So, these days the recipients of the economics 'nobel prize'\* in economics<sup>4</sup> have been announced. It went to Bernanke, Diamond and Dybvig, that is, three male US-based economists, which is, let's say, consistent with the pattern of past choices by the same committee. While Bernanke is quite well-known due to his role as a FED chairman, Diamond and Dybvig are probably better-known for their 1983 paper on bank runs<sup>5</sup>. The paper is somewhat sterile as its two equilibrium-outcome approach (a 'stable' outcome and a 'bank-run' outcome) is very much based on ad-hoc assumptions and amounts to a mere existence proof. I have repeatedly found that this paper was much cherished after the financial crisis – I had many mainstream colleagues back then, who pointed me to this paper saying that mainstream economics had all this covered. This was a pity as the paper focuses very much on the role of deposits and thereby implicitly downplays the impact of risk-seeking and credit expansion, which made the paper somewhat beside the point. Back then, I emphasized alternative viewpoints, such as advanced by Kindleberger or Minsky, which led to the same 'paradigmatic' controversies as they seem to pop up today (see here<sup>6</sup>, here<sup>7</sup> or here<sup>8</sup> for a focus on Bernanke).

In a somewhat tragic mishap, even the committe's press release<sup>9</sup> repeats that error by stating that for "the economy to function, savings must be channelled to investments", ignoring that current investment is typically financed by means of credit or past savings so that, for any given period, the inverse causality applies. You might say this error is shocking or disappointing, but you should all have known that economics is known as the 'dismal science'. In reality, economics could, of course, be a science of hope, but decisions like these and the intellectual pathways underlying such decisions are, in my view, mainly responsible for the 'dismal'-label being somewhat accurate ;-)

To be fair, the Diamond and Dybvig paper also has a constructive aspect as it motivates some sensible macroprudential policies on the deposit side, like deposit insurance or central bank reserve provisioning. But still, paradigmatic closure is all too prevalent in economics, it complicates our efforts and stands in the way of progress. And as this is mainly a matter of attitudes, it is worth noting that different attitudes are indeed possible, and we can even observe them occasionally within the mainstream. A neat example is given by a book featured in this issue of the Newsletter, Anti-Blanchard Economics<sup>10</sup> by Emiliano Brancaccio<sup>11</sup>, which is accompanied by a somewhat kind endorsement by Olivier Blanchard himself:

”When Emiliano asked me to endorse Anti-Blanchard Macroeconomics, I was a bit taken aback. You can guess why. But I agree with him that we should always question our assumptions, confront them with the facts, and be open to change if the facts dictate it. [...] For the time being, I stand by the conclusions of my textbook, but I am happy and indeed eager to see them challenged.”

You can still disagree with some of the conclusions in Blanchard’s widely read textbook, but I admit: I like the attitude!

All the best,

Jakob

Evolutionary and Institutional Economics Review: Special Issue on "Microfoundation of Evolutionary Economics and Its Application"

Guest Editor: Kazuhiro Kurose<sup>12</sup> (Tohoku University)

Associate Editor: Hiroshi Nishi<sup>13</sup> (Hannan University)

The Evolutionary and Institutional Economics Review<sup>14</sup>, an official journal of the Japanese association of evolutionary economics, calls for papers on a special issue on

"Microfoundation of Evolutionary Economics and Its Application"

Our society and economic system are huge and rapidly evolving with technological progress. Meanwhile, the system is organised by decentralised and minimally rational agents. The system sometimes faces severe economic fluctuations, but it mostly realises seemingly spontaneous stability in its evolutionary process. How can such stability with evolution in a huge and decentralised economic system be established? What is its plausible foundation working at a microeconomic level? How is that foundation associated with an aggregate economic and social phenomenon? Standard economics supposes the rational behaviour, preferences, technologies, markets, institutions, and organisations as given, and answers that this is because there exists a unique equilibrium that realises an efficient resource allocation under a certain set of assumptions.

However, in reality, most economic entities change or evolve. Therefore, as far as the perfect rationality of economic agents and equilibrium are placed at the core of the theory, it is difficult to correctly recognise and analyse the real economy where many entities change or evolve as it stands. Hence, an evolutionary point of view is the best way to understand the economy and its development, which Shiozawa, Y., Morioka, M., & Taniguchi, K. (2019) Microfoundations of evolutionary economics, Springer, put as the central dogma of evolutionary economics. Their book encourages us to build an independent approach with a solid and original microfoundation to truly consider the nature, causes, and effects of economic evolution. It also aims to creatively deconstruct the microfoundation of standard economics with an alternative approach.

In this vein, the Evolutionary and Institutional Economics Review (EIER)<sup>15</sup> plans to launch a special issue on "Microfoundation of evolutionary economics and its application". The special issue calls for papers on foundational, theoretical, applied, and empirical studies in evolutionary economics. Studies in management science are warmly welcomed as firms and organisations are the warehouses of innovation and technological

- Foundation of economics from an evolutionary perspective
- Management science in evolutionary economics
- Evolution and institution in economics
- History of thought for microfoundation and evolutionary economics
- Prices, demand, and structural dynamics from an evolutionary economics perspective
- Value, distribution, and production in evolutionary economics
- Applied evolutionary economics (e.g. input-output analysis, agent-based modelling, empirical analyses, computer simulation)
- Economic policy in evolutionary economics in the age of with/post-COVID-19.

6th International ASTRIL Conference: The Labour Market in a Time of Crisis, Inflation and Deglobalisation (Rome, January 2023)

19-20 January 2023 — Rome, Italy / online (hybrid mode)

After two years marked by the Covid-19 pandemic crisis, the war in Ukraine and the strong upswing in commodity and energy prices have fuelled further concerns over international financial stability and prospects for economic growth. How to tackle inflation, economic stagnation, further social polarisation, the restructuring of value chains and increasing private and public debts are all topics that are at the centre of current economic policy debates and dilemmas, the answers to which will affect the population's living standards in the near future. In particular, the issue of how to minimise the fall in income growth and defend the purchasing power of wages against inflation has replaced the worry over the last fifteen years over deflation driving economic policies.

