Last week I was invited to participate in a conference on "Still rethinking? - The Need for Pluralism in Economics"<sup>4</sup> organized by the Rethinking Economics Group at Greenwich University<sup>5</sup>. This was a student-led conference and the organization of the sessions reflected that in a very inspiring way: more experienced scholars were invited to give broad and accessible introductions to various aspects of heterodox thought to make it easier for students to enter the respective, more specialized debates at the research frontier. In my view, this conference was a huge success and I was extremely honored to present some of my views<sup>6</sup> on the future of pluralism in economics in a panel together with the living legend Victoria Chick<sup>7</sup>.

Having said that, I wanted to emphasize that I also found Michael Kumhof<sup>8</sup>'s keynote lecture at said conference to be highly interesting as he tackled interparadigmatic conflicts very directly. For instance, Kumhof showed how correctly modeling the inner workings of the financial sector (by means of assuming endogenous money) indeed makes a difference for the model outcomes. Moreover, he emphasized that research "outside-the-box" is often not conducted, because it is associated with too much "professional risk". This assessment echoes what I often write on these pages about paradigmatic closure in economics (e.g. here<sup>9</sup>), but also relates to general questions of professional climate and concerns for diversity within economics.

On the latter point, I wanted you to notice that the AEA has recently released a letter to its members<sup>10</sup> to provide a preliminary assessment and discussion of a survey on the professional climate in economics. As theoretical lop-sidedness and lack of diversity are often intrinsically related (I gave an example for such a case in my last editorial<sup>11</sup>), I think that these efforts by the AEA are noteworthy as they allow us to not only get a better understanding of the inner workings of academic economics, but they also facilitate a discussion on possible 'blind spots' in current mainstream thought. And this is, at the end of the day, exactly what this Newsletter is all about ;-)

Call for Papers

"Economic Consequences of the Peace" Centenary Conference King's College (Cambridge, Sept. 2019)

9-10 September 2019 — Cambridge, UK

Paper proposals are invited for a conference to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the publication of J. M. Keynes's The Economic Consequences of the Peace. Keynes's 1919 book is celebrated as a brilliant piece of advocacy by one of the 20th century's pre-eminent economists. But it is also an accurate prophecy of the consequences of a “Carthaginian peace,” as well as a plea for the type of global economic cooperation that later informed key aspects of reconstruction after World War II – including the Bretton Woods institutions (which Keynes helped to design) and the Marshall Plan. With its description of resurgent nationalism in Europe and the breakdown of pre-WWI international economic integration, the book has great resonance today, given growing nationalism, the fraying of traditional alliances, and attacks on the multilateral institutions that have supported economic and financial globalization. Papers are solicited across a range of disciplines – including economics, history, political science, and international relations – with the unifying theme being Keynes’s classic polemic and how we view it today in the light of both the past century’s developments and current challenges.

Topics include, but are not limited to:

- The intellectual setting in 1919 and critiques of Economic Consequences
- How did Keynes’s experience in 1919 shape his views on the postwar international monetary system?
- Globalization before and after World War I
- Economic, social, and political implications of large international debt, especially as regards the implications of a high debt burden on income and wealth inequality, and social and political polarization
- Reparations and global capital-market instability in the interwar period
- Can multilateralism survive in an unbalanced world? Lessons from (the failures of) the Versailles system
- Roots of interwar inflations and Keynes’s views on monetary policy
- Cooperation, punishment, and retribution in international relations
- The transfer problem in international economics and its relevance for the dynamics of global imbalances
- The influence of Economic Consequences on organizing peace and reconstruction after international conflicts

It is hoped that the conference papers, together with an introduction by the conference organizers, will be published by a distinguished university press. Please send proposals (no more than 300 words) via email to ECPcentenary@econ.cam.ac.uk<sup>12</sup> and obst-

19th ECDG Mini Track Digital Governance in an Economic Context

24-25 October 2019 — North Nicosia, Cyprus

In the contemporary global context, digitalization has interesting impacts on the way countries are governed, but the relationship between digital governance and economic activities has not yet been fully assessed or understood. The previous problem of “pretence of knowledge”, i.e. governments pretending that they know what people want, changes to a problem of “plethora of knowledge”, i.e. governments do not know where to start understanding and addressing preferences. In this context, the impact of digital governance on the economic activities of individuals can be both a curse and a blessing.

The aim of this mini track is to deepen the analysis and development of the multilevel relation between digitalization, (digital) citizens and (digital) governments from an innovation economic perspective. We aim to better understand the evolution of this complex relation towards a new reality. Both researchers and practitioners are welcome to offer their perspectives on the role of digitalization and digital governance in an economic context.

Theoretical and practical papers are invited to this mini-track and potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- Digital government vs. digital governance
- People and digital governance – understanding perceptions, designing action plans
- Emerging trends in digital governance and participation
- Empirical evidence from digital governance cases and their impacts on economy
- e-Participation, e-Democracy, IoT, smart cities, digital infrastructure and digitalization of the sectors of economy

In the first instance a 300 word abstract is required which should be submitted using the online submission form<sup>14</sup> .

6th Shadow Economy Conference "Tax Evasion and Economic Inequality" (Trento, July 2019)

11-13 July 2019 — Trento, Italy

Most taxation systems imply a redistribution of resources aimed at reducing economic inequality in the society. Tax evasion represents a major source of inequality, irrespective of the redistribution goal in a country.

The 6th edition of the Shadow Economy Conference will investigate the extent to which fiscal policies deter tax evasion and the impact that fiscal policies have on social equity and perceived fairness.

Particular emphasis will be placed on the behavioural determinants of tax compliance as well as the role of institutions and norms. The organizers invite scholars from any field of social sciences (economics, psychology, sociology, etc.) as well as practitioners to submit their research. A list of potential topics includes, but is not limited to, the impact of tax reforms, the role of taxpayers' fiscal literacy, the comparisons of different tax systems, the simplification processes of tax collection.

Prospective contributors are invited to submit extended abstracts (2-3 pages long). The conference welcomes theoretical, empirical, experimental, etc. submissions on any topic related to tax evasion and economic inequality. Extended Abstracts should be submitted electronically (PDF format only) following the online procedure<sup>17</sup> .

Please find further information here<sup>18</sup> .

INET/YSI Pre-conference @ STOREP 2019 (Siena, June 2019)

25-27 June 2019 — Siena, Italy

The joint event aims at bridging the divide between economics and history, by revamping a methodological tradition of teaching and research, which desperately needs further development. Such tradition sees history as a fundamental instrument of economic analysis and the history of thought as a resource to draw upon in the discussion of both theoretical and policy oriented issues. The historical perspective in economics allows connecting the past and present plurality of approaches and is foundational to the advancement of new ideas and methods, tailored to the questions we want them to address.

