During public talks or in teaching contexts I am sometimes asked, whether there exists a clear-cut heterodox alternative to standard theories of individual economic decision-making. While there are some obvious responses to this question pointing to classic concepts - like social emulation of consumer preferences, consumption-learning, rent-seeking behavior, mark-up pricing or the marginal propensity to consume - many of these concepts operate on a systemic, rather than individual level, and are, hence, sometimes difficult to apply directly to individual decisions without invoking further assumptions. Similar issues can come up, when discussing the role of the ascent of behavioral economics and its impact on the development of economics in general (see also here\(^4\) or here\(^5\) for recent evaluations of this matter).

In such contexts it is, in my view, helpful to point out that a fuller heterodox theory of purposeful behavior does indeed exist. It has its roots in the early works of Herbert Simon, builds on "smart heuristics" and is sometimes dubbed 'ecological rationality' (for an introduction see here\(^6\)). It has been developed mainly in psychology and a key idea underlying this approach is that purposeful human action often employs mental shortcuts to approach complex phenomena, that are successful in application and, hence, evolutionary stable. A simple example is the physician’s principle "do no harm" that shortly explicates some kind of MaxiMin decision rule. Another example, is Simon’s idea of satisficing, which can be understood as a shortcut to circumvent costly/impossible procedures of optimization.

In my view, three major arguments can be made for embracing such a view. First, the concept of smart heuristics allows for deriving some of the more systemic heterodox arguments on behavioral patterns (e.g. marginal propensities to consume, cooperative attitudes or herd behavior).

Second, smart heuristics often allow for explaining many of the 'biases' found in conventional behavioral economics instead of simply 'recording' them as anomalies - indeed it makes the latter’s modifications of standard utility functions sometimes look like epicycles in the Ptolemaic theory of celestial motion. For instance, in this vein the famous 'status quo bias' can be rationalized as a form of intuitive defense against fundamental uncertainty (as future incomes or belongings are discounted relative to those already owned).

Finally, a smart heuristics perspective provides conceptual alternatives, which has a twofold impact. For one, these alternative concepts help to illustrate how the tendency to frame findings in behavioral economics in terms of standard models contributes to an "assimilation"\(^7\) of behavioral ideas. For another, smart heuristics may also emerge from dealing critically with the inherent practical implications of the standard approach - e.g., when assuming fundamental uncertainty (e.g. here\(^8\) ) or complex, multi-dimensional choice-options (e.g. here\(^9\) ).

Hence, in sum I would argue that the smart heuristics approach can be seen as a highly useful complement to more established heterodox modes of analyzing behavioral patterns.

All the best,

Jakob

11th Annual Conference in Political Economy (Ferrara, Sept. 2020)

09-11 September 2020 — Ferrara, Italy

Beyond Neoliberalism and Populism: On the Political Economy of our Societies and Economies

IIPPE calls for submissions to the 2020 annual Conference. We particularly welcome papers directly related to the core themes of “moving beyond neoliberalism and populism”, and “building progressive policies and alliances for our societies and economies”. As always, presentations on all aspects of political economy are also welcome. New participants committed to political economy, interdisciplinarity, history of economic thought, critique of mainstream economics, and/or their application to policy analysis and activism are strongly encouraged to submit an abstract.

Submissions may be made as:

- proposals for individual papers (which IIPPE will group into panels),
- proposals for panels,
- proposals for streams of panels,
- proposals on activism.

To submit a proposal, please go to the following Electronic Proposal Form\textsuperscript{10} (EPF), and carefully follow the instructions there. For further information please visit the official website\textsuperscript{11}.

Submission Deadline: 15 March 2020

\textbf{15th Forum of the World Association for Political Economy (Athens, August 2020)}

31 July - 02 August 2020 — Athens, Greek

\textbf{Rethinking Economic Analysis: Political Economy vs Economics}

The broad theme of the conference focuses on the controversy between the two main alternative traditions in economic analysis, Political Economy and Economics. Economics (with their myopic understanding of the economy as simply market relations, neglect of social and political factors and class struggle and their almost overt support for capital against labour) has been historically proved incapable of grasping how economies work and forecast and confront competently economic crises. On the other hand, Political Economy (offering a social understanding of the economy, focusing on the sphere of production, linking economic analysis to social and political factors and to class struggle) has been more successful in comprehending the actual workings of the economy and in analyzing economic crises. However, despite their long-standing failures, Economics continue to dominate academia and policy-making centers, especially in the West. Even after the last global economic crisis and its blatant failure to foresee and to resolve it, its dominance remains unwavered as it is supported by strong vested class interests. Nevertheless, there is growing unrest within both the academia and the society with this failed dominance. Political Economy is the main approach towards which all those dissatisfied with Economics turn.

\textsuperscript{11}http://iippe.org

This conference aims to juxtapose Political Economy and Economics and contrast their positions on the various fields and areas of economic analysis. Within its broad theme, WAPE 2020 invites all contributions that enrich the perspective of Political Economy and expand the ground for further discussion. Indicatively but not exclusively, proposed papers can touch upon the following issues:

- Historical anniversaries:
  - Friedrich Engels’ 200 anniversary: his legacy in Marxism and Political Economy
  - V. I. Lenin’s 150 anniversary: his economic writings
  - Curriculum reform in Economics: How Political Economy can challenge Economics’ dominance of university curricula
  - Contemporary controversies in Macroeconomics: Neoclassicism, Keynesianism and Marxism
- History of Political Economy
- Economic History
- Theory of stages and periodization of capitalism
- Theories and analyses of economic crisis
- Profitability, crises and economic cycles
- Race, class and gender
- Methodology of economic analysis
- Trends and challenges in contemporary economic policy
- Marxism and the Political Economy of money and finance
- Labour process, markets and the Political Economy of Work
- The Political Economy of poverty and inequality
- Political Economy of education
- Political Economy of health and health policies
Environmental Political Economy

Urban and regional economics

Law and Political Economy

World economy: globalization or imperialism?

Send a paper abstract (500 words) and your full curriculum vitae in English to both politiceconomy@gmail.com and wapemember@vip.163.com.

Both individual papers and complete panels on the main theme and proposed topics are welcome. You are also welcome to propose other topics on the theme. There is also the option to apply to attend the forum without a paper. In that case, you will be sent an invitation letter for visa purposes etc. upon registration and payment of registration fees. Submission Deadline: 20 March 2020

1st International ASCOPE Symposium (Paris, June 2020)

11 -12 June 2020 — Paris, France

Agent-Based and Stock-Flow Consistent Models for Complex Economies

The first international ASCOPE symposium is the result of the joint efforts of the MAGECO and MACME networks to organize, for the first time in France, an important international symposium combining agent-based and coherent stock-flow consistent models. It aims to be a fundamental moment in this crucial phase, by allowing researchers from all over the world to discuss their research findings and creating linkages and networks within the AB and/or SFC community. Theoretical approaches, as well as technical and methodological contributions are highly welcome. In particular, we invite researchers working on Agent-based and/or Stock-flow consistent models in various fields – including economics, sociology, psychology and computer sciences – to submit contributions on the following topics:

• AB and/or SFC models for ecological transition, sustainable development, climate change

• Path-dependency, hysteresis and secular stagnation

• AB and/or SFC methodology: design, calibration and validation

• Macroeconomic AB and/or SFC models: Emergence of financially driven business fluctuations and crises, dynamics of debt, growth and technical change, multi-country models, etc.