The Sixth International ASTRIL<sup>17</sup> Conference aims to bring together works in these fields on both theoretical and empirical grounds. Contributions in the following topics are particularly welcome:

- 1. Wages, inflation and collective bargaining: In advanced countries, a reform in the process of collective bargaining and structure of work contracts was already needed before the recent upswing in prices due to the decoupling of changes in labour productivity and real wages over the last decades and due to changes in the content of jobs and the degree of workers' autonomy fostered by technological changes. This reform is still more urgent nowadays after the upswing in actual and expected inflation rates: how to defend real wages without triggering a wage-price spiral will be one of the main economic policy issues over the next few years.
- 2. Macroeconomic perspectives: Despite the expected fall in output growth, central banks are reacting to the upswing in prices by raising interest rates based on the assumption that a restraint on the demand side is needed to contain increasing inflation. While the question is open as to whether other economic policy instruments would be more suitable to fight cost inflation, the rise in interest rates will negatively affect private and public debt sustainability and will narrow available fiscal spaces due to the increase in the cost of the service of the public debt. This is occurring precisely when in advanced countries fiscal authorities need to plan or have already planned a reduction in taxes and/or an increase in transfers and military and social expenditure in order to minimise the impact on real incomes of the worsening in terms of trade and help Ukrainian war efforts. In Europe, the size of this narrowing of available fiscal spaces is different for periphery and core countries, and this calls again, as during the pandemic, for a change in the European Treaties in order to avoid a deepening of macroeconomic imbalances and help the implementation at European level and in each country of industrial policies that are able to face the ecological crisis, geographical disparities and a slowdown in labour productivity. Contributions are welcome on how to reform European Treaties and European economic perspectives according to different economic policies and the implementation of the Next Generation EU plans.
- 3. Structural changes and the labour market: In addition to the worsening of growth prospects, over the next years the European labour market will be affected by structural changes in the weights of the various sectors and the type and amount of skilled and unskilled jobs as a consequence of further automation processes, the implementation of the Next Generation EU plans and deglobalisation. The effects of these changes on the amount of labour unemployment and underemployment have still to be investigated together with the content and funding of public schemes able to guarantee full employment and a decent standard of living for all the European population.

- 4. The reshaping of the welfare systems: The recent crises have shown the centrality of public health service and income support measures. This implies rethinking the relationship between the private and public supply of essential services and the degree of universalism of the welfare system.

All interested should write the topic that the paper refers to (1, 2, 3, 4) in the abstract and send the abstract and session proposal (4 papers at least) to: astril@uniroma3.it<sup>18</sup>. You can access the official CfP here<sup>19</sup>.

GAIA: Special Issue on "Ecological Perspectives for Science and Society"

After almost 10 years of research and action in Real-world Labs \(RwLs\)<sup>20</sup>, this special issue of GAIA aims to present and analyse the current state of the art of methodology, scope, and objectives in RwL research. In particular, we invite empirical evidence and reflection on the impacts of RwLs on sustainability transformations. This special issue was initiated in the context of the RwL conference<sup>21</sup>, held in June 2022 in Karlsruhe, which brought together 300 researchers, practitioners, and intermediaries. With 115 contributions presented at the conference, the broad variety of projects and the emergence of a growing and dynamic transdisciplinary community was showcased. Nevertheless, it became clear that the growing interest in this field of transdisciplinary and transformative research needs a thorough and encompassing perspective on the traceable and substantial impacts of RwLs and adjacent approaches on sustainability transformations.

Building on existing conceptual, methodological and typology-oriented scholarship, we want to draw further attention to the different impacts and impact mechanisms of RwLs and their adjacent approaches. We understand impacts as demonstrable and practical effects and results of RwLs on sustainability transformations, through real-world experiments and RwL structures. This also includes preliminary steps like generated products, immediate outputs and achieved outcomes (see Luederitz et al. 2017; Williams and Robinson, 2020). Our core interest lies in the analysis of RwLs impacts on and for a transformation to sustainability.

Initial concepts for assessing the impact of real-world experiments have been proposed (Luederitz et al., 2017; Wiek et al., 2014; Williams and Robinson, 2020; van Mierlo et al., 2010 ) and the importance of the structural dimension of RwLs has been emphasised (Schneidewind et al., 2018; Torrens and von Wirth 2021; Kivimaa and Rogge, 2022). Empirical and comparative evaluation of RwL impacts nevertheless remained scarce. Hence, we welcome comparative inquiries or single case studies, qualitative as well as quantitative assessments, possibly building on these or other substantial evaluation frameworks. In order to enhance rigour, depth, comparability, and cross-case learning, we welcome the systematic analysis of impacts. Contributions should describe the impacts of their RwL with reference to addressed fields (mobility, energy, consumption, biodiversity, equity, etc.); the types of impact aspired (physical change, introduction of new actor groups, changes in governance or regulation, technical innovation, learning, inner transition, socially robust knowledge etc.); the mechanism, practices or theory of change (direct/indirect impacts, effect chains, process information on inputs, products and outputs, creating space for learning, systemic interventions, synergies etc.); the scale of impacts (within the RwL, beyond the RwL, neighbourhood/regional/(inter-)national level, certain actor groups etc.); the temporal pattern of the impacts (short/mid/long-term); the relation between intended and actual impact (intended/unintended, expected/unexpected, positive/negative from different actor perspectives etc.); the geographical and/or cultural setting; and feedback-effects from the impacts to the RwL itself. Additionally, we explicitly invite contributions produced in co-authorship with practitioners.

We invite systematic analysis of RwL impacts in the following topical areas (further impact-related topics can be proposed):

- Socio-ecological systems change including, e.g., nature-based solutions, circular-economy, biodiversity in urban contexts or nature conservation and RwLs
- Individual, collective, and social learning in and through RwLs including (higher) education perspectives, relating learning to sustainability transformations
- Communication, inner transition, relational approaches and cultures of sustainability as well as related practices and their impact
- Governance, institutions, and policies supporting democratic participation and transformation
- Social and technical innovation as well as exnovation and unlearning, including the interplay of both phenomena

- Regulatory sand-boxes and experiments and their impacts on sustainability transformations
- Arts, design and culture in transdisciplinary research
- Systems of RwLs, including networks of collaboration of RwLs as part of a larger RwL-infrastructure
- Spatial planning and geography of transitions in relation to RwLs Scaling and transfer, including practicable ways to amplify the impacts of RwLs and RwLs as amplification catalysts
- Perspectives and roles of practitioners for the generation and evaluation of impact, including the establishment of communities of practice
- Methodologies of monitoring, evaluation and impact assessment of RwLs

Authors are encouraged to submit abstracts to the SI guest editors. Upon acceptance, authors will be invited to submit full manuscripts. Papers will be peer reviewed. Upon acceptance, they will be published as Open Access, with no author fees charged. Papers should be written in English with a short summary (if possible) in German and English. However, in exceptional cases, papers in German may also be accepted.