Interested young scholars can apply to four calls for abstracts, run by a variety of YSI Working Groups:

- CALL #1<sup>24</sup> — Innovative policy solutions among 21st century challenges Jointly organized by the Keynesian Economics Working Group<sup>25</sup> , and the Economics of Innovation Working Group<sup>26</sup>

International Journal of Pluralism and Economics Education: Special Issue on "Economics Education in Community Colleges"

Guest Editors: Dr. Mark Maier, Glendale Community College, USA and Dr. Tim Thornton, Global Development and Environment Institute, Tufts University, USA

A significant amount of economic instruction occurs in community colleges, yet this important sector is under researched and poorly understood. This special issue aims to remedy this situation by providing a resource for teachers, policymakers and other interested individuals. The issue will highlight achievements, innovative approaches and the unique possibilities within the sector, as well as conceptualise and document relevant challenges and issues. We have developed some obvious themes below. In addition, we will consider papers that can contribute to our understanding of this sector. Accordingly, potential authors are encouraged to contact the guest editors to discuss and explore particular lines of research in advance of the submission deadline. Subject Coverage Suitable topics include, but are not limited, to the following:

Theme 1: The fundamentals of the community college sector

1. What are the demographics of community college economics instruction?
  - Number, gender, race, ethnicity, age, etc. of students
  - Number, gender, race, ethnicity, degrees, etc. of instructors
2. The historical development of community colleges. Has their role in higher education changed? Have the basic demographics changed? What will the typical community college look like in the future?

<sup>35</sup><https://www.ineteconomics.org/events/inet-ysi-re-preconference-storep-2019>

3. What are the current community college trends? For example:
  - Rising tuition or in some cases free or reduced tuition
  - Increased use of part-time instructors
  - Increased use of online instruction
  - Emphasis on career technical education
  - And others?
4. What economics topics are of greatest interest to community college students? What economics courses are most commonly taught? If there is a significant difference, and if so, why?
5. How can community college instruction contribute to increased diversity in the economics major and the economics profession?
6. What can economists learn from how progressives have supported community college instruction in other disciplines? For example:
  - Successful efforts to increase diversity
  - Successful efforts to meet student interest in equality and sustainability
  - Successful efforts to find champions from the research community to support undergraduate instruction

Theme 2: Economic pluralism in community college courses

7. How can community college education be reconceptualised in order to support new thinking in economics?
8. What is the potential for community colleges as a central driver of pluralism in economics?
  - Are there unique resources within the community college sector?
  - Do transfer rules hinder or enhance pluralist approaches and/or interest in economics?
9. What is an appropriate and effective pluralist curriculum for community college students who take only one economics course?

10. What alternative courses or programmes promote economic pluralism? What pedagogies can support economic pluralism at community colleges?

Theme 3: Teaching resources in community colleges

11. What is the impact of dominant textbooks on community college economics instruction? Can heterodox and non-mainstream alternatives make a difference?

12. What other curricular resources are utilised in community colleges?

13. What is the impact of legislation mandating zero-cost, open-access textbooks on economics instruction at community colleges?

14. What is the impact of corporate-funded and federal government resources on the community college economics curriculum?

15. Describe and discuss effective pedagogies for teaching economics in community colleges.

16. What lessons can be learnt from other nations?

Notes for Prospective Authors

Money, Power and Print: An Interdisciplinary Colloquium on the Financial Revolution (Dublin, June 2020)

4-6 June 2020 — Dublin, Ireland

This colloquium, the ninth in a biennial series and the first to be held in the Republic of Ireland, invites scholars from a variety of disciplines to enrich their mutual understanding of the intersections between public finance, politics, and print during a period some scholars call the ‘financial revolution’ from around 1688 to 1776. The subject matter has been broadened slightly for 2020 to include the histories of personal credit and central banking.

Papers for the colloquium should be grounded in one of the following five general areas:

- the operations, theoretical and practical, of institutions such as banks (including central banking), joint-stock companies, public debt, and/or paper money
- the effect of diverse understandings of emerging financial instruments and theories upon contemporary political debates as demonstrated in the literature and legislative debates of the period
- the influence of the successes and failures of specific legislative and/or financial proposals on the development of political and economic programs throughout this period
- the impact of literature and legislative debates of the period on people’s perceptions of the financial revolution and/or its political consequences
- the evolution of personal credit and attitudes towards it, and their impact on the course of the financial revolution

‘Money’ is used broadly to cover the core economic components of the financial revolution. ‘Power’ is taken to mean the contest between royalty, aristocracy, gentry, merchants, financiers, and other formal or informal groupings for influence and standing. ‘Print’ refers to how the interplay of money and power were explained, analysed, explicated, and misrepresented (whether deliberately or not) in newspapers, pamphlets, novels, plays, illustrations, and other printed material intended for circulation.

In all cases, consideration should be given to the degree to which the print material under discussion shaped the development of institutions and the implementation of financial policies, and influenced political discourse.

Although primarily focussed on the ‘financial revolution’ in Britain (in the widest geographical sense), the colloquium welcomes papers which comparatively explore public finance in Britain alongside that of the Continent. Colloquium participants tend to adopt an empirical, rather than a statistically driven, approach to historical enquiry.

We recommend that all participants read selected excerpts from classic texts on the ‘financial revolution’ as well as excerpts from more recent works that deal with the ‘credible commitment’ thesis. (Such readings will be assigned and made available in advance of the meeting.) Reading selections from these classic and recent works of scholarship on our topic help us to gain a shared basis for dialogue, and underpin our comparative discussions.

Papers will be distributed in advance and presented in two-hour sessions, at which all colloquium participants are present. Presenters will have five minutes to summarise their papers. The remainder of each session will be given over to questions and discussion, in which the goal is to enrich our mutual understanding by eliciting insights from all of the disciplines represented at the table. Authors are therefore expected to write for a non-specialist audience, avoiding jargon, making concepts from their own discipline readily accessible to all those present, seeking to identify areas of general interest, and focusing on questions on which scholars of various disciplines will have something to contribute.

Papers should be written in English. Graduate students and emerging scholars are particularly encouraged to submit proposals.

Initial expressions of interest of 250 words or fewer, questions, and submissions should be directed to:

URPE invites proposals for complete sessions and individual papers for the URPE at ASSA annual meeting. We welcome proposals on radical political economic theory and applied analysis from a wide variety of theoretical perspectives.

Proposals for complete sessions are encouraged and should include the session title, a brief description of each paper, and the names, institutional affiliations, and email addresses of the chair, discussants, and presenters. Proposals for sessions should contain four papers. If you are proposing a complete session, please try to arrange to have discussants for your papers and a chair for your session. As the organizer of this session, you are responsible for conveying administrative information to session members, including confirmation that the session has been accepted, the time and location, and the deadlines for distributing papers.

Proposals for individual papers should include the title, the abstract, and the author's name, institutional affiliation, and email. Individual papers that are accepted will be assigned to sessions and each session will have an assigned organizer. Individuals whose papers are accepted may also be asked to serve as a discussant in a different session at the meetings.

We regret that high quality individual papers may be turned down due to the inability to place them in a session with papers with similar themes. The number of sessions we can have is limited by ASSA, and we regret that high-quality session proposals may also have to be turned down.