• AB and/or SFC models of markets: labor, finance, transport, goods and services, housing, etc.

• Artificial intelligence and automation

• Institutional design and change

• Dynamics of economic and financial networks

• Bounded rationality, learning, formation of expectations

How to apply

Please note that only papers using the AB and/or the SFC methodology will be reviewed. Please submit an extended abstract (1 page minimum, 2 pages max excluding references) in pdf format via email. The title of your message should read “Submission to ASCOPE 2020 / [n]”, where n is the number of the key topic of your paper (amongst the list of 9 topics listed above). Please find further information on the official website.

The deadline for submitting papers is December 31, 2019.

3rd Macroeconomics in Perspective Workshop (Paris, April 2020)

29–30 April 2020 — Paris, France

A follow-up of two workshops held at Université catholique de Louvain (2014) and at Université de Lille (2016), this workshop aims at gathering macroeconomists and historians of macroeconomics for a discussion putting current developments in a historical perspective. The 2008 crisis has impelled a flow of new research on topics previously neglected or underresearched by macroeconomics like agents’ heterogeneity, the role of

15mailto:ascop2020@gmail.com?subject=Submission%20to%20ASCOPE%202020%20F%2058n%5D financial intermediaries, empirical microfoundations and non-rational expectations. Alternative classes of models like stock-flow consistent models and agent-based models have also received more attention. Contributions to the workshop should address these developments Examples of the topics that could be addressed include:

- Are there useful lessons to be drawn for present-day macroeconomics from a reexamination of the (old) neoclassical synthesis?

- Assessing the import in DSGE modeling of elements taken from the search and matching literature or the OLG literature.

- The challenge of introducing financial intermediation in DSGE modeling.

- Does agent-based modeling represent a plausible alternative to DSGE macroeconomics?

- Is the rational expectations assumption likely to be overtaken?

- Has the passage from RBC to DSGE modeling been a mere evolution or does it amount to a more radical breach?

- Assessing the debate about intertemporal substitution of leisure.

- Putting the methodological and theoretical challenges to the introduction of heterogeneity in macroeconomic models in historical perspective.

- Assessing HANK modeling

- Does the work on heterogeneity and the integration of finance move DSGE models back towards big macroeconometric models like the MPS model as suggested by Blanchard

- Recent works on fiscal and monetary policy in historical perspective. Where are we on these topics and how novel are the novelties?

Interested authors are invited to send either a communication proposal of about 500 words or a paper in PDF format to via email17.

Submission Deadline: 30 December 2019
4th International Conference on Cultural Political Economy (Staffordshire, Jan 2020)

8-10 January 2020 — Staffordshire University

Engaging with Cultural Political Economy: Neoliberal Crises and Diverse Imaginaries

The Fourth International Conference on Cultural Political Economy will be hosted by Staffordshire University building on the highly successful previous events at Lancaster University (2015 and 2017) and Bristol University (2016). The conference is an important part of the ongoing development of a theoretical and empirical engagement with Cultural Political Economy—the emerging trans-disciplinary approach to enhance the explanatory power of cultural turns in political economy. The organisers welcome proposals for papers and panels on the following, illustrative topics (other themes are also welcome):

- Cultural turns in critical and conjunctural analyses
- Critical Discourse Analysis and political economy approaches
- Critical cultural political economy
- Intersectionalism and political economy
- Social relations and everyday subjectivities
- States, governance and governmentality

Panel proposals and/or abstracts of 200 words should be sent to reach Tom Ward. Find more information about the conference here.

Submission deadline: 8 November 2019

56th ITH Conference ”Capital, Migration and the Left” (Linz, Sept 2020)

24-26 September 2020 — Linz, Austria

Few topics are as politically charged as “international migration”. This ITH (International conference of Labour and Social History) Conference wants to discuss the issue from a global and historical perspective, reaching from the sixteenth century to the present. Changing employment opportunities and income inequalities within and between countries will be its starting point. The agency of migrants and the relationship of the political left (ranging from left-liberal to radical anti-capitalist) to the phenomenon of migration will be situated and discussed within this large frame. We use a broad definition of migration, including free and unfree labour, temporary and permanent migrants, as well as the full variety of status ranging from sans papiers and asylum seekers/refugees to classical migrant workers. Questions to be addressed are:

- Under which conditions do higher-paid workers prefer which response? How has the labour movement responded to this condition? How do migrant workers relate and respond to these varieties?

- Under which conditions do migrant workers prefer which strategy? How are their choices affected by the preferences and actions of their autochthonous competitors on the labour market? How has the political left, including organizations involving migrants, related to the agency of migrants?

- Under which conditions does capital opt for geographical relocation or geographical re-composition? Under which conditions does it opt for one of the other strategies? How has the political left responded to these various strategies?

- Under which conditions does the movement of capital lead to out-migration and/or immigration? How have migration regimes shaped these processes?

The aim of the conference is to discuss these questions at an empirical and a conceptual level and invites papers which duly situate their empirical case or conceptual inquiry within the larger frame of the discussion of capital and labour on the move. Contributions with transnational, (world- )regional or global perspectives or topics are equally welcome.

Proposed papers should include:

- abstract (max. 300 words)

- biographical note (continuous text, max. 200 words)

- full address und e-mail address

The abstract of the suggested paper should contain a separate paragraph explaining how and (if applicable) to which element(s) or question(s) of the Call for Papers the submitted paper refers. The short CV should give information on the applicant’s contributions to the field of labour history, broadly defined, and specify (if applicable) relevant publications. For the purpose of information, applicants are invited to attach a copy of one of these publications to their application. Proposals to be sent to Lukas Neissl\textsuperscript{20}.

Submission Deadline: 19 January 2020

5th Nordic Post-Keynesian Conference (Aalborg, April 2020)

22-24 April 2020 — Aalborg University, Denmark

Traditional economics failed to predict the financial crisis, and traditional theory cannot provide an adequate analysis of the current economic uncertainties in Europe. The economic profession needs to explore theories that are more realistic than the conventional understanding of economic dynamics, institutions and international integration. The themes of the conference are topical and focused on the frontiers of economic research by emphasizing the Post-Keynesian methodological and theoretical approaches to economics. The general equilibrium approach has built in too many unrealistic assumptions to serve as an adequate foundation for the dynamics of the 21st century challenges. Stock-Flow Consistent models lie on the frontier as a possible alternative frame of modeling. Economics students and scholars have become increasingly critical and path-breaking in a number of areas, hence the conference is opened by a PhD-School

The conference will call for new theoretical directions and methods to work with economics than mainstream. Pluralism and problem-based learning will make economics interesting and more relevant to young researchers

The conference in Aalborg in 2020 will focus on three main areas:

- Realism in economic theory: financial instability & Modern Monetary Theory. Methodological alternatives to general equilibrium macroeconomics
- Macroeconomic modeling: Stock-Flow Consistent framework a new approach to modeling
- Pluralism and realism in economics: teaching, research and policy advising

Abstracts should be approximately 500 words and include details of authors. The submission form requires plain text, and we therefore recommend the preparation of a version without rich text formatting to submit here\textsuperscript{21}.