Please submit your abstract (500 up to 1,000 words) indicating the article type (research article, forum contribution or design report) via E-Mail to: Felix.Wagner@kit.edu<sup>22</sup> the “pluriverse” of post-capitalist alternatives) continues to grow as they respond to the current global crises. Surely, there is already an abundance of transformative practices, utopian visions, and transition theories. However, most of this landscape is unknown, since they do not make headlines in the mainstream media and are largely neglected by the political and economic elite. Moreover, the pluriverse is dynamic, diverse, and constantly evolving, adding to the complexities of social transitions we are witnessing today.

This call for papers invites its potential contributors to share their knowledge of the pluriverse and help address the question of how to co-develop an inclusive and dynamic knowledge of progressive alternatives (to capital, carbon, and coloniality) and make this knowledge a historical force that actively empowers and synergizes myriad actors.

More particularly, this special issue invites critical reflections on the contradictions between centralist and decentralist tendencies and the dilemma of unity vs diversity as perhaps the most critical problem for many movements within pluriversal politics. Historically, authoritarian movements have shown a greater capacity to overcome this dilemma in favor of an imposed unity, acting against diversity. However, the trillion-dollar question for the movements in the pluriverse of progressive alternatives is how to create dynamic and sustainable synergies across multiple differences that would result in fully-fledged systemic replacements.

To be considered for inclusion in this special issue, please first email an extended abstract of no more than 500 words to S A Hamed Hosseini at hamed.hosseini@newcastle.edu.au<sup>26</sup>. Please use “Special issue - Prospects of a Pluriversal Transition” in your email’s subject line.

The idea of an International Marxist Feminist Conference was originally brought into being, and was since then continuously organized, by the feminist section of the Berliner Institute of Critical Theory (InkriT) around the German sociologist and philosopher Frigga Haug. It was held in Berlin (Germany) for the first time in 2015, followed by an increasingly international second congress in Vienna in 2016, the third one took place in Lund (Sweden) in 2018 and the last one was held online (from Basque country) in 2021. This Conference will be organized and funded by transform! europe EUPF <https://www.transform-network.net><sup>28</sup>, along with the Rosa Luxemburg Foundation <https://www.rosalux.de/en/><sup>29</sup> and the Fundacja Naprzód <http://fundacja-naprzod.pl/><sup>30</sup>

CONFERENCE DESCRIPTION

In a post-pandemic world, further shaken by increasing precarity and military conflicts, gender relations and labour struggles take a sharper, possibly radical, turn. Growing insecurity pushes the responsibility and maintenance of increasing amounts of care work onto those who are traditionally forced to provide it: women, migrant workers, and the poor. Since the 1990s, the precarization of the labour market, reinforced by supposedly post-political narratives, has allowed institutionalised health and care systems to be dismantled, shifting their functions to informal, external networks or already overwhelmed individuals. Our recent experience of lockdown, has further expanded the financial potential of globalised digital-based corporations, making them the new daily reality and core of capitalist production. The ongoing murderous European border regime and the Russian aggression against Ukraine further intensify the sense of insecurity and deprivation. The current backlash takes us decades back, with the anti-gender movements and fascist tendencies combatting women's and minority rights endangering the future of the next generations. In these transitions, critical feminist analysis and responses become a necessary companion of social diagnoses and reactions, making these largely invisible changes comprehensible and allowing for the articulation of new challenges as well as new forms of resistance. During our conference, we would like to focus on feminist theoretical, political, cultural, and artistic responses to current crises.

CONFERENCE 5-POINTS AGENDA

- Dimensions of care and reproduction in neoliberal societies: exploitation of reproductive labour, love power. Reproductive (in)justice: rights, technologies (surrogacy, in vitro, adoption etc), “birth strike”, environment and natality, LGBTQIA+ rights, migration, disabilities, and the nation-states politics.
- Contemporary capitalisms: digitalization, precarization, externalization of care labour and production, climate crisis, surveillance, and border industries. The body as commodity and battlefield: exploitation, violence, biotechnology.

- Healthcare and elderly care in the world after pandemic. Privatization of health-care services
- Is Intersectionality Enough? – The Actuality of the Thirteenth Theses of Marxism-Feminism – class-race-gender in a Marxist- Feminist perspective today.
- Women in military conflicts: Rosa Luxemburg’s forgotten warnings, dimensions of violence. Homefront and the battlefield. Fundamentalist takeovers. Forms and strategies of contemporary resistance: International Women’s Strike, refugee networks and solidarities, unionizing as activism and politics.

The participation in the International Marxist Feminist Conference is free of charge. We invite individual papers and panel proposals. We also invite literary and artistic responses and feminist theory/practice contributions.

We will try to provide some costs of the speakers (travel and accommodation), please signalize your interest in such support in your presentation/panel proposal.

Please send your proposals (no more than 300 words + a short bio/affiliation) by 31 January 2023 to: apps@marxconference.com<sup>31</sup>

Conference Theme: Is Economics the Tragic Science? Critical responses to DeMartino’s harm-centric economics

Organised and sponsored by LSBU Business School & London Centre for Business & Entrepreneurship Research<sup>34</sup>

In his most recent book, The Tragic Science<sup>35</sup> (2022), Professor George DeMartino (University of Denver) argues for a harm-centric economics. Economic policy analysis recognises that most economic interventions entail harms along with benefits (economic growth, for example, has ineluctable distributional consequences). But the notion of harm that economists standardly accept is, DeMartino argues, highly restricted. Harms are assumed financially compensable, and reducible to a single type – thwarted preference or diminished welfare. This limited conception of harm blinds economists to the real damage that economic policy interventions can inflict and this ought, DeMartino suggests, to encourage us to revisit the notion of harm in economic theory and practice.

The Tragic Science builds on DeMartino’s vanguard work in economics and ethics (DeMartino, 2011; DeMartino and McCloskey, 2016; see also, White, 2019; Dolfisma and Negru, 2019) and breaks down the barriers between economics and broader conversations around, for example, the psychological and health impacts of public policy, social inclusion, economic democracy, and endemic poverty.

The conference will be of interest to academics and applied economists in policy and business. The issues raised by professor DeMartino’s new book are wide-ranging and conference presentations are invited in the following (non-exhaustive) areas: professional economic ethics, economics and future generations, the capabilities approach to policy analysis, sustainability, economics and social inclusion, deliberative democracy, economics and inequality, economics and identity, race and gender, harm-centric economics and business ethics. Presentations are also invited that address the implications for economic methodology of a richer conception of harm.