You should receive word from URPE about the decision on your session or paper by late June. The date and time of sessions are assigned by the AEA at the end of August.

Please note that anyone who presents a paper (but not the chairs or discussants) must be a current member of URPE at the time of submission of the paper or panel proposal. Submissions are checked, anyone not current with their dues is notified, and then proposals are deleted if membership is not made current. Membership information is available by clicking here.<sup>43</sup>

Applications for individual papers should be made to URPE@ASSA Individual Paper Proposals,<sup>44</sup> or for complete session submissions to URPE@ASSA Complete Session Proposals.<sup>45</sup> If you have questions or problems with the online submission, please

Uneven and Combined Development Conference (Glasgow, Sept. 2019)

5-7 September 2019 — Glasgow, UK

As recently as the early 1990s, anyone predicting that Trotsky's 'law' of uneven and combined development (UCD) would soon become a key theoretical reference point across several academic disciplines would have been treated with a great deal of scepticism. Yet, less than three decades later, UCD is regularly deployed in the fields of international relations, historical sociology, political economy, social geography and—perhaps most surprisingly—world literature. Not since the vogue for Gramsci's notion of hegemony in the 1970s and 1980s has a concept from the classical Marxist tradition enjoyed such widespread academic diffusion. Controversies have of course abounded: adherents have disagreed over whether UCD is a trans-historic or trans-modal process, or whether it is one which can only be found in the era of industrial capitalism; critics have alleged that UCD is simply a more sophisticated form of Eurocentrism; Trotskyist activists have complained—with some justification—that UCD has been detached from the political context in which it was first deployed. There have been some events focusing on specific aspects of UCD, notably one on culture at the University of Warwick in 2014; yet, in spite of the rapidly multiplying literature there has not been an international event bringing together representatives from all the relevant areas of scholarship to engage in inter-disciplinary discussion.

This conference will finally provide such an opportunity. Although its main focus will be on UCD, it will also be open to discussion of two important related topics, the earlier theory of /uneven development/ and the strategy of /permanent revolution/, the conditions for which UCD was of course originally intended to explain. The organisers are pleased to announce that keynote addresses will be given by Robert Brenner (on uneven development in the history of capitalism) and Justin Rosenberg (on the relevance of UCD to understanding contemporary issues like Brexit and the rise of Trump): other keynote speakers will be announced over the coming months.

We are inviting academics, public intellectuals and political activists interested in the debates over UCD and related areas—including those who are critical of the concept, or at least sceptical of its explanatory power—to participate in the conference. If you simply want to attend and take part in the discussion, you can complete the on-line registration form which will be issued in June. But if you are planning to submit a paper, please send it to Neil Davidson<sup>51</sup>. You should aim for a maximum of 250 words for individual papers and of 500 words for panels: panels should not involve more than three speakers.

These proposals don't have to be formal 'abstracts'—we just want to know what you would like to talk about for scheduling purposes. We're not going to insist that proposals fit into pre-decided 'streams': we'll instead see what subject areas participants want to discuss and work from there. The subjects of papers/panels could be anything from case-studies of UCD in particular nation-states or regions, to the contemporary relevance of permanent revolution, to the impact of UCD on the emergence of Modernism—the only criteria for the acceptance of proposals is that they engage with the themes of the conference and have something interesting to say about them. We're as open to the extension of existing arguments as we are in the unveiling of new positions. In particular, if you are PhD student working on UCD-related themes but have not yet published, this would provide you with an opportunity to present in an interested and supportive environment. Unfortunately, we can only pay for keynote speakers to attend, but the cost of registration will be relatively low: £20 (employed f/t)/£10 (student, employed p/t, unemployed or retired).

Young Economists Conference 2019: "Understanding economic history for shaping the future" (Vienna, Oct. 2019)

1-2 October 2019 — Vienna, Austria

Today's social, financial, and economic challenges in capitalism call for responses by both policymakers and economists. The multitude of answers economists have to these most pressing questions reflects the plurality of economic theory, differences in the assessment of the present as well as the influence of political interests. Whether an economic theory becomes dominant in shaping society depends on who supports and promotes its ideas. Economic History and the History of Economic Thought are thus indispensable to understand the contest of paradigms.

The recent financial and systemic crisis emphasizes the need for a thorough discussion of the role of economic history for the profession; the impact of ideology and power in shaping economic theory; and empirical studies examining the past as well as preparing for future challenges. This encompasses contributions from all subfields of economics (for example macroeconomics, labor economics and economics of inequality) as well as related social sciences.

2019 EAEPE Summer School on "Welfare Systems, Equitable Growth and Income Distribution" (Rome, July 2019)

1-5 July 2019 — Rome, Italy

The EAEPE Summer School is open to PhD students and early-career researchers working in particular in the field of institutional and evolutionary analysis, with a special focus this year on structural change, aggregate demand, institutions and economic development. Teachers will address these important topics from different perspectives and approaches. In the spirit of pluralism characteristic of the EAEPE, many Research Areas are relevant: human development, environment-economy interactions, methodology of economics, institutional history, comparative economics, transition economics, institutional change, innovation and technology, and labour economics.

More generally, contributions from all fields using institutional, multidisciplinary approaches are welcome. Lectures by internationally- renowned scholars will be given in the morning, while afternoons will be devoted to presentations by advanced PhD stu-

2019 Summer School of Advanced Studies in the Reappraisal of the Surplus Approach (Rome, July 2019)

5-13 July 2019 — Rome, Italy

The Summer School welcomes applications by PhD students at any stage of their PhD as well as post-doc researchers. Candidatures by undergraduate and Master students will be considered only if their profile is exceptionally strong.

Participants will be introduced to the analyses of the Classical economists and to the modern research conducted within the reappraisal of their theoretical framework. The activity will embrace different topics, ranging from the theory of value and distribution to the study of economic growth, also dealing with applied analyses and policy issues. A selected number of papers by young scholars will be presented and discussed in a specific session. The registration fee is 150€ and includes teaching materials and lunches. Centro Sraffa grants scholarships for a small number of participants, who will be awarded free Summer School registration and, if possible, a lump sum contribution to travel and staying expenses.

New Summer School Course - Research methods in Political Economy (Manchester, July 2019)

1-5 July 2019 — Manchester, UK

This five day workshop will equip scholars with the methodological tools for acquiring empirical knowledge in political economy and the theoretical tools for questioning the validity and limits of the knowledge produced.

It will begin with a brief exploration of the ontological and epistemological foundations of knowledge production, and then feature a series of intense workshop on different methodological approaches and techniques. This includes the quantitative approaches, such as Stata regression analyses and NVivo coding, as well as qualitative approaches, such as social network analysis and the conducting of semi-structured elite interviews. These sessions entail a combination of lectures, practical work and feedback. The course will then conclude with the utilisation of these techniques in your own specific research projects, presentations of your work, and a discussion of methodological strengths and weaknesses in each case.

TK: MEINTEST DU DIESE?