The Association for Evolutionary Economics invites papers for a session at the 2020 Midwest Economics Association (MEA) conference in Evanston, Illinois. We welcome papers that discuss contemporary and historical issues analyzed from original institutional economics perspective, as well as theoretical and methodological inquiries. Case studies and pedagogical discussions, as well as historical and contemporary topics are equally suitable for this session. Panel discussions in which a moderator and three or more panelists discuss a book, and/or topics of current interest are also welcome.

Please submit title, contact information, JEL code with sub-classification numbers and an abstract (250 words) to Zdravka Todorova\(^{26}\), please indicate if you wish to serve as a discussant or chair.

Call for Book Chapter Proposals: "(De)automating the Future"

Technology, it often seems, is our fate. Not only has capitalism’s fossil fuel-based industrialization led to global warming; for many on both sides of the political spectrum the only solution to climate change and other societal problems, such as world hunger and poverty, appears in the form of further technological “innovation.” The future—if there is to be one—seems to belong to technological systems that delegate collective political responsibility to machines and to a class alliance of capitalists and engineers.

The leftist commitment to technological progress, on the other hand, draws on the legacy of a Promethean strain in the Marxist tradition. Regimes claiming to represent the Marxian heritage have often acted as ruthless modernizers, attempting to create the material conditions for an emancipated society whose realization was forever deferred. As Lenin infamously put it: communism is soviet power plus electrification. The recent rise of socialist visions of automation, expressed in books such as Paul Mason’s Postcapitalism (2015), Alex Williams and Nick Srnicek’s Inventing the Future (2015), Peter Frase’s Four Futures (2016), and Aaron Bastani’s Fully Automated Luxury Communism (2019), suggests that the dream of “accelerating” the development of the forces of production, or repurposing existing technologies to alleviate inequality, is making a comeback. At the same time, heterodox readers of Marx remain skeptical. There is, after all, a long tradition of seeing technology as a materialization of capitalism’s logic of abstract domination that only serves the accumulation of capital. Thus, these thinkers claim, technology cannot be easily separated from the antagonistic forces that give rise to it. In Inhuman Power (2019), Nick Dyer-Witheford, Atle Mikkola Kjøsen, and James Steinhoff offer a dystopian vision in which full automation does not abolish capitalism but supplies the technical means to literalize Marx’s claim that capitalism is an “automatic subject.” Moreover, Jason Smith (2017) has recently rediscovered radical auto worker James Boggs’ prophetic claim that automation creates a “surplus people” no longer able to find steady employment. This might have debilitating consequences for the workers’ movement since it exacerbates the fragmentation of those forced to rely on wage labor in order to have access to the means of life.

28mailto:espanet2020@kuleuven.be 29http://www.espanet2020.be

We are seeking chapters that critically investigate automation’s ambivalences from interdisciplinary Marxist perspectives. The publishing format will be an essay collection (to be submitted to Brill’s Historical Materialism book series or other international press). Collectively we hope to raise questions about the automation of manual and mental labor, technology’s affordances for postcapitalism or the transformation and intensification of class antagonisms and capitalist exploitation, and the consequences automation will have for the natural environment. The prophets of technology have only automated the future in various ways; the point remains to change it.

Contributions should be generally oriented around one or more of the following (or thematically similar) questions:

- Is automation the key to postcapitalism or a dubious iteration of technological determinism and Prometheanism?
- How should Marxists assess capitalist concepts like the ”rise of the robots”, ”industry 4.0”, and the ”second machine age”? Is it true that we are currently undergoing a radical new stage of automation or are other forces behind the long downturn?
- Is full automation compatible with the production and realization of surplus value? Can machines create value?
- Where do new technologies stand between opening up spaces of resistance that can lead to meaningful political transformations (or revolution) and transforming or intensifying class antagonisms and the disciplining of laboring minds and bodies?
- How does automation affect the working class, particularly in terms of the categories that potentially divide the class, such as race, gender, nationality, ability, etc.?
- How does contemporary automation fit into Marxist debates around deskilling and the work process?
- Combined and uneven automation? Where do different societies and working classes stand in the global transformation of technology? How have Marxisms outside the United States and Europe approached automation?
- Does the idea of automation have to be reevaluated in the face of the climate crisis? Can there be a long-term, global, and sustainable ”green automation” based on renewable energies? Or is the idea of automation and capital accumulation inextricably linked to a paradigm of growth that will continue to require more resources whose extraction and processing will result in environmental destruction (possibly in parts of the world that do not themselves benefit from automation)?

- What are artistic and cultural responses to automation? Have there been formal innovations responding to the increasing automation of tasks? What about artistic labor itself? Does it constitute a last stronghold against the destruction of specifically human skills or has it already been altered by the same processes that have transformed working conditions in the sphere of (re)production?

- What do socialist feminist, xenofeminist, and social reproduction theories bring to the automation debate? What are the stakes of automation for care, domestic labor, and other gendered work?

Cambridge Journal of Economics: Special Issue on “Financialisation in developing and emerging economies: Manifestations, Drivers and Implications”

The Special Issue aims to provide an assessment of the financialisation process in developing and emerging economies (DEEs). It invites contributions on the theoretical and empirical specificities of the manifestations, drivers and implications of this process in these economies. It encourages interdisciplinary work, both in theory and method, and is particularly interested in papers, which make a conceptual contribution to the literature. The analysis of financialisation in DEEs is relatively novel. It is rooted in earlier discussions about the risks of financial globalisation and liberalisation, including the Latin American Structuralist literature on the hegemonic role of the US dollar, the debate on capital account liberalisation and capital market integration, the Minsky-inspired currency and boom bust dynamics of financial crisis in developing economies, and the critique of financial liberalisation and integration of DEEs.

Recently, a literature has emerged which looks more directly at the financialisation of DEEs. One strand of this literature has focused on its international dimension, particularly the ability of both foreign and domestic actors to exploit interest rate differentials and exchange rate volatility through their increasing participation in asset trading and the political economy implications of such a process. This aspect of DEE financialisation

[^30]: mailto:jesse.ramirez@unisg.ch
[^31]: mailto:johannes.fehrle@unibas.ch is associated with, and reinforced by, the structural dependence of DEEs on capital inflows, which demands appropriate economic policies, such as overvalued exchange rates and high interest rates, that guarantee and contribute to generate attractive financial returns. Another strand of the literature has sought to map the financialisation phenomena encountered in the Anglo-Saxon core onto DEEs. For example, empirical evidence has been used to show the transformation of non-financial corporations (NFCs), i.e., their shift from being primarily involved in real sector activities to becoming financial actors themselves. The debate draws attention to their costly efforts to increase shareholder value, which induces NFCs to decrease productive investments (and employment), affects wages negatively, and increases their vulnerability to (international) market conditions. Further, the literature shows that DEE NFCs have started to rely on long-term bond issuance rather than bank borrowing which has sometimes been associated with a move from bank-based systems towards market-based financial systems.