Palgrave Insights into Apocalypse Economics: Call for Heterodox Contributions

Series Editor: Richard Westra

Publishing Editor: Ellie Duncan<sup>40</sup>

About this book series

The series offers a non-sectarian outlet for Marxist and critical heterodox economics scholarship on the tsunami of apocalyptic tendencies enveloping the global economy and society. Its guiding premise is that neoliberal policies from the 1980s not only failed to rejuvenate capitalist prosperity lost with the demise of the post-Second World War ‘golden age’ economy, but in fact have generated a widening spectrum of pathologies that threaten humanity itself. The series cultivates cutting-edge political economic analysis of the processes euphemised as ‘globalization’ and ‘financialization’, examining the impact of crises, austerity and inequality in the context of the recessionary, deflationary, inflationary, and stagflationary conditions that have beset the world economy in recent decades and into the 21st century. It covers themes such as the impact of monopolization and oligopolization in the new economy of information technologies, and the low wage production outsourcing and global social marginalization which accompanies that, as well as climate change, global environmental despoliation, disease pandemics, corrupted food systems and land-grabbing, rampant militarism, cybercrime and terrorism – all issues which defy mainstream economics and conventional political policy solutions.

The series invites work that is hard-hitting, inter/trans-disciplinary and multi-perspectival. It welcomes both theoretical and empirical writing with foci upon advanced and developing economies and encourages future-directed thinking on possibilities for another, better world. In particular, new and up-and-coming scholars are invited to submit their critical ideas and analysis. The series readership draws in academics, researchers, students, progressive governmental and non-governmental actors and the academically-informed public.

Review of Evolutionary Political Economy: Special Issue on "Envisioning Post-Capitalist Utopias via Simulation: Theory, critique and models"

Hanno Pahl (pahl.hanno@gmail.com)

Manuel Scholz-Wäckerle (manuel.scholz-waeckerle@wu.ac.at)

Jens Schröter (schroeter@uni-bonn.de)

In this Call for Papers we invite contributions critically assessing different forms and/or practices of utopian transformation studies from an evolutionary political economy perspective. We thus welcome models, simulations as well as theoretical and critical discussions from respective fields (economic sociology, media and cultural studies, complexity economics, evolutionary economics/political economy, institutional economics), debating the nexus of critique, utopia and simulation as well as setting forth a process of mutual engagement in such endeavours.

The latest phase of capitalist development brought a series of critical processes to the foreground, drastically reshaping economic conditions of reproduction, social strata of identity and class as well as the planetary biosphere and its climate. Serious vulnerabilities and contradictions have emerged around the core institutions of capitalist development: the state, the market and the money form of capital. The current global political economic configuration demands strong proposals engaging in interdisciplinary debates about long-run futures of societal evolution, thereby reflecting and going beyond current transition and transformation studies.

Utopianism has always been a controversial topic. The recent decades however have seen a revival of scientific utopianism, ranging from treating it as a distinct and powerful methodological strategy to the envisioning of real utopias. The idea of developing a theoretical apparatus radically negating the core institutions in political economy is not a novel one for the study of utopias.

Specific to this SI is the methodological approach. The call for this special issue asks explicitly for contributions that are treating utopian transformational evolution with social simulation methods (top-down or bottom-up models), in order to enrich and sharpen counterfactuals through concrete models in large-scale in-silico experiments.

The Special Issue has two central objectives relating to:

<sup>41</sup><https://link.springer.com/series/15867>

- (1) Utopian studies and simulation in scientific evolution
- (2) Utopian studies and simulation of the evolving political economy

The first pillar situates utopias and simulations in the ontology, methodology and epistemology of scientific evolution. The second emphasizes critical assessment of the evolution of political economy's core institutions (state, market, money) in utopian perspective. On behalf of this differentiation we may highlight following central research question:

- How can computational social simulation contribute in assessing imaginary economies and
- utopian transformation studies?

We invite papers either

- presenting and discussing models and simulations of utopias and alternative worlds and/or their critical theoretical discussion (e.g. post-capitalist production and coordination, degrowth, commons, democratic planning, money forms, automation. . . )
- emphasizing the role of utopias and simulations for transformation studies (e.g. cultural anthropology and evolution, mediation and transformation, imaginary economies, social-ecological transformation,. . . )
- discussing the role of utopias and counterfactuals for theory-building in economics/political economy (e.g. institutional and technological change, societal evolution, quantitative and qualitative change. . . )

URPE Panels at the 17th Annual URPE @ EEA Annual Conference (New York, February 2023)

23-26 February 2023 — Sheraton Times Square, New York, US

URPE Panels at the 17th Annual URPE @ EEA (Eastern Economics Association) Annual Conference

URPE<sup>44</sup> members are invited to submit entire organized sessions or individual papers to URPE for our participation in this year's 49 Eastern Economics Association Annual Conference to be held in New York February 23 – 26, 2022. (See Eastern Economic Association conference website<sup>45</sup> for more information.) In its seventeenth year, URPE @ EEA is continuing to provide a forum for URPE members and economists across the heterodox spectrum to meet and engage with each other, and to continue to develop the frontiers of radical political economic theory.

Organised Sessions (Panels) are especially welcome and strongly encouraged!

URPE targets building sessions of 3 papers given the short sessions (1 hour 20 minutes), but they can be 4. (Proposals with 3 can have a 4th added if URPE receives a related single paper proposal that fits there and nowhere else, but again we aim for 3.) Given their short length, sessions that URPE builds out of individual papers do not have discussants, in order to maximize time available for discussion by the audience. However, proposals for fully formed sessions may have discussants and/or chairs different from the presenters, if those organizing such panels feel that would benefit the work being presented and discussed.

Submissions for complete sessions, or individual papers for URPE to compile into sessions, will be made through the portal for the conference.<sup>46</sup> Please make all inquiries about submissions to Al Campbell at al@economics.utah.edu<sup>47</sup>.

Rules and Notes for submissions to URPE @ EEA:

1. All presenters must be dues-paying URPE members by the time of the deadline (November 15, 2022). Please email urpe@urpe.org<sup>48</sup> if you have questions about membership.
2. URPE membership is not a requirement for discussants or chairs not presenting, but we do encourage people submitting complete sessions with such people included to encourage them to join URPE, as part of building URPE so that we are here

<sup>46</sup><https://www.meetingsavvy.org/eea>

in the future to continue organizing the development and dissemination of radical political economy.

3. Detailed step-by-step instructions for registering through the portal are given below. Be sure to follow them for your proposal for your session or paper to be sent to the URPE coordinator to put on an URPE program. If you propose to the general EEA then URPE will not know you are applying, and so you will be put onto a general EEA panel and not into an URPE session.

Step-by-step Mechanics of the Procedure for Submitting a Proposal for a Paper or Panel

1) Go to the portal for the conference at <https://www.meetingsavvy.org/eea><sup>49</sup>. It will ask for your email. Put that in and advance, and it will ask for your Password (for the Eastern Economics Association). If you have been to a past URPE@Easterns Conference or in general are a member of the EEA you will have one (though you may have lost it), put it in and advance. If you never had one or lost it, follow the link for people making a first visit to the EEA and you will get a password and then return to here and proceed. Advance and you come to the Member Management Portal.