The terms of the editors of the Association for Social Economics' two journals, the Review of Social Economy and the Forum for Social Economics, are up at the end of 2019. The contract between the ASE and the editors states that an evaluation will be completed prior to either a renewal of the contracts or searches for new editors, and a committee has been formed to do this review and make recommendations to the ASE Executive Council.

If you have comments you would like to share with the committee about how you think the current editorships have worked out, or your concerns for the future, we would be happy to hear them. Please email them to Julie Nelson<sup>67</sup> , or contact Julie Nelson by email to make arrangements for a phone call. We will keep your comments confidential and/or anonymous, if you prefer. A listing of some specific topics of interest is below.

Criteria for Evaluation

1. Scope: Is the journal furthering social economics?
2. Logistics: Are submissions and publications being handled in an organized, timely, and appropriate way?
3. Budget: Are funds the journal receives for administration and promotion of the journal being used appropriately?
4. Inclusivity: How successful has the journal been in encouraging a diversity of voices by gender, race, nationality, length of time in the profession, and/or disci-

Post-Keynesian Economics meets International and Comparative Political Economy (London, May 2019)

15 May 2019 — London, UK

The workshop explores the mutual relevance of post-Keynesian economics (PKE) and Comparative Political Economy (which prominently includes Varieties of Capitalism, VoC) and International Political Economy (IPE). Several authors have recently highlighted potential synergies. Baccaro and Pontussen (2016) have argued that existing VoC analyses lack an adequate treatment of demand formation and proposed a to ground VoC analysis on the PKE analysis of demand regimes. In response Soskice and Hope (2016) sympathise with the need for stronger demand side analysis, but advocate a foundation in the New Keynesian three equation model (as in Carlin and Soskice's textbook) as preferable to PKE. Blyth and Matthijs (2017) argue that IPE lacks in its treatment of the macroeconomy and highlight the distinction of Keynesian (full employment) and neoliberal (price stability) policy goals in two different macroeconomic policy regimes. Stockhammer (2016) argues that PKE analysis differs from VoC in its analysis of demand regimes and its analysis of finance, which includes endogenous money creation and financial instability.

The workshop has a mix of speakers with PKE and an IPE/CPE background. The aim is to explore the possible areas of synergy, overlap and tension between PKE, CPE and IPE. We expect the debate will focus on the Euro crisis, differences in demand regimes and the impact of financialisation.

Summer School on "Repoliticising capitalism: contradictions, critique and alternatives" (Roskilde, July-Aug. 2019)

29 July - 9 August — Roskilde, Denmark

Course outline

The summer school brings together a faculty of critical political economy scholars (Cattia Gregoratti, Lund University, as well as Jesper Jespersen, Bernd Bonfert, Laura Horn and other scholars from RUC) for an in-depth course on heterodox and critical political economic perspectives. It offers a unique opportunity to directly engage with original economic texts/source material and to explore core dimensions of the critique of (neo)classical economic theory and contemporary perspectives on global capitalism. The focus of the course is explicitly pluralist, encouraging students to widen their horizon for critical thinking and methodological reflection

The first part of the course ‘Economic Thought from Oikos to Economics’ traces the history of economic ideas with an emphasis on critical and heterodox approaches. The individual sessions will introduce students to carefully selected primary literature from classical, critical and heterodox strands of economic thought. The objective is to understand the varied historical effect of these theories on both the object of study and the discipline itself. This will provide the foundation for further elaboration on contemporary issues such as debt, unemployment, inequality, and growth.

The second part of the course ‘Contemporary Challenges, Critiques and Alternatives’ addresses present and pressing issues, through the lens of critical and heterodox political economy. This theoretical and applied pluralism will provide insights on issues such as e.g. development, austerity politics and climate change. Through the employment of recent critiques, the second section of the course hence offers potential pathways towards different conceptualisations and alternatives to “the economy” as we know it.

Why do this summer school at Roskilde University?

The ‘Repoliticizing Capitalism’ course at Roskilde University is the only one of its kind in Scandinavia. It offers a rare opportunity to engage with primary economic texts as well as leading scholars within heterodox economics and critical political economy. The course will contribute substantially to students’ understanding of economics, its history and usages. Moreover the specific focus on alternatives and critiques enables students to move beyond orthodox conceptualizations of the economy.

RUC is a critical university, with an explicit focus on creating experimental and innovative learning experiences and knowledge. It has a unique history of student activism and legacy of critical thought that still leaves an impression on university environment. The summer school at RUC not only provides an opportunity to take part in a vibrant academic community, but you will also be presented with the possibility of directly engaging with professors, lecturers and researchers leading within their fields. RUC’s dedication to student participation, problem solving and innovative learning approaches will positively add to the credentials of any student.

Located at the city of Roskilde and a 25-min train-ride from Copenhagen, the cultural, social, economic and political happenings are inside the reach of its green surroundings.

Date

The course is offered from 29 July - 9 August 2019. The application deadline will be announced in due time; it’ll probably be around late April/early May for international participants.

Course format

The course takes place over a two week period and comprises a range of activities. Each week there are four days of teaching (seminars and workshops), and one day of self-study.

The seminars presents a variety of critical approaches, drawing on the readings and the lecturers' own work. The core element of the summer school is active learning-oriented workshops, in which the participants discuss the theoretical, methodological and empirical issues raised in the lectures. There will also be opportunities for participants to present their own work to the group. Self-study periods, facilitated by the enabling learning environment at the Roskilde university campus offer an opportunity for students to improve their knowledge and understanding of theoretical perspectives and current affairs. Social activities include film screenings, an evening discussing economics and science fiction, as well as a barbecue.

Language

The course is taught in English.

Admission and Fees

The summer school is available for master students as well as PhDs (course requirements differ according to which level participants are, more details available on the course website in due time, or contact Laura).

The course carries 10 ECTS; admission for international students (EU/EEA) is 560€. Master students enrolled at a Danish university do not have to pay fees, but need to provide a forhåndsgodkendelse/pre-approval from their university.

Accommodation is available on campus, prices and further details are available upon request.

Colorado State University, USA

Job title: Post-doc specializing in the racial, ethnic and/or gender dimensions of poverty and inequality

The Department of Economics at Colorado State University invites applications for a two-year post-doctoral research associate who specializes in the racial, ethnic and/or gender dimensions of poverty and inequality. The successful candidate will develop research analyzing how race, ethnicity and/or gender determine economic opportunities and constraints or the organization of economic systems, and the consequences for poverty and inequality. Scholars with a wide array of sub-specialties can find ample opportunities for mentorship and collaboration among Department faculty, particularly in areas that explore the social, economic or environmental aspects of inequality. This position includes a 1-1 teaching load each academic year, with courses to be determined based on candidate interests and departmental needs. Those with the capability to contribute to our course offerings in gender and the economy, racial inequality and discrimination, poverty and the welfare state, or environmental justice and sustainability are especially encouraged to apply, as are those interested in improving diversity and inclusion in introductory economics education. Ph.D. in economics or a related field must be completed by the time the appointment begins on 16 August 2019. The Department of Economics strives to create and support a diverse and inclusive environment appreciating and valuing the uniqueness of the individual. We value intellectual diversity and embrace a pluralistic approach to scholarship and teaching that reflects the broader society.