The above review reflects a rising interest in the issue of DEE financialisation, its manifestations, drivers and implications. The Cambridge Journal of Economics has been a leading outlet for these discussions over the years. However, despite this rising interest, many questions still remain unanswered. An indicative, and by no means exhaustive, list of questions that might be addressed in the SI includes:

- How can financialisation in DEEs be conceptualised and theorized? What is the contribution of different disciplines in theorising financialisation in DEEs?
- What drives financialisation in DEEs? Is DEE financialisation largely driven by their relation with developed countries or are these autonomous processes?
- What are the distinct features of financialisation in DEEs? Can we use the experience of advanced economies as a starting point?
- What are the commonalities and differences between DEEs’ experiences with financialisation?
- How can financialisation be located empirically in DEEs? Can it be quantified? What methods are adequate to investigate financialisation in DEEs?
- How is financialisation related to the ‘productive’ international integration of DEEs?
- What is the role of the state in shaping financialisation in DEEs? Are there specific actors influencing the process?
- What are the implications of financialisation for development, structural change, employment and income distribution?
- What are the policy implications we can draw from the financialisation processes in DEEs?
Submission of Papers

Submissions should be made using the journal’s online submission system. During the submission process, authors should indicate that the manuscript is a candidate for the Special Issue titled Financialisation in developing and emerging economies: distinct manifestations, drivers and implications. Authors are also advised to include a note indicating this in a covering letter that can be uploaded during the submission process. All papers submitted will be considered using the CJE’s normal peer review process. Please refer to the Journal’s information for authors. In line with the general guidelines of the Cambridge Journal of Economics, manuscripts submitted for this Special Issue should seek to limit the usage and preferably avoid mathematical modelling.

Submission Deadline: 31 May 2020

Capitalism & Contention Conference (New York, March 2020)

The New York University, Department of Sociology, New York City is organizing a Conference on Capitalism and Contention. The goal of this conference is to facilitate dialogue and debate among scholars and students who are working at the intersection of political economy and social movement studies. Keynote speaker is Vivek Chibber (New York University) on "Movements and the Many Lives of Capitalism".

We are calling for papers which address the following questions: How have capitalism and capitalist states catalyzed, but also constrained, workplace resistance, labor movements, "identity movements," environmental movements, rebellions, revolutions, and other forms of political contention around the globe over the past century? How and to what extent have these various forms of contention shaped capitalism and capitalist states in turn? Also, how have recent transformations of capitalism, and of class relations, altered the possibilities for and the nature of contentious collective action in the contemporary period? How have, and should, social movements relate to political parties and elections in pursuit of their goals? What are the prospects for radical change in contemporary capitalist societies? To what extent does social movement theory help us answer these questions, and to what extent does it need to be recast, perhaps radically?

To apply send an abstract (300-400 words) via email. Authors of papers accepted for presentation at the conference will be notified by January 7.

Submission Deadline: 31 December 2019

Conference on Achieving Sustainable Development in LDCs (Helsinki, Oct. 2020)

15-16 October 2020 — Helsinki, Finlnd

The Helsinki conference will bring together the academic community, policy-makers and practitioners to solicit new thinking on the challenges and policy recommendations for LDCs for the next decade. The Conference will address the structural challenges and emerging issues LDCs face in pursuing sustainable development. It will also identify policy recommendations, which will significantly impact the extent to which LDCs can meet the SDGs, effectively compete in the global economy and eventually move towards convergence with other more developed economies. While papers addressing any of the SDGs are welcome, the paper presentation at the conference will be organized along the following broad themes:

- Eradicating poverty, promoting sustainable agriculture, ending hunger and malnutrition in the LDCs
- Wellbeing in LDCs: addressing health, education, water, energy, ICT and reducing inequalities within LDCs and between LDCs and other countries
- Rethinking structural transformation in LDCs to achieve strong and sustained growth and robust employment generation, especially for the youth
- Megatrends impacting sustainable development in LDCs: frontier technologies, changing nature of work, migration and demographic change
- Building resilience and sustainability: infrastructure, climate change, natural disasters, environmental degradation, management of natural resources and urbanization in LDCs
- Increasing LDCs’ share in global trade during a time of rising protectionism and, commodity dependence
- Building peaceful, just and inclusive societies, including achieving gender equality
- Mobilizing resources for sustainable development in LDCs: increasing public and private flows, addressing the rising and changing composition of debt, and curbing illicit financial flows

More specific descriptions of each thematic area can be found here. Approximately 5-8 papers will be presented under each of the above broad thematic areas.
This call is open for senior and junior academics, as well as experts from international organizations and NGOs working in these areas, who are all invited to submit paper proposals, highlighting the connection of the proposed paper to one or more of the broad themes identified above and to any of the SDGs, the type of data and analysis that will be used, and the policy area(s) to which recommendations will relate. Please submit the following in the online system:

- The author’s name and affiliation
- 800-1000 word abstract [Word files only]
- The author’s CV, including a list of relevant publications [Word or PDF files]
- The author’s contact details, including email address and phone number
- Whether the author is an LDC national

In case of any additional clarification, please contact the organizing committee via email or visit the official website.

Conference on Strategies for Degrowth in Europe (Vienna, June 2020)

29 May - 1 June 2020 — Vienna, Austria

“Degrowth Vienna 2020 – Strategies for Social-Ecological Transformation” is a four-day conference taking place in Vienna from May 29th until June 1st 2020. The Vienna conference will explicitly focus on exploring strategies for a degrowth transformation and aiming to support strategy development between scholars, practitioners and activists. The conference will complement the 2020 International Degrowth Conference in Manchester. By bringing together practitioners, artists, activists, civil society actors and scientists, we want to integrate different kinds of existing expertise and elaborate promising approaches to transforming the economy in a socially just and ecologically viable way. The conference will have a participatory design, including a thorough documentation process that will generate concrete outcomes for the degrowth movement and research society.

36 mailto:ohrlls-unhq@un.org
37 http://unohrlls.org/event/call-for-papers-achieving-sustainable-development-in-ldcs/
The conference consists of two main parts, firstly understanding past and future transformations and the role of strategies and secondly, strategies in practice:

- Part 1 (Transformations and the Role of Strategy) seeks to explore transformation processes, theories of change and approaches to strategies (for degrowth). Contributions are welcome that focus on theories or concepts of (social-ecological) transformation, historical analyses of social change, or the role of strategy in transformation processes. The aim is to examine pathways, potentials, obstacles and leverage points for social change, and how strategies are developed to affect these transformations. Questions include, but are not limited to: What are the key insights from recent transformation research? How to account for uncertainty and complexity when formulating and evaluating strategies? What are the strategies of the ‘political opponent’, e.g. multinational corporations? What can be learned from successful or unsuccessful actors or ‘change agents’, e.g. social movements?

- Part 2 (Strategies in Praxis) will build on the theoretical and conceptual insights of Part 1 (see above). Part 2 brings together scholars, practitioners, artists, and activists of various thematic fields to collaboratively discuss and work on strategies towards degrowth in a more concrete manner. Contributions that present concrete strategies in thematic fields (e.g. mobility, food, energy, etc.) are desired to showcase the diversity of existing strategies for social ecological transformation. The aim is to also critically reflect on these strategies, to better understand obstacles and leverage points in different contexts, and, where possible, to further advance or develop existing strategies.

We warmly invite scholars, practitioners, activists and artists to send proposals for one or more of the three different forms of contributions: 1. Standard Session, 2. Workshop Session, and 3. Consecutive Sessions. Within these forms, different formats are welcome, and we would like to encourage you to develop the format which fits your purpose best. Each session lasts 90 minutes.

For submission details and further information please visit the official website\footnote{http://www.degrowthvienna2020.org/en/call-for-contributions/} or send an \texttt{mailto:info@degrowthvienna.org}.