2) Before you can submit a paper or panel you must register to submit a paper. Because of the way URPE has participated in the Easterns over many years, we can register to submit a paper or panel for free, but we must first register for the conference. In the column at the left click on “Membership/Registration/Donation”. A page with a box “Membership” and a box “Registration/Other Items” opens. Most of you will register for the conference with the item “URPE Registration 2023” for $185. (Note you could go for “non-Member Registration 2023” but it would cost $10 more and not give you EEA membership and access to their journal electronically, or you could buy an EEA regular membership of $60 and then register by “Member Registration 2023” but that also costs $195 (plus such people need pay $35 or $55 more to submit a paper which we do not, as indicated below)). If you are a graduate student you will instead use the item “2023 Graduate Student Meeting Registration” for $115 (which does not yet say that it also makes you an EEA member like the URPE conference registration, but I am told by the EEA it does and that they will fix that labeling soon) (if you are an undergraduate write to me as I cannot yet find out exactly how that works, but I will soon)

3) This next step is non-obvious. To submit a paper or session to URPE (or anywhere) you need have a credit for submitting a paper (actually I think you do NOT need a credit to submit a session as all complete sessions are free, but go ahead and get one anyway as I have not tested all alternatives). Click on the add to cart button for “URPE Submission Fee 2022 Conference” (fee is $0 as stated), then proceed to “checkout” and “pay” for it – you will get a receipt in your email for your payment of $0. You need have the credit from purchasing this to be able to submit a paper or session (again, probably really only needed to submit a paper, not for a session). If you try to submit a paper or panel without doing this a panel will open as you try to do so saying that you do not have credits enough to submit a paper and you will likely not know what it is talking about.

4) Now go back again on the column on the left and click on “Submit a Paper or Session”. (A panel over the page that opens will tell you that to submit a regular EEA paper you need purchase a submission credit on the EEA portal – see last point, this discussed there). Now across the page it will say that you have 1 submission credit and have used 0.

5) If you start to submit a paper or a session and abort before completing it (ignore this paragraph if you have not done this), it still may have used up your submission credit. If you do that and return to this submission page it will then say that you have 1 submission credit and have used 1, and so you cannot submit. So then return to “buy” another URPE credit for $0 – when you then come back to this submission page it will say that you have 2 submission credits and have used 1, so it will let you submit a paper (also, if it does this that means that it registered a title, so when you resubmit delete the previous title if it is incorrect).

6) So, you are on a page with two possibilities under the “Submissions” tab, “Papers” or “Organized Sessions”.

7) Here consider you want to submit a paper. This is quite straight forward, with one more specific thing to do and one thing to clarify. Put in the title as it asks, then one important thing to do, under “Submission Type” hit the pull-down arrow and select “URPE Submission”. Then a thing to clarify – it asks for “Keywords”, but it really requires you pick one of the broad JEL categorization A to Z to be able to proceed and not a keyword, and it really does not matter at all which one you pick – it will appear in the summary of information that you look at, but it does nothing. Upload an abstract (pdf). Go to next page, add author (or several) and presenting author. Go to next page, look at summary, and then edit or finish.

8) To submit an organized session choose the option “Organize Sessions” green cross (“Add New”) when you are at step 6 above. On the first page that opens put in the session title and description and AV needs and schedule requests. Now the all-important “Session Type” - select “Organized Session Proposed for URPE”. Like 7, where this page says “Keywords” select any of the broad JEL codes offered, this does not mater, but need do it to proceed. Hit next.

On this page put in the organizers (probably yourself), and the chair and discussant if you want to, you can leave those empty if you do not have people assigned for those. Hit next.

A page labeled “Summary” opens giving the information you have put in. It notes under “Presentations” that you have not yet put in any presentations (as it has not yet given you a chance to). Go to the bottom of the page and hit the “Add New Presentations/Presenters” button. Fill in the page with title and Keywords and upload an abstract for the first presentation and hit Next to go to the next page. Hit the “Add author” to add the author, then pull down the “Presenting/Contact Author” and select that, then hit next.

You get a summary page for “Your Submission”, and at the bottom as of now it only has “edit” or “finished”. Hit finished (it will not end your submission for the session as one might fear as one still needs submit the other papers, it only finishes for this first presentation (and could hit “edit” if have to change that)).

Now a page opens titled “Session,” and gives a summary. At the bottom of this page one again has “Add New Presentations/Presenters”, and so you can repeat what did before now for the second and third (and fourth if you have one) papers.

When you are on the page for the summary of the session, if you pick the “Finished” button there (instead of adding another paper) it does finish your submission of the session.

That should do it – again contact me at al@economics.utah.edu<sup>50</sup> if you have any questions.

Submission Deadline (for single paper and complete session proposals TO URPE): 15 November 2022

3rd JHET Online Writing Workshop (online, October 2022)

After two very successful rounds of a series of workshops in the last two years, the third edition of the JHET<sup>51</sup> Online Writing Workshops is here and welcomes you all to participate. The workshop is conducted by Paul Dudenhefer, who has been for many years the managing editor of History of Political Economy (HOPE) and has vast experience with helping economics students improve their academic writing.

Although difficulties with writing are not exclusive to non-native English speakers, the fact that the history of economics is a very international community makes language barriers a significant factor behind the heterogeneous representation of the works by historians written in English.

In order to help both non-native and native English speakers improve their writing and presentation skills, JHET is offering these workshops free of charge to anyone interested. We will give priority to early-career scholars (graduate students or those who graduated in the last 5 years) but aim to have a diverse group of participants. The meeting takes place through Zoom.

The third meeting will take place on Oct. 26 (Wednesday), 2022, from 10AM to noon EDT time (UTC-4; New York time), and its topic is 'Public Writing and Book Reviews'. If you are interested, please fill in the online form here<sup>52</sup>.

International Undergraduate Adam Smith Summer School (Scotland, June 2023)

June 2023 — University of Glasgow, Scotland

The University of Glasgow provided the backdrop for many key moments in Adam Smith’s life. He studied here, learning from the influential thinkers of the time. He lectured here, sharing his perspectives and exploring new theories in the classroom. He wrote here, putting pen to paper and changing the economic landscape forever. As a Glasgow alumnus, Adam Smith remembered his time at the University with great fondness, saying it was ‘By far the most useful and therefore as by far the happiest and most honourable period of my life.’