Interested applicants must submit a cover letter describing their suitability for the position, CV, research and teaching statements, a job market paper or example of recent research (to be uploaded to the writing samples slot) and the names and e-mail addresses of three (3) professional references who will be contacted to submit letters of recommendation. References will be contacted immediately upon submission of an application and will receive an email with a link to submit their letter. Please inform your references that letters must be uploaded by April 26, 2019 for full consideration of a complete application. Letters should be addressed to: Post-doc Search Chair. ### Job title: Visiting Assistant Professor of Economic Thought

The Gallatin School of Individualized Study at New York University (NYU) seeks to fill a Visiting Assistant Professor position to commence on September 1, 2019. We are seeking candidates with expertise in either the History of Economic Thought; Heterodox Economics; or the History of Capitalism. The ideal candidate will be able to teach creative and thoughtful courses that explore the intellectual history of economics as a discipline, or that provide a social and institutional framework for thinking about the history of capitalism. We are particularly interested in attracting a candidate who could teach some courses about the likes of any of the following: Adam Smith, Karl Marx, John Maynard Keynes, Alfred Marshall, Joan Robinson, Amartya Sen and/or other scholars who have been influential in the development of economic thought, and who can teach in a way that exposes undergraduate students to the texts of these thinkers. The candidate would be welcome to teach other topics-oriented courses in addition to the above; examples might include courses such as a course about the history of money, a gender and the economy course, or a course drawn from the candidate's research.

The teaching load for this position is four courses per year (two in the fall and two in the spring). In addition, this position will serve as an adviser to approximately 13 students.

Founded in 1972, NYU Gallatin is a liberal arts college of 1,500 undergraduate students and 200 graduate students that are part of New York University. Its innovative B.A. and M.A. programs in individualized study encourage students to develop an integrated, interdisciplinary program of study that combines courses taken in the various schools of NYU with independent studies, internships, and Gallatin's own interdisciplinary seminars, writing courses and arts workshops. The School emphasizes excellent teaching, top level faculty research, intensive student advising and mentoring, and a unique combination of program flexibility and academic rigor. To learn more about the Gallatin School, please visit our website at gallatin.nyu.edu<sup>79</sup>.

Qualifications: Candidates may have an academic background in history, economics, political philosophy or sociology. Ph.D. in hand by time of appointment; demonstrated excellence in teaching at the university level; a strong record of research and writing.

Applicants are required to submit a letter of application, curriculum vitae, a writing sample (of 15-20 pages), three letters of recommendation, a statement of your teaching philosophy, and a brief description of three "dream courses" you would like to teach.

Goldsmiths University of London, UK

Job title: Lecturer in Economics (Three Posts)

The Institute of Management Studies (IMS) combines innovative and world-renowned 4* research in one of the most creative universities in the UK with the expertise of leading academics in the fields of economics, entrepreneurship, strategy, business psychology, innovation, leadership development, and marketing. We are now seeking three full-time Lecturers in Economics to join our expanding group in this area; they will contribute to the development, teaching, and high-impact research output of economics in the IMS.

You will have a good first degree and PhD (or equivalent) in an area related to economics and an internationally recognised portfolio of interdisciplinary research, with relevant publications, in relation to economic theory and/or applied economics. Preference will be given to applicants who have completed their PhD; those who have submitted at the point of application could be considered on a case-by-case basis.

Applications are especially encouraged from academics who have experience in teaching (i) microeconomic theory from a history of economic thought perspective; ii) the historical evolution of credit and the market economy; and (iii) quantitative economics/econometrics with appropriate statistical software packages and the methodology of statistics for economists. Knowledge of the context and methodology of applied techniques and an ability to creatively combine mainstream and heterodox approaches in teaching and research are essential.

Positive Money, UK

Job title: Economist

Positive Money is a fast-growing organisation that combines the activities of a think-tank, pressure group, and international movement. Its mission is to restore democratic control and transparency over the creation of money. Current monetary policy and the money system cause a wide range of economic, social and environmental problems; most notably house price bubbles, high levels of debt, and rising inequality. Its vision is a money and banking system that supports and contributes to a fair, democratic, and sustainable economy.

About the role

Positive Money's ideas on reform of the banking system have been advocated by the Financial Times' chief economics commentator, Martin Wolf, and cited by influential economists including former Bank of England governor, Mervyn King and former Financial Services Authority chairman Adair Turner. Its team has developed a significant body of work looking at the nature of the current monetary and banking system, its consequences for various social, economic, and environmental goals, and the potential for progressive reform. Positive Money is a thought leader on money and banking reform. As a member of the research team, the economist would contribute to an ambitious research agenda with a significant impact on economic policymaking. The economist will help to identify how to broaden Positive Money's analysis of the dysfunctional money and banking system, and of the role of central banking in developed economies following the financial crash.

Applicants should fill out the application form <sup>83</sup> and send it via email to recruitment@positivemoney.org.<sup>84</sup>

University College Dublin, Ireland

Job title: AD Astra Fellows

UCD is a research-intensive global university with purpose, drive and ambition. To contribute to the achievement of our mission and vision, we wish to hire additional faculty who share our ambition and our values: excellence, creativity, collegiality, engagement, integrity and diversity.

UCD has developed a new Central Pool Academic Appointments initiative that is aligned with the University Strategy key objectives:

1. Increase the quality, quantity and impact of our research, scholarship and innovation.
2. Provide an educational experience that defines international best practice.

3. Consolidate and strengthen our disciplines.
4. Conduct strong interdisciplinary research and education in important areas of national and global need.
5. Attract and retain an excellent and diverse cohort of students, faculty and staff.
6. Build our engagement locally, nationally and internationally.
7. Develop and strengthen our University community.

The UCD Ad Astra Fellows programme is one part of this initiative. Approximately 65 appointments will be made at Lecturer/Assistant Professor grade each year targeting high potential early-stage academics. Applications are invited across all academic disciplines represented in UCD. Excellence, creativity and the interest and capacity to engage across disciplines are underpinning values.

The UCD Ad Astra Fellows programme is extremely competitive and applicants are expected to have research outputs in the pipeline that will readily transition to research activity within UCD.

Responses to Marx's Capital: From Rudolf Hilferding to Isaak Illich

Edited and translated by Richard B. Day and Daniel F. Gaido — 2018, Haymarket Books

Responses to Marx's Capital: From Rudolf Hilferding to Isaak Illich Rubin is a collection of primary sources dealing with the reception of the economic works of Karl Marx from the First to the Third International. The documents, translated for the first time from German and Russian, range from the original reviews of the three volumes of Capital and the three volumes of Theories of Surplus Value to the debates between the Marxist economists and the bourgeois academic representatives of the theory of marginal utility and the German historical school.

The volume close with six essays by the prominent economist Isaak I. Rubin, including 'Essays on Marx's Theory of Money' and 'The Dialectical Development of Categories in Marx's Economic System'.