\textbf{Submission Deadline: 15 December 2019}
The world is going through a crisis that questions the historical forms of production and social reproduction as well as the forms of production of hegemony in the society. However, the crisis surpasses economic and political concerns, it goes beyond the primary contradictions emerging from the social relations of production established between labour and capital, and puts into question the very reproduction of life from an integral point of view.

The editorial team of Cuadernos de Economía Crítica understand that there are many contributions that have been made in the South and that should be contemplated within the framework of an agenda of the Science of Sustainability. Likewise, we believe that the definition of sustainability and the resulting policies cannot remain in the hands of orthodoxy and corporate power. The Special Issue on ”The Science of Sustainability under Structural Crisis and the Unsustainability of Life” proposes to incorporate these dilemmas within the aspects dealing with the Science of Sustainability. We seek to hierarchize the contributions made from the agendas of the Latin American communities, who resist the advance on life in all its forms. We also try to understand the integral dimensions of the current crisis, the strategies of capital, the resistances and alternatives arising from rebellious peoples. We also aim to receive contributions that analyze social problems and provide diagnoses from research and participatory action, understanding the academy and political action as connected worlds. Transformations in academic institutions, in the research programs of our countries, will not come without an equally directed correlate, outside of them.

Therefore, the Sociedad de Economía Crítica through Cuadernos de Economía Crítica, seeks to stimulate contributions that recognize the crisis and the need for both global and local approaches to ensure the sustainability of life. We call for the submission of proposals for articles and interventions to be part of a dossier to be published in the first half of 2020. Contributions are invited on topics such as (the list is by no means exclusive):

- Contributions from the Ecological Economy and Political Ecology.
- Sustainability from the perspective of Feminist Economics.
- Domains of good living, Living well as alternatives.
- The popular economy and self-managed economy as proposals under construction.
- System of States and world economy: restrictions for autonomous development in dependent countries.
Contributions should be submitted through the submission portal. Each collaborator must register by creating a user as author, and then follow the steps indicated on the same page. Collaborations will be subject to the editorial standards of the journal, available here in Spanish and here in English. For further questions send an email.

History of Economic Society Conference (Utrecht, June 2020)

18 - 21 June 2020 — Utrecht, Netherlands

The Annual Conference of the History of Economics Society is one of the most important international gatherings of historians of economics. Papers dealing with any aspect of the history of economics are welcome, including work related to any period or any school of economic thought. Also welcome are papers that situate economics in wider intellectual and cultural contexts or relate it to other disciplines. Although we welcome proposals for individual papers, proposals for complete sessions are especially encouraged. To submit a paper or session proposal, go to the conference website where there is a link to a form of making submissions. Those proposing papers will be asked to submit an abstract of about 250 words, while those proposing sessions will be asked for an abstract of about 750 words that lists all participants, titles and very brief descriptions of the papers to be included. We encourage scholars from neighboring disciplines to participate. Inquiries regarding session proposals are most welcome, and should be addressed to Marcel Boumans.

Submission Deadline: 1 February 2020

Workshop on "Patents as Capital" (Stockholm, Sept 2020)

8-10 September 2020 — Stockholm

We invite contributions to the workshop “Patents as Capital,” which forms the 2nd workshop of the ERC-funded project PASSIM (Patents as Scientific Information), in collaboration with The International Society for the History and Theory of Intellectual Property (ISHTIP). Patents are regarded as central techniques and indicators of value in the 'knowledge economy’ by linking immaterial knowledge to capital. In intellectual property scholarship, particularly that approaches law as economics or as a regulatory tool, patents are commonly studied as means of commercial and economic strategies. But this focus leaves out the other ways in which patents act as both instruments and representations of diverse kinds of capital: intellectual, cultural, scientific and financial capital(s). The concrete processes by which patents are implicated in and give rise to various practices of capitalisation and valuation remain relatively underexplored. Rather than equating patent with value, or presuming that patents generate intellectual capital, this workshop aims to examine and delineate the workings of patents as capital in their multiple manifestations: as personal privilege, scientific credit, cultural symbol, instrument of credibility and as financial proxies. These are only examples of the queries that we would like to discuss. We welcome cross-disciplinary and interdisciplinary contributions that problematise and analyse the promises and failings of patents as capital and that study the role of patents in such capitalisation processes.

We will give preference to unpublished papers that seek substantive feedback from participants of the workshop. PASSIM will cover the travel and accommodation cost of the selected participants. Any questions can be directed to the organizers of the workshop Björn Hammarfelt44, Gustav Källstrand45 or Hyo Yoon Kang46. Submit proposals up to 500 words here47.

Submission Deadline: 14 February 2020

YSI at International Conference Minsky at 100 (Milan, Dec. 2019)

16-17 December 2019 — Milan, Italy

The Young Scholars Initiative (YSI) is glad to announce a new call for papers. The Keynesian Economics working group is organizing a graduate panel session at the International Conference Minsky at 100: Revisiting Financial Instability. The aim of the conference is to bring together scholars of different traditions/schools of thought to discuss the causes and consequences of financial instability in contemporary economic systems and to assess the legacy of Hyman P. Minsky.

How to apply

All applicants must submit an abstract in English (3000 characters maximum) and a motivation for attending the conference (1000 characters maximum) to the following email: KEWG@youngscholarsinitiative.org48. Accommodation and partial travel support will be offered for selected participants. Please notice that selected candidates must pay their conference fee. Find further information here.\(^{49}\)

13th AHE postgraduate workshop on advanced research methods (Leeds, Jan. 2020)

16-17 January 2020 — Leeds University Business School

Applications are open for funded places at the annual Association for Heterodox Economics postgraduate workshop on advanced research methods in economics. The workshop covers topics in research not typically covered in economics training. It will be held for the fifth time at the University of Leeds, which has a continuing tradition of doing economics in open, critical ways. The workshop is open to any Ph.D. students on economics topics. Funding is available to cover travel, accommodation and subsistence expenses for the above event, but UK-registered Ph.D. students have priority. Whilst applications are welcome from anywhere in the world, funding priority will be given to UK-registered students. Students who have previously attended are not eligible for funding.

Workshop topics include:

- Reorienting economics to match method with social material
- Quantitative analysis applicable to open economic systems
- Qualitative methods
- Social network theory in Economics
- Mixing quantitative and qualitative data
- Publishing work which uses non-standard methodologies

To apply, use the official online form\(^{50}\). For further questions please ask Dr. Andrew Mearman\(^{51}\).

15th Annual AFIT-AFEE Student Scholars Award Competition

The Association for Institutional Thought (AFIT) and the Association of Evolutionary Economics (AFEE) are proud to announce its 15th Annual AFIT-AFEE Student Scholars Award Competition. This competition seeks to encourage undergraduate and graduate students to pursue research topics in the field of Evolutionary-Institutional Economics, and related heterodox schools of thought such as Social and Solidarity Economics, Post-Colonial Studies, and other pluralist methodologies. As a professional association, AFIT is devoted to encouraging and fostering the development of institutional thought.

Students doing research in this vein are encouraged to submit papers that carry on and further advance Evolutionary Institutional Economics. Awards will be given to the top three student papers drawn from the pool of submissions. Winners are then expected to present their research findings during a special session at the 41st Annual Meeting of AFIT as part of the 62nd annual conference of the Western Social Science Association (WSSA), April 1-4, 2020 in Portland, US.