The enduring legacy and continued relevancy of Smith’s work inspires us to imagine how we might change the world too. The Theory of Moral Sentiments laid the foundation on which Adam Smith’s most influential work, the Wealth of Nations, was born. These publications work in harmony, placing people at the heart of economics. The ongoing dialogue which Adam Smith’s work inspires is perhaps his most enduring legacy. Smith does not offer us all the answers, but he does equip us with the tools to uncover them for ourselves. Much has changed in the 300 years since Adam Smith’s birth. Smith argued that true understanding evolves over time, as we access new information and develop new connections. Today, we can look back at his work with a critical perspective and reach our own conclusions.

As part of the University’s 300th Anniversary celebrations, we are launching a special summer school course “Age and Ideas of Adam Smith” directed by Glasgow’s very own Lecturer in the Scottish Enlightenment, Dr Craig Smith<sup>54</sup> . This unique course gives you an opportunity to immerse yourself in Smith’s thought at the University where he studied and taught.

The class aims to introduce you to the whole of Smith’s impressive body of work, ranging from moral philosophy and literary criticism to economics and political science. You will have the opportunity to read and discuss Smith’s work with some of the leading world experts on his thinking.

The intensive series of lectures and discussions is complemented by trips to locations in Scotland with strong associations with Smith, including his birthplace Kirkcaldy and his final resting place in Edinburgh.

This course aims to:

- provide students with the opportunity to learn more about the work of Adam Smith
- explore the context in which Smith's ideas developed in the philosophy and political economy of the Enlightenment period
- introduce students to the history and culture of Glasgow and Scotland
- demonstrate the continued relevance of Smithian ideas

By the end of the course students will be able to:

- identify the key ideas in Adam Smith's work
- analyse Smith's ideas in their historical context
- evaluate Smith's legacy for political economy and philosophy
- apply Smithian ideas to contemporary social and political issues

The course will be a mixture of lectures, seminars, archive workshops and field trips to Smith related locations around Scotland.

Entry requirements

- GPA of 3.0 (or equivalent)
- you should be currently enrolled at an international higher education institution.

If your first language is not English, you must meet our minimum proficiency level:

- International English Language Testing System (IELTS) Academic module (not General Training) overall score of 6.0, with no sub test less than 5.5
- we also accept equivalent scores in other recognised qualifications such as ibTOEFL, CAE, CPE and more.

This is a guide, for further information email<sup>55</sup> .

Rethinking Development Cooperation (online, November 2022)

18-19 November 2022 — Zoom (online)

The German Federal Ministry for Economic Cooperation and Development<sup>57</sup>, and Next Economy Lab<sup>58</sup> invite you to a 2-day seminar on the integration of post-growth economic thinking into development cooperation work. It seems no feasible solution to propagate economic growth in the Global South, when growth in the Global North has proven to be the cause for many global problems. Other ways need to be found to enable countries to thrive, rather than simply to grow.

Against this backdrop, you're invited to engage with us in a search: How can development cooperation promote growth-independent approaches in countries of the Global South?

This seminar will take place via Zoom, and will require a contribution cost of 150 - 600 euros, based on self-assessment. Registration is open until November 1. For more details and for registration, please visit the event page here<sup>59</sup>.

Deadline for registration: 1 November 2022

Stock-Flow-Consistent Modeling Workshop (online)

29-30 October 2022 — Zoom (online)

Hosted by the Centre for International Trade and Business in Asia \(CITBA\)<sup>60</sup>, the Stock-Flow-Consistent (SFC) Workshop is a free advanced training workshop that will build a foundation for understanding stock-flow models and policy implementation using standard economic models. The workshop is designed to introduce participants to basic tools of theory building. Practical examples of SFC models from Monetary Economics by W. Godley and M. Lavoie (2007) will be used to enable participants to work with the actual SFC models. The workshop will provide focused discussions around key national-level public and monetary policy elements.

Job Postings

City University of New York (CUNY), US

Job title: Assistant Professor

John Jay College of Criminal Justice is a senior college of the City University of New York (CUNY) and an internationally recognized leader in educating for justice. Led by President Karol V. Mason, John Jay is a federally designated Hispanic-serving institution, it is ranked third in the nation in Black student success, and it is a top ten institution for promoting student social mobility. John Jay is proud to serve a diverse and dynamic student body of 15,000 students that includes nearly fifty percent students who are first in their family to attend college as well as students who are immigrants, from low-income families, or from other historically underrepresented groups in higher education.

The College participates in the doctoral programs of the Graduate Center of CUNY, and offers bachelor's and master's degrees both in traditional criminal justice-related fields of study as well as in a robust portfolio of liberal arts and sciences programs that highlight themes of justice across the arts, sciences, humanities, and social sciences. The College seeks staff and faculty members who thrive in multicultural academic environments and are committed to access and excellence in higher education.

POSITION OVERVIEW

The Economics Department of John Jay College invites applications for a tenure-track faculty position at the Assistant Professor level to begin Fall 2023. The department is dedicated to pluralism and diversity; applicants with a background in heterodox economics are strongly encouraged to apply. We will consider candidates from any field but will prioritize candidates with a focus on feminist economics. The successful applicant will teach at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, mentor undergraduate and graduate students, develop curricula, serve as course coordinator, and interact effectively with colleagues to support and enhance department culture. The hiring committee is especially interested in applicants who contribute to the diversity mission of the college through their leadership, community service, research, and/or lived experiences.

Candidates are expected to bring enthusiasm and a demonstrated commitment to teaching and to develop and maintain an active research and publication agenda. The successful candidate must be eager and qualified to work with our diverse student body, and have a demonstrated commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion. As demonstrated in John Jay College's Seven Principles for a Culturally Responsive, Inclusive, and Anti-Racist Curriculum ( http://www.jjay.cuny.edu/sites/default/files/u1862/principles\_for\_a\_culturally\_responsive\_inclusive ), the College seeks a faculty member who thrives in a multicultural, collaborative academic environment and is committed to both access and excellence in higher education.

Candidates will be required to provide proof of being fully vaccinated against COVID-19 upon commencing employment. Exemption (medical or religious) requests to this requirement will be considered in accordance with applicable law. Being fully vaccinated is defined for this purpose as being at least two weeks past their final dose of an authorized COVID-19 vaccine regimen. Final candidates must be fully vaccinated as of their first day of employment.

QUALIFICATIONS

Ph.D. degree in Economics or equivalent. Also required are the ability to teach successfully, the potential for scholarly productivity, willingness to participate in course and program development, and the ability to work with others for the good of institution. Candidates are expected to bring enthusiasm and demonstrated commitment to teaching, as well as a demonstrated commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion.