Class After Industry - A Complex Realist Approach

by David Byrne — 2019 Palgrave Macmillan

The transition to twenty-first century post-industrial capitalism from the ‘welfare’ industrial capitalism of the twentieth century, has affected the ways in which class is lived in terms of relational inequality and the factors that structure identity. Class After Industry takes a complex realist approach to the dynamics of individual lives, places, the social structure and analyses their significance in terms of class. A wide range of quantitative and qualitative studies are drawn on to explore how ‘life after industry’ shapes class, and the consequent potential for social change. The book will be of interest across the social sciences and beyond, to those concerned with how class forms might translate into political action.

Fascism and Dictatorship The Third International and the Problem of Fascism

by Nicos Poulantzas — 2019, Verso

The resurgence of the far right across Europe and the emergence of the “alt-right” in the US have put the question of fascism urgently back on the agenda. For those trying to understand these forms of politics, there is no better place to start than Fascism and Dictatorship, the unrivalled Marxist study of German and Italian fascism. It carefully distinguishes between fascism as a mass movement before the seizure of power and what it becomes as an entrenched machinery of dictatorship. It compares the distinct class components of the counterrevolutionary blocs mobilised by fascism in Germany and Italy; analyses the changing relations between the petty bourgeoisie and big capital in the evolution of fascism; discusses the structures of the fascist state itself, as an emergency regime for the defence of capital; and provides a sustained and documented criticism of official Comintern attitudes and policies towards fascism in the fateful years after the Versailles settlement. Fascism and Dictatorship represents a challenging synthesis of factual evidence and conceptual analysis, a standard bearer of what Marxist political theory should be.

Governance Beyond the Law: The Immoral, The Illegal, The Criminal

edited by A. Polese, A. Russo, and F. Strazzari — 2019, Palgrave Macmillan

This volume explores the continuous line from informal and unrecorded practices all the way up to illegal and criminal practices, performed and reproduced by both individuals and organisations. The authors classify them as alternative, subversive forms of governance performed by marginal (and often invisible) peripheral actors. The volume studies how the informal and the extra-legal unfold transnationally and, in particular, how and why they have been/are being progressively criminalized and integrated into the construction of global and local dangerhoods; how the above-mentioned phenomena are embedded into a post-liberal security order; and whether they shape new states of exception and generate moral panic whose ultimate function is regulatory, disciplinary and one of crafting practices of political ordering.

Growth and Distribution

by Duncan K. Foley, Thomas R. Michl and Daniele Tavani — 2019, Harvard University Press

Authors Duncan Foley, Thomas Michl, and Daniele Tavani present Classical and Keynesian approaches to growth theory, in parallel with Neoclassical ones, and introduce students to advanced tools of intertemporal economic analysis through carefully developed treatments of land- and resource-limited growth. They cover corporate finance, the impact of government debt and social security systems, theories of endogenous technical change, and the implications of climate change. Without excessive formal complication, the models emphasize rigorous reasoning from basic economic principles and insights, and respond to students' interest in the history and policy dilemmas of real-world economies.

In addition to carefully worked out examples showing how to use the analytical techniques presented, Growth and Distribution presents many problems suitable for inclusion in problem sets and examinations. Detailed answers to these problems are available. This second edition includes fresh data throughout and new chapters on climate change, corporate capitalism, models of wealth inequality, and technical change.

Mass strikes and social movements in Brazil and India - Popular Mobilisation in the Long Depression

by Jörg Nowak — 2019, Palgrave

This book explores new forms of popular organisation that emerged from strikes in India and Brazil between 2011 and 2014. Based on four case studies, the author traces the alliances and relations that strikers developed during their mobilisations with other popular actors such as students, indigenous peoples, and people displaced by dam projects. The study locates the mass strikes in Brazil's construction industry and India's automobile industry in a global conjuncture of protest movements, and develops a new theory of strikes that can take account of the manifold ways in which labour unrest is embedded in local communities and regional networks.

Minsky's Moment - An Insider's View on the Economics of Hyman Minsky

by Piero Ferri — 2019, Edward Elgar Publishing

Based upon his life-long collaboration with Hyman Minsky, Piero Ferri explores and reconsiders Minsky's moments in the aftermath of the 'Great Recession' of 2008. He sets out the analytical and methodological foundations of Minsky's financial instability hypothesis, offering insightful comments from a unique insider's perspective.

This book stresses the necessity of including what has been recently discovered about Minsky's financial instability hypothesis into his lifelong research program, in order to obtain a more complete picture of both his vision and his analytical apparatus. It seeks to move beyond a discussion of Minsky's original ideas, to verify how they are capable of meeting the challenges derived from the modern evolution of the economy. Developing a meta-model based on regime switching, Piero Ferri examines how the different financial instability hypotheses can be accounted for.

Researchers and advanced students in macroeconomics and finance will greatly benefit from the exploration of how Minsky predicted the 'Great Recession', and why his work is of fundamental relevance today. Economic policy makers will also find this book to be a useful tool in discovering methodological innovations to aid further financial recovery from the 2008 economic crisis.

Money, Method and Contemporary Post-Keynesian Economics

Edited by Sheila Dow, Jesper Jespersen, and Geoff Tily — 2019, Edward Elgar Publishing

The Post-Keynesian methodology emphasising uncertainty is indispensable to analysing and understanding the major challenges of the 21st Century. On that basis, this book focuses on the failures of the market economic system to secure stability and sustainability, and demonstrates why this is not recognised by conventional economic theory.

The Post-Keynesian economics set out here aims for an understanding of the economy as a whole and as an integral part of society. Chapters analysing money, banks and finance as dynamic phenomena open the book. They are followed by chapters focusing on methodological issues such as uncertainty, longer-term aspects, sustainability and other non-monetary economic activities.

This important book is a useful tool for students and researchers who wish to gain a better understanding of real world economics. In these areas where conventional macroeconomic theory may not be sufficient, this book offers viable Post-Keynesian alternatives.

Rosa Luxemburg - The Biography

by J.P. Nettl — 2019, Verso

Rosa Luxemburg is one of the most controversial and important figures in the development of Marxism. In many respects her role is unique; she was at the same time one of the founders of modern communism and one of its severest critics. With the exception of Lenin, she is perhaps the only Marxist of this century who bridges the profound divide of the Bolshevik Revolution; both communists and anti-communists still look to her work and life as a source of inspiration. In this classic biography J.P. Nettl provides an extraordinary portrait of one of the leading twentieth century revolutionaries and political thinkers.

Schumpeter's Capitalism, Socialism and Democracy: A Twenty-First Century Agenda

edited by Leonardo Burlamaqui and Rainer Kattel — 2018, Routledge

2017 marked the seventy-fifth anniversary of Schumpeter's Capitalism, Socialism and Democracy, a work acknowledged as one of the most insightful books written in the twentieth century. It retains a contemporary quality, and still invites criticisms, new interpretations, and extensions and across disciplines.