Each of the three winners will receive:

- $300.00 prize
- One-year student membership in AFIT
- Paid WSSA Conference Registration
- Paid Admission to the AFIT Banquet and Presidential Address

In order to be awarded the prize, winning papers must be presented by the student at the special AFIT session. Acknowledgements will be offered at the AFIT Banquet at the WSSA meetings. To enter into this competition, the person submitting must be identifiable as having student status. Submitted papers should be 15 to 25 pages (4,000-7,000 words) in length, including references and appendices, and must include a title page with the title, author, educational affiliation, and email address. Papers should be submitted electronically, preferably as a .pdf file. Please submit your papers at the official website and be sure to select the “Student Scholars Award for members of AFIT” and any other competition for which you would like to be considered.

Conference "European industrial policy - a tool for a Green New Deal" (Brussels, Dec. 2020)

11 December 2020 — Brussels, Belgium

By the end of 2019 the European commission will present a new industrial policy strategy which will favour only the member states in the EU which have already big national champions such as Germany and France. And in the first hundred days the European commission will present its proposal for a “Green Deal”. This is the time for the Left to develop its own demands for a people’s centred green new deal and a left European industrial policy vis-à-vis the neoliberal commission’s approach. As GUE/NGL demanded in its position paper for new EU top job-holders, we need a green planning at EU level with massive public investment to achieve a socially just ecological transition respecting the planetary boundaries. Which are the means to achieve 100% renewable energy generation by 2050, public transport and local railways for rebalancing territories? How to finance refurbishment of housing to fight energy poverty? How and in which sectors can we create millions of urgently needed jobs to fight poverty and unemployment? How to change the European state-aid rules? How to use the European structural funds and the MFF? How to make sure that the European central bank and the European Investment Bank funds social-ecological transition? How to promote local and ecological agriculture with short food supply chains? A radical left green new deal must be based on conversion of the defence sector, a care revolution, and international fair trade.

GLOBE 2019 Winter School in International Relations (Leysin, Feb. 2020)

24-28 February 2020 — Leysin, Switzerland

Located in a historical resort of the Swiss Alps, the GLOBE Winter School in International Relations provides a unique environment for PhD students intending to situate themselves within the IR discipline. GLOBE PhD school builds up from the idea to create innovative PhD network workshops with colleagues from Groningen, Lausanne, Oslo, Brussels, and Erfurt (GLOBE). Our focus on recent epistemological advances in non-positivist scholarship delivers expertise through tailor-made roundtables, PhD presentations, walk & talk sessions and collective readings.

This year, the overall theme is on “Risk, crises and uncertain futures”. Tailor-made roundtables are organised so as to explore and tackle fundamental questions related to new objects of enquiry likely to link issues of knowledge, power, and time in domains as diverse as the environment, security, finance, or development. This is a unique opportunity for PhD students and early post-doc researchers to engage with various facets of the epistemological foundations of the international relations in more than ever uncertain times. While the roundtables are organised around this theme with readings suggested by speakers, the breakout sessions of PhD/post-doc presentations are conceived as an open space to share ideas and receive feedback on projects that don’t need to match these themes.

Application can be done online and should include:

- a CV, with your academic records
- a motivation letter
- an abstract of your thesis and an abstract of the paper/chapter you plan to present at the winter school. (submitted as one document)

International Master’s Course ”Economic Policies in the Age of Globalisation” (EPOG 2.0)

Call for application for the 2-year programme - 2020/2021 for the International Master’s Course ”Economic Policies in the Age of Globalisation”

EPOG 2.0 is an international Master’s Course, developing a pluralistic approach in economics, and in which institutionalist and heterodox approaches are highlighted. The objective of EPOG 2.0 is to train a new generation of experts. Its graduates will be able to assess and rethink macroeconomic, innovation and economic development policies through the lens of the ecological emergency. EPOG 2.0 is an innovative master programme that articulates systematically how sustainability issues penetrate macroeconomic policy-making, innovation trends, corporate responsibility and development activity. The core design of the EPOG 2.0 Master’s relies on the development of an expertise in a specific field and a general understanding of interdependencies among economic policies with a precise, consistent and continuous course progression. Students are being awarded a double diploma from two European (or South African) prestigious universities. The partners include a number of prestigious institutions:

- Berlin School of Economics and Law
- University of Roma Tre
- Kingston University
- University of the Witwatersrand
- University of Paris 13

Job Postings

California State University San Bernardino, US

Job title: Assistant Professor in Economics

The Department of Economics at California State University, San Bernardino invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track position. This position will be at the Assistant Professor level and will start in the Fall 2020 semester – classes start in the second half of August. Applicants must have a Ph.D. by August 2020. We are looking for applicants with research and teaching interests in heterodox economics, feminist economics, or environmental economics. A concern with issues associated with Latin America would be a plus for an applicant, but is not a requirement for the position.

How to apply

Progressive Economy Forum, UK

Job title: Economist

The Progressive Economy Forum (PEF) brings together a Council of eminent economists and academics to develop a new macroeconomic programme for the UK. PEF is looking to recruit an Economist to contribute to and manage its research output and comment on economics issues. The role would suit someone with an informed interest in economic policymaking and related political debates; experience in communicating these ideas to a range of audiences; and a passion for changing the way our economy is run.

We are looking for someone who can work proactively and contribute to helping develop the culture and structures of our organisation as it grows. This is a full-time position, but we are open to considering part-time working arrangements.

Responsibilities

- Writing research papers, policy proposals, briefing materials and articles on economic policy issues, both with PEF Council members and alone.
- Editing research papers, articles and other output from our Council members and other economists for PEF publication.
- Keeping abreast of policy developments and debates in economic policy, with the aim of coordinating PEF’s output in a strategic direction.
- Helping deliver events (e.g. policy workshops, roundtables) related to PEF’s research areas.
- Working with other members of staff to manage PEF’s operations.
- Other tasks as agreed with the Chair of PEF in support of its goals.

Person specification

- Excellent knowledge of debates and issues in economic thought and policy, as evidenced by a degree-level qualification in economics and/or experience working in economic policy (e.g. Civil Service, think tanks, university research) or similar.
- Strategic awareness of how economic policy issues relate to broader political debates and media narratives in the UK, and an understanding of how to effect policy change in practice.
- Excellent writing and editing skills, and the ability to effectively communicate ideas to different audiences and in a variety of formats.
• Analytical rigour (with respect to both qualitative and quantitative analysis).

• Familiarity with important macroeconomic data sets (from e.g. the ONS, Bank of England, OBR).

• Ability to work well alone and within a team, including with high-profile economists and policymakers.

• Commitment to PEF’s values and purpose.

Terms

• Contract: Fixed-term employee contract (6 months), full-time (35 hours a week) with the opportunity for extension. We are open to considering part-time working arrangements.

• Salary: £28,000 to £40,000 per annum, dependent on experience. (Pro rata if part-time.)

• Start date: ASAP

To apply, please send a copy of your CV and covering letter via email.

Call for Nominations: Joseph J. Spengler Book Prize

The History of Economics Society welcomes nominations for the Joseph J. Spengler Book Prize. Books and scholarly monographs in the history of economics published in calendar years 2017 through 2019 are eligible. Original, authored (non-edited) books in the history of economics published, in English originally, during the three calendar years preceding the HES Meeting at which the award is presented may be nominated. Scholarly books and monographs are eligible, but neither textbooks, nor doctoral dissertations, are eligible.