COMPENSATION

John Jay College, US

Job title: Assistant Professor - Department of Economics

John Jay College of Criminal Justice is a senior college of the City University of New York (CUNY) and an internationally recognized leader in educating for justice. Led by President Karol V. Mason, John Jay is a federally designated Hispanic-serving institution, it is ranked third in the nation in Black student success, and it is a top ten institution for promoting student social mobility. John Jay is proud to serve a diverse and dynamic student body of 15,000 students that includes nearly fifty percent students who are first in their family to attend college as well as students who are immigrants, from low-income families, or from other historically underrepresented groups in higher education.

The College participates in the doctoral programs of the Graduate Center of CUNY, and offers bachelor's and master's degrees both in traditional criminal justice-related fields of study as well as in a robust portfolio of liberal arts and sciences programs that highlight themes of justice across the arts, sciences, humanities, and social sciences. The College seeks staff and faculty members who thrive in multicultural academic environments and are committed to access and excellence in higher education.

Position Overview

The Economics Department of John Jay College invites applications for a tenure-track faculty position at the Assistant Professor level to begin Fall 2023. The department is dedicated to pluralism and diversity; applicants with a background in heterodox economics are strongly encouraged to apply. We will consider candidates from any field but will prioritize candidates with a focus on feminist economics. The successful applicant will teach at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, mentor undergraduate and graduate students, develop curricula, serve as course coordinator, and interact effectively with colleagues to support and enhance department culture. The hiring committee is especially interested in applicants who contribute to the diversity mission of the college through their leadership, community service, research, and/or lived experiences.

Candidates are expected to bring enthusiasm and demonstrated commitment to teaching and to develop and maintain an active research and publication agenda. The successful candidate must be eager and qualified to work with our diverse student body, and have a demonstrated commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion. As demonstrated in John Jay College's Seven Principles for a Culturally Responsive, Inclusive, and Anti-Racist Curriculum (<http://www.jjay.cuny.edu/sites/default/files/u1862/principlesforaculturallyresponsiveinclusive>), the College seeks a faculty member who thrives in a multicultural, collaborative academic environment and is committed to both access and excellence in higher education.

Candidates will be required to provide proof of being fully vaccinated against COVID-19 upon commencing employment. Exemption (medical or religious) requests to this requirement will be considered in accordance with applicable law. Being fully vaccinated is defined for this purpose as being at least two weeks past their final dose of an authorized COVID-19 vaccine regimen. Final candidates must be fully vaccinated as of their first day of employment.

Qualifications

Ph.D. degree in Economics or equivalent. Also required are the ability to teach successfully, the potential for scholarly productivity, willingness to participate in course and program development, and the ability to work with others for the good of institution. Candidates are expected to bring enthusiasm and demonstrated commitment to teaching, as well as a demonstrated commitment to diversity, equity, and inclusion.

Compensation

Salary commensurate with academic accomplishments and experience within the range of $72,667 - $99,532.

CUNY offers faculty a competitive compensation and benefits package covering health insurance, pension and retirement benefits, paid parental leave, and savings programs. We also provide mentoring and support for research, scholarship, and publication as part of our commitment to ongoing faculty professional development.

Queen Mary University of London, UK

Job title: Lecturer in Business Transitions and Sustainability

The School of Business and Management (SBM) seeks to recruit an inspirational researcher, teacher and educational leader to a lectureship in Business Transitions and Sustainability. Candidates with a strong university research and teaching record as well as early career academics with promising research record are encouraged to apply. The successful candidate will be offered a teaching and research contract. We welcome hearing how you would best contribute to our research and education activities in line with SBM's values and mission. All applicants should have the ability to teach and supervise effectively across undergraduate and postgraduate programmes within the Department of Business and Society in SBM.

This post offers an exciting opportunity to make a major contribution to SBM's research expertise in the fields of political economy and sustainable transitions, and to the teaching and research profile of the Department of Business and Society. Depending on their particular research field, the postholder might contribute to research units in the School such as the Centre for Labour and Global Production or the Public Management and Regulation Group or the Organisational Processes and Practices Research Group.

The postholder will develop, lead, and deliver (individually or in a team) a new module on sustainability transitions and/or issues concerning the organisation and ecological resilience of business and society at undergraduate and/or postgraduate level, as well as providing supervision for dissertation projects within the Department of Business and Society. These modules will make a significant contribution to the department's overall profile of content on sustainability in our teaching. There will be an opportunity to work with colleagues in the Department of Business and Society to develop proposals for new degree programmes and for accredited executive education programmes in the fields of sustainability and transition. There will also be opportunities to develop collaboration with other schools in QMUL where research and teaching on sustainability issues is under way.

The postholder's teaching on business sustainability transitions will be for students on general management programmes. As such, we are looking for a scholar who can teach a broad range of students in terms of their prior knowledge of general issues of business sustainability, and more specific issues to do with the current biodiversity and climate crises as they relate to business and society. You will also critically analyse sustainability transitions as a long term, multi-dimensional and foundational transformation requiring far-reaching societal change engaging all sectors of economy and society. Furthermore, you will be interested in ‘foundational industries’ i.e., those industries which form the life blood of economies and societies such as agribusiness, energy, or transportation, and/or the ways in which they are commercially organised and financed through global trading companies, e.g., Trafigura. In keeping with the School’s emphasis on social justice, sustainability, and good governance, the successful candidate should analyse sustainability transitions through the prism of concepts such as just transitions, differential capacities and responsibilities for transitioning within and between countries, indigenous knowledge, and issues of power and gender and racial inequality.

About You

You will have demonstrated the capacity for collaborative and interdisciplinary research in the political economy of sustainability transitions and the current biodiversity and climate crises, as well the capacity to publish at an internationally excellent level.

We are looking for someone with a keen interest in new methods of pedagogical engagement suited to our diverse cohorts of students. We also appreciate expertise in engaging large numbers of students and delivering successful pedagogy with large cohorts.

You will have a doctorate in a relevant subject (or your doctoral thesis already submitted and under examination). You will have a good profile of publications (appropriate to the stage of your career) in the subject area at national and international level as well as a commitment to cross-disciplinary learning and research-based teaching with experience of undergraduate and postgraduate teaching.

About the School of Business and Management, and the Department of Business and Society

The School of Business and Management is one of the eight schools in the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences. The School has been undergoing a period of rapid growth, almost doubling our number of academic staff over the last five years and set to grow even further. We presently have 121 permanent academic staff and a large team of Teaching Fellows and TAs. We have over 2000 undergraduate business studies students and at the post-graduate level approximately 800 MSc students and a well-established doctoral programme of around 80 doctoral students.