This book, in addition to re-examining Schumpeter's seminal work and undertaking a twenty-first-century update of its main themes, brings together leading social scientists to provide contemporary amendments, extensions – or eventually refutations – of key elements of Schumpeter's vision and thesis. Issues covered include a new take on creative destruction, the contours of a theory of innovative enterprise, finance and financialisation, a critique of the secular stagnation thesis, Schumpeter's contributions to a theory of the entrepreneurial state, his conception of socialism and its current relevance for understanding the 'China model' as well as a rekindling of his democracy thesis for our times.

Bringing together leading international contributors, this book provides fresh perspectives on ideas that continue to be hugely relevant to contemporary social sciences and a guide for understanding the current tensions among capitalism, the state and democracy. These chapters will be of interest to economists, social scientists and anyone with an interest in modern capitalism.

Selected Essays of Nigel Harris: From National Liberation to Globalisation

by Nigel Harris; edited by Ahmed Shawki — 2019, Haymarket Books

Nigel Harris's Selected Essays: From National Liberation to Globalisation presents an encompassing overview of the work of one of the most prolific and insightful Marxist economists of the second half of the twentieth century. It starts off with a new interview in which Harris reflects on the development of his thought over the more than half a century separating the death of Stalin from the latest developments in globalisation and capitalist restructuring. The collected essays deal with topics ranging from imperialism and the state to the political economy of development and migration, and offer an ample selection from Harris’s political journalism. Together the work constitutes at once a personal journey through the history of the British revolutionary left and a trenchant commentary on some of the most fundamental problems facing a renewed Marxist theory.

The Economics of Adaptation and Long-term Relationships

by Dean Victor Williamson — 2019, Edward Elgar Publishing

Do institutions matter in economic theory? Or is the economic analysis of institutions a distraction from the most important action? Indeed, does Vernon Smith’s notion of the “institution-free core” of formal economic theory encompass that most important action? Would that render an “economics of organization” almost devoid of economic content?

The author takes up an approach that is more agnostic, inter-disciplinary and even a little irreverent. What can theory do and not do? Theory can stimulate questions about how parties manage competing demands for commitment and flexibility in their relationships but what blind spots persist? The book opens with an informal tour of the economics of system design out of which an economics of adaptation ultimately emerged. It then offers explorations, via the application of the economics of adaptation in both law and economics’ relating to how parties manage relationships within the firm, within the context of long-term contracts and, most vividly, within the context of antitrust conspiracy.

Advanced undergraduates, graduate students and teaching faculty in economics, public policy, management and law will find the book relevant, as it maps out connections between literatures that are not often made explicit. For historians of economic thought the book lays out a much richer understanding of what the economics of organization is (and is not), and situates it next to design economics.

The Future of Mining in South Africa: Sunset or Sunrise

edited by Salimah Valiani — 2019, MISTRA

<sup>230</sup><https://www.e-elgar.com/shop/the-economics-of-adaptation-and-long-term-relationships>

The future of mining in South Africa is hotly contested. Wide-ranging views from multiple quarters rarely seem to intersect, placing emphasis on different questions without engaging in holistic debate.

This book aims to catalyse change by gathering together fragmented views into unifying conversations. It highlights the importance of debating the future of mining in South Africa and for reaching consensus in other countries across the mineral-dependent globe.

It covers issues such as the potential of platinum to spur industrialisation, land and dispossession on the platinum belt, the roles of the state and capital in mineral development, mining in the era of the Fourth Industrial Revolution, the experiences of women in and affected by mining since the late 19th century and mine worker organising: history and lessons and how post-mine rehabilitation can be tackled.

It was inspired not only by an appreciation of South Africa's extensive mineral endowments, but also by a realisation that, while the South African mining industry performs relatively well on many technical indicators, its management of broader social issues leaves much to be desired. It needs to be deliberated whether the mining industry can play as critical a role going forward as it did in the evolution of the country's economy.

The Reform of Europe - A Political Guide to the Future

by Michel Aglietta — 2019, Verso

Since 2010, the eurozone crisis has roiled the continent, creating political discord and generating a long period of economic stagnation. The cyclical recovery enjoyed in 2017 is no cause for complacency. It should act as an impetus to undertake long-overdue reforms.

At present, there is no future for those incapable of investing. There is no stimulus for innovation in countries that have been converted to the hegemony of finance at the expense of productive investment. Europe must confront the challenges of the twenty-first century by recovering the community spirit behind the Union's origins.

The Reform of Europe demonstrates the need for a long-term vision with two goals: the reconstruction of a social contract based on entrepreneurial partnership and investment in the transition to ecological sustainability. This political vision will restore to citizens of the member states a sense of belonging to a wider community. To this end, argues Michel Aglietta, one of today's most important heterodox economists, we must strengthen European institutions at the financial and fiscal levels. This means making the euro a full currency, endowed with democratic legitimacy.

Heterodox Graduate Programs, Scholarships and Grants

MSc Economics and MSc Global Economic Governance and Policy at SOAS University of London

The Department of Economics at SOAS University of London has two new exciting graduate programmes for which it invites applications: MSc Economics and MSc Global Economic Governance and Policy.

Both programmes, like all SOAS Economics MSc programmes, are distinctive in their commitment to provide training in both mainstream economics and heterodox alternative theories and methods, quantitative skills, and application to a variety of contemporary topics and global economic issues.

This reflects one of our key institutional roles in leading the debates in political economy and pluralistic economics. It also places applied focus on policy engagements and their theory foundations, drawing on our strengths and expertise in those areas.

By completing a SOAS Economics MSc you will be equipped with the specialist knowledge required by international employers in both the business and public sectors; as well as providing rigorous foundations for those who wish to go on to do research in economics at the PhD level.

To find out more or to apply, visit our website here<sup>233</sup> and here.<sup>234</sup>

Application deadline: 30 June 2019

Economic Policies in the age of Globalisation (EPOG) - International Master's course

EPOG 2.0 is the new EPOG programme, which started in September 2018. The objective of the new EPOG programme (EPOG 2.0) is to rethink targeted competencies in macroeconomics, innovation and economic development through the lens of the imperative ecological transition to a low-carbon economy. This is the purpose of EPOG 2.0, an innovative master program that articulates systematically how sustainability issues penetrate macroeconomic policy-making, innovation trends, corporate responsibility and development activity.

The core design of the EPOG 2.0 Master's relies on the development of an expertise in a specific field and a general understanding of interdependencies among economic policies with a precise, consistent and continuous course progression.

Additional students can be enrolled directly in the second year ("1-YEAR-PROGRAMME students"). The successful students will only be awarded a Paris 13 APE degree if they are in Option I or a APE Paris 7 degree if they are in Option II. With the exception of the awarded degrees policy, these students and the 2-YEAR-PROGRAMME students will be treated similarly.

Application process

Please anticipate the fact that the application process is quite long and that it is recommended to start as early as possible. Note also that two recommendation letters are needed to apply and have to be provided by the deadline.

Please also consider thoroughly the options you wish to apply for since the focus of courses and the host institutions according to the option.