The Selection Committee consists of three members of HES named by the President of HES in the months following the annual meeting. The Chair of the Selection Committee shall prepare a statement to be read at the HES Banquet announcing the Spengler Prize winner. The Prize shall be in the amount of $500.00 US. The winner also shall receive a suitable plaque at the banquet, one ticket for the conference banquet, complimentary conference registration, and reimbursement of expenses incurred to attend the conference to a maximum of $1,000 U.S. In case of a shared Prize, the money shall be divided equally, and two plaques shall be awarded.

How to apply

Up to two nominations can be made per publisher for books published in the period of eligibility. Publishers should send a nominating note to the Secretary of HES. The Secretary will then provide the publisher with the addresses of the members of the judging committee, to whom copies of the nominated book should be sent. The publisher will need to supply four copies. Any person who wants to nominate a book should begin by sending a brief nominating statement to Marianne Johnson, Secretary, History of Economics Society. Please state the author(s), title of the book, publisher, and date of publication when making a nomination.

Application Deadline: 31 December 2019

Calls for Nominations: Awards of ESHET Conference

The European Society for the History of Economic Thought Council (ESHET) is inviting nominations for the Awards that will be announced at the next annual ESHET Conference in Sofia, Bulgaria, 28-30 May 2020:

- The Best Monograph Award is for the best book (not necessarily written in English) in the history of economic thought published during 2018 or 2019. The author can be from any part of the world. The winner will be invited to attend... the Society Conference that follows the announcement of the prize to deliver the Jérôme-Adolphe Blanqui Lecture. For nomination send full bibliographic details of the book, a short statement (in English) of why the book merits being considered for a prize and an electronic copy of the book, if this is available to Sylvie Rivot92.

- The History of Economic Analysis Award is for the best article (not necessarily written in English) in the history of economic thought, published in the issue of a scientific journal during 2018 or 2019 (printed before 1 December 2019). Candid-dates can be from any part of the world. The winner will be invited to attend the Society Conference that follows the announcement of the prize, and will receive 500 euro. For nomination send full bibliographic details of the article, a short statement (in English) of why the article merits being considered for a prize and an electronic copy of the article, if this is available to Robert Dimand93.

- The ESHET Young Researcher Award recognizes scholarly achievements of histo-rarians of economic thought at an early stage of their career. The prize is awarded to scholars below the age of 40 at the time of the annual conference in recognition of outstanding publications in the history of economic thought. It consists of 1,000 euro and a waiving of the conference fee when the prize is awarded. For nomination send a short resume stating the achievements of the candidate and a CV with list of publications to Muriel Dal Pont Legrand94.

- The Gilles Dostaler Award is an award created in the memory of Gilles Dostaler, thanks to the generosity of his widow Marielle Cauchy. This prize recognizes scholarly achievements of young research fellows working on one of Gilles Dostaler’s many fields of interest – e.g., Marx and Classical political economy, Keynes, Hayek, critical approaches to free markets theories, relationships between economics, politics, philosophy and ethics, etc. It is awarded to scholars below the age of 35 at the time of the annual conference in recognition of an outstanding article not necessarily already published or published within the two previous years. It consists of 500 euro and a waiving of the conference fee when the prize is awarded. For nomination contact Alexandre Cunha95.

Self-nominations are not accepted for any of the prizes. Subsequently each nominee will be asked to submit to the Council three publications on which s/he wishes to be judged.
The final decision on each of the prizes will be made by the Council of ESHET in Sofia.

A Modern Guide to State Intervention Economic Policies for Growth and Sustainability

edited by Nikolaos Karagiannis and John E. King — 2019 Edward Elgar Publishing

A Modern Guide to State Intervention investigates the impact of the changing role of the state, offering an alternative political economy for the third decade of the twenty-first century. Building on important factors including history, the role of institutions, society and economic structures, this Modern Guide considers economic and administrative interventions towards changing the destabilized status quo of modern societies. Exploring a variety of theoretical approaches, chapters offer sustainable growth-inducing policies and proposals to address important challenges in this era of neoliberal globalization and financialization. With key contributions by distinguished academics in the field, the book evaluates past efforts and policies and critiques failed perspectives. A critical read for political economics scholars wishing to look beyond orthodox perspectives, this book highlights key areas of contention in modern economic policies. This will also be a vital book for policy-makers and economists looking ahead to a more sustainable economic atmosphere.

Class History and Class Practices in the Periphery of Capitalism

edited by Paul Zarembka — 2019, Emerald Publishing

Only after World War II did scholars move to theorize the distinction between the core countries at the center of capitalism and peripheral countries, often with an added distinction to include the semi-peripheral. Immanuel Wallerstein’s World Systems approach has been particularly important and led the term periphery into common scholarly parlance. Not surprisingly, much work remains to be done to untangle the extreme diversity and complexity of the political economies and resistances against the multidimensional cruelties perpetrated in the world’s many, very different peripheral contexts. Class History and Class Practices in the Periphery of Capitalism addresses this need head-on. A first chapter lays a theoretical groundwork by showing that Marx, in his later life, became aware that historical developments are much more complicated than he originally conceived them to be, and he was not as far away from calling for site-specific analyses. Contributions here carry out just such analyses: they describe specificities for Russia, Portugal, Argentina, and Mexico, offer broader perspectives on post-hegemonic Latin America and Asia, provide detailed analyses of resistances across Africa, and reflect on the deeper meaning of neozapatismo for promoting a shift in the entire terrain.

of discussion. Rich in theoretical depth and empirical rigor, and supplemented by an out-of-the-archive translation of Karl Katusky’s theory of crises, this book is essential reading for students and scholars of political economy and international political economy, and it is of keen interest to anyone working to resist specific capitalist exploitations in their own place and time.

Finance, Growth and Inequality Post-Keynesian Perspectives

edited by Louis-Philippe Rochon & Virginie Monvoisin — 2019, Edward Elgar Publishing

This book introduces readers to some key concepts in post-Keynesian and heterodox economics, in particular the importance of finance in relation to income distribution and growth. The book explores various aspects of financialization, such as its role in pension funds, and explores its consequences especially in developing economies. Readers will recognize other key concepts such as the role of banks, and the effectiveness of monetary policy and its transmission mechanism, and unconventional policies, such as quantitative easing. Considerable space is given to income inequality, a topic that has become increasingly important. Authors explore the growing importance of household debt, and policies that could address inequality. Finally, the book discusses the rising importance of dualism, a much under-researched topic in heterodox economics.

John Maynard Keynes: The Art of Choosing the Right Model

by Mark Hayes — 2019, Polity

John Maynard Keynes is the 20th century’s greatest economist. He sparked an intellectual revolution that transformed economic theory and policymaking. This book, written in plain English with minimal mathematics, is a concise and probing account of his major ideas. Keynes, argues Mark Hayes, showed that economics is a science of thinking in terms of models, in which progress depends on recognising when established models have become obsolete and new ones are required. Hayes outlines how Keynes did this, tracing his progression from the ‘Classical’ model that he inherited through to his masterpiece, The General Theory of Employment, Interest and Money, and beyond. The intellectual narrative is placed in its historical context, from the Versailles Peace Conference in 1919 to Bretton Woods. The final chapters consider the impact of Keynes’s legacy, including his relevance to reform of the Euro. This accomplished study is not only a comprehensive introduction for students and general readers, but also a crystal-clear demonstration of how Keynes’ thought is vital to understanding why contemporary economics needs to discard its old models and embrace profound change.

