitai-ron to kōkankate-ron (Theory of the Value Form and Theory of the Exchange Process)

(Iwanami Shoten, 1957) and a slightly abridged version of Part I of Kahei-ron (Theory of Money) (Otsuki Shoten, 1979). It is a substantially revised edition of the English translation under the same title, Marx's Theory of the Genesis of Money, that was self-published by the translator (Outskirts Press, 2008).

Money and Government

by Robert Skidelsky — 2018, Allen Lane

The dominant view in economics is that money and government should play only a minor role in economic life. Money, it is claimed, is nothing more than a medium of exchange; and economic outcomes are best left to the 'invisible hand' of the market. The view taken in this important new book is that the omnipresence of uncertainty make money and government essential features of any market economy. One reason we need money is because we don't know what the future will bring. Government - good government - makes the future more predictable and therefore reduces this kind of demand for money.

After Adam Smith orthodoxy persistently espoused non-intervention, but the Great Depression of 1929-32 stopped the artificers of orthodox economics in their tracks. A precarious balance of forces between government, employers, and trade unions enabled Keynesian economics to emerge as the new policy paradigm of the Western world. However, the stagflation of the 1970s led to the rejection of Keynesian policy and a return to small-state neoclassical orthodoxy. Thirty years later, the 2008 global financial crash was severe enough to have shaken the re-vamped classical orthodoxy, but, curiously, this did not happen. Once the crisis had been overcome - by Keynesian measures taken in desperation - the pre-crash orthodoxy was reinstated, undermined but unbowed. Since 2008, no new 'big idea' has emerged, and orthodoxy has maintained its sway, enacting punishing austerity agendas that leave us with a still-anaemic global economy.

This book aims to familiarise the reader with essential elements of Keynes's 'big idea'. By showing that much of economic orthodoxy is far from being the hard science it claims to be, it aims to embolden the next generation of economists to break free from their conceptual prisons and afford money and government the starring roles in the economic drama that they deserve.

Rethinking The Theory of Money, Credit, and Macroeconomics: A New Statement for the 21st Century

by John Smithin — 2018, Lexington

This book provides a comprehensive re-working of the basic principles of monetary macroeconomics in an alternative monetary model (AMM) of economic growth, the business cycle, inflation and income distribution. These principles differ considerably from those advanced in the standard macroeconomics literature and in textbooks. However, the latter have been demonstrably unsuccessful in the promotion of usable macroeconomic policy advice for the past several years, actually decades. A different approach is needed. In particular, the new approach takes seriously the vital role of credit creation and endogenous money in capitalism. It does not imagine that all of the difficult questions of economic policy-making may be resolved within a paradigm that conceptualizes economic activity as merely a question of barter exchange. The result is a blueprint for a set of growth-friendly macroeconomic policies which will promote full employment, financial stability and higher real wages – essentially for the benefit of the long-suffering middle and working classes rather for the chamber of commerce and financial interests.

World in Crisis: A Global Analysis of Marx's Law of Profitability

edited by Guglielmo Carchedi and Michael Roberts — 2019, Haymarket Books

Most mainstream economists view capitalism's periodic breakdowns as nothing more than temporary aberrations from an otherwise unbroken path toward prosperity. For Marxists, this fundamental flaw has long been acknowledged as a central feature of the free-market system. This groundbreaking volume brings together Marxist scholars from around the world to offer an empirically grounded defense of Marx's law of profitability and its central role in explaining capitalist crises.

2 year Master programme in Economic Policies in the age of Globalisation (EPOG)

EPOG 2.0 is the new EPOG programme, which started in September 2018. It is an international Master's course in which the students are being awarded a double diploma.

The objective of the new EPOG programme (EPOG 2.0) is to rethink targeted competencies in macroeconomics, innovation and economic development through the lens of the imperative ecological transition to a low-carbon economy. This is the purpose of EPOG 2.0, an innovative master program that articulates systematically how sustainability issues penetrate macroeconomic policy-making, innovation trends, corporate responsibility and development activity.

The core design of the EPOG 2.0 Master's relies on the development of an expertise in a specific field and a general understanding of interdependencies among economic policies with a precise, consistent and continuous course progression. The partner universities are Université Paris 13, Université Paris 7, the Hochschule für Wirtschaft und Recht Berlin, Kingston University, the University of the Witwatersrand and the Università degli studi Roma Tre. Please anticipate the fact that the application process is quite long and that it is recommended to start as early as possible. Note also that two recommendation letters are needed to apply and have to be provided by the deadline.

Please also consider thoroughly the options you wish to apply for since the focus of courses, the degrees they lead to and the host institutions and countries differ according to the option and major.

More information on the call here¹⁵³ and the application procedure here¹⁵⁴.

Application deadline: 29 February 2019 at 6 pm (Paris local time).

YSI: Peer Review Project 2019

The Philosophy of Economics and the History of Economic Thought Working groups of the Young Scholars Initiative invite the young scholars working in this area to join the first round of the Peer Review Project of 2019.

Participants can join the project both as author or only as reviewers. However, it is good to have in mind that for each paper submitted, one will have to review one paper from other YS.

We would like to invite all Young Scholars interested in taking part on this project to send their papers (no longer than 9000 words) with the specific subject, "2019 Peer Review Submission" and the paper attached to philecon@youngscholarsinitiative.org¹⁶⁸. Please include the following information:

- Complete Name
- Affiliation Current position
- Areas of interests
- Possible languages (Spanish, Portuguese, French or English)

Please, send this submission with the specific subject, "2019 Peer Review Submission" and the paper attached.

We would like to reinforce that papers in progress are more than welcome. The idea is for helping people improve the work. We also invite people interested only in commenting papers. In this case, just send an email with your personal information and the subject as "2019 Peer Review Comments". We will distribute the papers received by the beginning of April, and reviewers will have one month to send their commentaries back. We will also make available suggestion of format and tips for the reviews, which were suggested to us by editors of journals in the field of History of Economic Thought.

If you have any questions, feel free to contact us through the above e-mail or philecon@youngscholarsinitiative.org¹⁶⁹.

Submission deadline: 31 March 2019