Click here<sup>235</sup> to access the application platform. To apply for the 1-year programme, please select "Applicant Master 2 (1 year)".

scholarship aid for dissertation credit hours or for credit hours that are not directly relevant for the completion of the doctoral program's course work.

Selection criteria include:

1. Priority will be given to students who have no scholarship support at all and need the support to continue in their heterodox doctoral program. Students who have only partial scholarship support and need additional support to continue in their heterodox doctoral program will also be considered.
2. Preference will be given to students who are interested in working in heterodox microeconomics. Applicants from other elds of study are also encouraged to apply, especially if they are willing to do heterodox economics in an integrative manner (as opposed to adhering to a single heterodox tradition).

MS Finance at Saint Peter's University in Jersey City, USA

The Department of Economics and Finance at Saint Peter's University in Jersey City, New Jersey, USA now offers an MS Finance degree program, with instruction beginning Fall 2019. The 30-credit program can be completed in nine months through a full-time option and twenty-one months through a part-time option, with each student finishing a concentration in Global Finance or Quantitative Finance. In conjunction, the University offers an Accelerated option for its current undergraduate students, the only one of its kind in New York's Tri-State area.

The program's innovative curriculum approaches the discipline of finance from a pluralistic perspective to examine how it can promote the capital development of nations through sustainable financial relationships. In doing, it goes beyond the traditional topics covered in other MS Finance programs by emphasizing a balance between macroeconomic and microeconomic aspects of finance; focusing on comparative central banking; stressing the history of financial economic thought; addressing issues of financial ethics; and giving students the opportunity to partake in mentored research with private, public, and NGO affiliates. This combination gives graduates the in-demand skill sets employers increasingly desire in today's globalized financial world and best prepares them for leading financial professional certification exams, such as the Chartered Financial Analyst (CFA) and Certified Financial Planner (CFP) designations, since we cover essential knowledge other programs omit.

For Your Information

A letter to Members of the AEA (on a recent survey on the professional climate in the profession)

To the members of the American Economic Association:

The American Economic Association is today releasing results from a survey of current and former members about the professional climate in economics, conducted under the auspices of the AEA's recently created standing Committee on Equity, Diversity, and Professional Conduct \(CEDPC\)<sup>246</sup> . For the Committee's summary report of the survey results, see here<sup>247</sup> . As the deadline for submitting replies to the survey (February 28) has just passed, the report being released today consists primarily of simple tabulations of the responses. A more extensive report including statistical analyses, analysis of open-ended survey questions, and some comparisons with results of other surveys will be made available in early summer 2019.

Although a full analysis of the survey results remains to be done, it is evident from the findings released today that many members of the profession have suffered harassment and discrimination during their careers, including both overt acts of abuse and more subtle forms of marginalization. This is unacceptable. Excluding or marginalizing people based on their gender, race, or other personal characteristics is not only deeply unfair to those who are excluded, it damages the field as a whole by limiting the diversity of perspectives and dissuading talented people from becoming economists. It is striking that, in an era when women and members of under-represented minority groups have entered so-called STEM fields at increasing rates, the low rates of participation and advancement of women and minorities in economics have changed little in recent decades.

The leadership of the American Economic Association, including our colleagues on the AEA Executive Committee, takes these issues extremely seriously. Based on concerns we heard from our members, the Committee took several steps last year, including

- the preparation of an AEA Code of Professional Conduct<sup>248</sup> , adopted by the membership in April 2018. The purpose of the Code is to help create ”a professional environment with equal opportunity and fair treatment for all economists.”
- the authorization of the aforementioned new standing Committee on Equity, Diversity, and Professional Conduct (CEDPC), chaired by Marianne Bertrand, and the survey on professional climate whose results are being released today. The CEDPC is charged with finding ways to make meaningful improvements in the professional climate in economics.
- the development of EconSpark<sup>249</sup> , a website to provide a safe space for discussion of economics job market developments and economic issues.
- the organization of a featured session on the gender problem in economics at the ASSA meetings in Atlanta<sup>250</sup> , together with continuing efforts to mentor and support female and minority economists.

Building on those measures, in discussions at the Atlanta meetings and in the intervening weeks, the AEA Executive Committee has agreed to take the following additional steps:

- to approve a formal policy on harassment and discrimination<sup>251</sup> , to supplement the Code of Professional Conduct. Acceptance of both the Code and the harassment and discrimination policy will henceforth be required for participation in any AEA-sponsored activity or committee.
- to establish and fund an AEA ombudsperson. The ombudsperson will take and permanently record complaints concerning harassment or discrimination in any professional context; advise and provide resources to individuals experiencing harassment or discrimination; with the complainant’s permission, relay complaints to employers and/or to an AEA liaison; and, as appropriate, investigate or otherwise follow through on complaints. The ombudsperson will also help the Association develop policies and programs to fight harassment and discrimination, including offering training at ASSA meetings.
- to approve a formal vetting process to ensure that candidates for election to the Executive Committee, appointed officers such as journal editors, and recipients of AEA honors have not violated the Code or the policy on harassment and discrimination.
- to ask the membership to approve changes in the bylaws that would permit the Executive Committee to remove an elected or appointed officer—or, if warranted, to revoke the membership of any AEA member—for violations of the Code or the policy on harassment and discrimination.

- to work with the Committee on the Status of Women in the Economics Profession<sup>252</sup> (CSWEP, led by Judith Chevalier), the Committee on the Status of Minority Groups in the Economics Profession<sup>253</sup> (CSMGEP, led by Ebonya Washington and Gary Hoover), and members of the Association to establish and fund a new task force on best practices and training to counter harassment and discrimination. The task force will develop a clearinghouse for best practices/training materials, oversee the development of training programs, and seek out partners (such as other professional organizations) with which to collaborate and share information.

It's important to weed out harassment and discrimination but it's likewise essential to take action to widen the pipeline of women and minorities entering the field and to help those already in the field to advance professionally. Accordingly, the Executive Committee has also agreed

- to work with CSWEP, CSMGEP, and CEDPC to create a task force on high school and undergraduate education and outreach, to develop and disseminate best practices for attracting members of under-represented groups into economics.
- more broadly, to collaborate with CSWEP, CSMGEP, CEDPC, members of the Association, and other partners to expand existing programs and develop new ones (e.g., summer programs, mentoring, conferences) aimed at increasing the participation and advancement within the field of women, under-represented minorities, and other groups that have suffered discrimination.

The AEA will also continue, as a regular matter, to survey its membership about issues that affect their professional lives, including the professional climate and factors affecting working conditions and professional satisfaction. In this regard, please be on the lookout for a planned survey on career concerns coming soon.

We recognize that these are only first steps in addressing some longstanding problems in the profession. However, we are committed to helping make economics—which has given each of us tremendous professional opportunities and satisfaction—fully accessible and welcoming to anyone with the interest and ability to make a career in the field. We ask for the support of all AEA members in this effort.

Feedback on these initiatives is welcome and encouraged through EconSpark<sup>254</sup>. Please click here<sup>255</sup> to share your thoughts. To comment, you will need to login or register.