Macroeconomics

This groundbreaking new core textbook encourages students to take a more critical approach to the prevalent assumptions around the subject of macroeconomics, by comparing and contrasting heterodox and orthodox approaches to theory and policy. The first such textbook to develop a heterodox model from the ground up, it is based on the principles of Modern Monetary Theory (MMT) as derived from the theories of Keynes, Kalecki, Veblen, Marx, and Minsky, amongst others. The internationally-respected author team offer appropriate fiscal and monetary policy recommendations, explaining how the poor economic performance of most of the wealthy capitalist countries over recent decades could have been avoided, and delivering a well-reasoned practical and philosophical argument for the heterodox MMT approach being advocated.

The book is suitable for both introductory and intermediate courses, offering a thorough overview of the basics, while covering everything needed for more advanced courses. Issues are explained conceptually, with the more technical, mathematical material in chapter appendices, offering greater flexibility of lecturer use.

an applied Marxist theory of nationalism, Fuchs explores nationalist discourse in the world of contemporary digital capitalism that is shaped by social media, big data, fake news, targeted advertising, bots, algorithmic politics, and a high-speed online attention economy. Through two case studies of the German and Austrian 2017 federal elections, the book goes on to develop a critical theory of nationalism that is grounded in the works of Karl Marx, Rosa Luxemburg, and Eric J. Hobsbawm. Advanced students and scholars of Marxism, nationalism, media, and politics won’t want to miss Fuchs’ latest in-depth study of social media and politics that uncovers the causes, structures, and consequences of nationalism in the age of social media and fake news.

None so Fit to Break the Chains: Marx’s Ethics of Self-Emancipation

by Dan Swain — 2019, Historical Materialism Book Series, Brill

In None so Fit to Break the Chains Dan Swain offers an interpretation of Marx’s ethics that foregrounds his commitment to working-class self-emancipation and argues for the continued relevance of this principle for contemporary politics. Self-emancipation is frequently overlooked in discussions of Marx’s ethics, but it deeply influenced his criticism of capitalism, his approach towards an alternative, and his conception of his own role as activist and theorist. Foregrounding self-emancipation offers new perspectives on existing debates in the interpretation of Marx, such as the meanings of concepts like alienation, exploitation and utopianism, and can also offer broader insights into the relationship between critical theory and practice that have an enduring relevance today.

Progressive Post-Keynesian Economics Dealing with Reality

by Jesper Jespersen & Finn Olesen — 2019, Edward Elgar Publishing

This book is devoted to the progression of Post-Keynesian economics, taking stock of the previous 10 years of persistent imbalances in many dimensions of macroeconomic ‘reality’. This has given inspiration to Post-Keynesian scholars to make innovative contributions in areas like methodology, macroeconomic modelling and teaching. One challenge discussed in several chapters is how to model a complex macro-system where macroeconomic uncertainty is increasing? This aspect is elaborated in a number of contributions which focus on the role of the financial sector and financialization for macroeconomic

\textbf{Revolutionizing World Trade: How Disruptive Technologies Open Opportunities for All}

by Kati Suominen — Stanford University Press

Revolutionizing World Trade argues that technologies such as ecommerce, 3D printing, 5G, the Cloud, blockchain, and artificial intelligence are revolutionizing the economics of trade and global production, empowering businesses of all sizes to make, move, and market products and services worldwide and with greater ease than ever before. The twin forces of digitization and trade are changing the patterns, players, politics, and possibilities of world trade, and can reinvigorate global productivity growth. However, new policy challenges and old regulatory frameworks are stifling the promise of this most dynamic, prosperous, and inclusive wave of globalization yet. This book uses new empirical evidence and policy experiences to examine the clash between emerging possibilities in world trade and outdated policies and institutions, offering several policy recommendations for navigating these obstacles.

\textbf{Towards a Political Economy of Degrowth}

edited by Ekaterina Chertkovskaya, Alexander Paulsson and Stefania Barca — 2019, Rowman and Littlefield

Since the 1970s, the degrowth idea has been proposed by scholars, public intellectuals and activists as a powerful call to reject the obsession of neoliberal capitalism with economic growth, an obsession which continues apace despite the global ecological crisis and rising inequalities. In the past decade, degrowth has gained momentum and become an umbrella term for various social movements which strive for ecologically sustainable and socially just alternatives that would transform the world we live in. How to move forward in an informed way, without reproducing the existing hierarchies and injustices? How not to end up in a situation when ecological sustainability is the prerogative of the privileged, direct democracy is ignorant of environmental issues, and localisation of production is xenophobic? These are some of the questions that have inspired this

Understanding Marxism

by Richard D. Wolff — 2019, Democracy at Work

Understanding Marxism is a small book, written by Richard D. Wolff in collaboration with the staff of Democracy at Work, a 501c(3) non-profit founded by Wolff. There are rising demands for accessible introductions to Marxism and to the social changes it suggests. This essay responds to that interest. It seeks to provide bases for real solutions now that the flaws and failures of contemporary capitalism are exposed again, and again. Marxism always was the critical shadow of capitalism. Their interactions changed them both. Now Marxism is once again stepping into the light as capitalism shakes from its own excesses and confronts devline. Hopefully this book can help our era’s renewal of Marxism.

Veblen’s America: The Conspicuous Case of Donald J. Trump

by Sidney Plotkin — 2018, Anthem Press

The astonishing political rise of Donald Trump sent seasoned observers scurrying for clues and explanations. How did Trump happen? Of course no one guide will suffice, but a surprisingly helpful one, suggests Sidney Plotkin, is the early twentieth-century American radical, Thorstein Veblen. In remarkably vivid ways, Veblen understood the enduring American allure of figures such as Trump. [NP] As Plotkin shows in “Veblen’s America,” Trump’s booming persona springs noisily out the country-town hucksterism that Veblen sardonically depicted, its fabulist habits fitting Trump’s “truthful hyperbole” to a tee. But Veblen saw darker, more ominous forces in American life too—habits of barbaric violence, misogyny and xenophobia—forces that foreshadowed Trump’s appeal to what Veblen called a deep “sclerosis of the American soul.” New Deal liberalism helped mute the strains, but economic crisis and the neoliberal response aggravated them. Donald Trump’s appeal to hate made their revival unmistakable.

194 http://www.lulu.com/spotlight/democracyatwork
To shape the study, Plotkin introduces readers to Veblen’s critical institutional theory and its application to both the American case generally and to the Trump family story in particular. With Veblen as foundation, he examines three generations of Trumps as they engage the forces of American development: Friedrich Trump, the hard-scrabble immigrant grandfather, on the make in the gold mining towns of the Pacific Northwest; Fred Trump, the father, who showed the way in using the loose rules of American housing policy to become a captain of local industry; and Donald J. Trump himself, who, having first burst onto the New York City scene as a burgeoning celebrity entrepreneur of the neoliberal era, then turned against neoliberal globalism, proclaiming himself the one and only savior of working-class America. As Plotkin shows, Trump’s poisonous ascendancy exposed a barbaric malevolence that has long torn at the fabric of American democracy and its aspirations for equality.