SBM’s core purpose is to promote social justice, sustainability and good governance in the management of private, public and voluntary organisations through our research and education. We are a distinctive School that takes a humanities and social science-led approach to our scholarship and are now the largest school within QMUL’s Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, with its traditional strengths as a site of critical thinking in the humanities, law, history, geography and politics.

The Department of Business and Society brings together colleagues, committed to excellence in teaching and research, with a wide range of expertise from different disciplines. In our teaching and research we focus on how business and management influence society (for example, in economic development, through innovation in environmentally beneficial products and systems, through responsible management practices, by management in the non-profit and public sectors and in businesses in the creative and cultural industries), and how society shapes business and management (for example, public recognition of and concern for environmental sustainability as force for change).

About Queen Mary

At Queen Mary University of London, we believe that a diversity of ideas helps us achieve the previously unthinkable.

Throughout our history, we've fostered social justice and improved lives through academic excellence. And we continue to live and breathe this spirit today, not because it's simply 'the right thing to do' but for what it helps us achieve and the intellectual brilliance it delivers.

We continue to embrace diversity of thought and opinion in everything we do, in the belief that when views collide, disciplines interact, and perspectives intersect, truly original thought takes form.

Benefits

We offer competitive salaries, access to a generous pension scheme, 30 days' leave per annum (pro-rata for part-time/fixed-term), a season ticket loan scheme and access to a comprehensive range of personal and professional development opportunities. In addition, we offer a range of work life balance and family friendly, inclusive employment policies, flexible working arrangements, and campus facilities including an on-site nursery at the Mile End campus.

The post is based at the Mile End Campus in London. It is a full time, permanent appointment, with an expected start date of 1 January 2023 (or earlier). The starting salary will be Grade 5/6, in the range of £44,361- £55,234 per annum, inclusive of London Allowance.

How to Apply

Your application should include:

- a statement as to why you are applying to the School of Business and Management (Department of Business and Society) at Queen Mary, University of London,
- applications should include a focused CV of no more than five pages to include research publications, a one-page outline of research plan, and any teaching experience,

- PhD candidates must have submitted their thesis and be awaiting viva. The expected date of the viva should be clearly stated in the application.

As part of the selection process you will be asked to present to members of the Department of Business and Society on your teaching and research or teaching and scholarship. Please do not send papers or certificates with your application as these will be requested at a later stage in the process.

Queen Mary's commitment to our diverse and inclusive community is embedded in our appointments processes. Reasonable adjustments will be made at each stage of the recruitment process for any candidate with a disability. We are open to considering applications from candidates wishing to work flexibly.

We particularly welcome applications from women and BAME applicants who are currently underrepresented in the School at this level.

Informal enquiries should be addressed to Giuliano Maielli, Head of Department of Business and Society and Reader in Organisation Studies, at email<sup>77</sup> .

Information about the School can be found at link<sup>78</sup> .

The closing date for applications is 16 November 2022.

Interviews are expected to be held in shortly thereafter.

Nijmegen and 18 months in Roskilde. We encourage applicants from a wide range of approaches and perspectives.

The Department of Social Sciences and Business, Roskilde University, Denmark, invites applications for a position as PhD of International Studies from 1 March 2023 or as soon as possible thereafter. The position is a double degree in collaboration with the Political Science Department of the Radboud University in Nijmegen, the Netherlands. The overall period for the project is limited to three years. During the first 18 months, the candidate will be based at Radboud University and during the last 18 months of the project at Roskilde University. Physical presence at the respective university during this period is mandatory. That means that the PhD position involves moving from the Netherlands to Denmark in 2024 (the moving costs will be partially covered by the universities). If the PhD process lives up to the requirements at the two universities, you will be awarded with a degree from each of the universities (a double degree).

Description of the PhD project

The financial system of the EU has gone through a turbulent time since the outset of the COVID-19 pandemic. This gave renewed impetus and opportunity for the European Commission to accelerate the larger plan to unite capital markets in Europe through the Capital Markets Union (CMU).

The CMU stands at a crucial juncture of European market integration; as an institutional process, it is marked by the fundamental fault lines between financial market liberalization and attempts to regulate the sector, while at the same time ensuring a transition that is green and inclusive. These developments are set in a broader context of far-reaching structural changes and geopolitical rivalries in the global economy more generally, and the changing role of banks vis-a-vis other financial sector agents in the provision of credit and/or equity in particular. Possible focal points include, for instance: the financing of the European Green Deal; the link between CMU and industrial policy; the role of financial markets actors, business actors and civil society in the CMU process.

Explaining the politics that inform the CMU relaunch provides an important building block for understanding the EU's attempts to unlock investments against the backdrop of the unfolding integration trajectory of the European political economy. Applicants are invited to send in a project description addressing these processes, with a clear focus on the political economy of European integration. We encourage applicants from a wide range of approaches and perspectives.

Your project description shall be no more than four pages, excluding a bibliography. It should include a clear empirical focus point related to CMU; relevant research question(s); an indication of relevant literatures and theoretical perspectives; and a tentative research design. Considerations regarding ethical aspects shall be included in your project description

The Doctoral Schools

You will be enrolled as a PhD student at the Institute for Management Research (IMR) Doctoral School at the Radboud University, and the Doctoral School of Social Sciences and Business at Roskilde University. Both Schools provide training and research that are relevant for PhD candidates. They support collecting and disseminating information, and organizing research events and activities. They form part of a dynamic community of researchers who share a commitment to understanding society in diverse contexts of change and global engagement. Researchers come from all over the world and engage in topics that are geographically, theoretically and methodologically diverse.

As a PhD student you will be associated with the research group Economic Policy, Institutions and Change (EPIC) at the Roskilde University (though there is a liberty of choice amongst the department's other research groups, if you feel your research belongs in another group) and the multidisciplinary research group EU Politics, Administration and Law (EUROPAL) at the Radboud University.

Responsibilities and tasks

As a PhD fellow you are trained at an international level to undertake research and teaching assignments. You are responsible for carrying out independent research under supervision and receive constructive feedback in the PhD program in order to finish your PhD thesis. During your employment you are required to take 30 ECTS of course work, and gain experience of teaching activities.

Qualifications

You must hold a Master's degree or equivalent within Global Political Economy/International Political Economy, Political Science, European Studies, Global Studies, International Relations, Economics, or a related field. Qualifications within the following areas are required.

- Good or excellent grades in relevant subjects
- Proficiency in English

The following qualities are a plus:

- Familiarity and affinity with critical political economy perspectives
- Professional experience with EU economic and/or financial policies
- Willingness to engage in international mobility and conduct fieldwork in Brussels

Assessment

In the assessment regarding employment consideration will be given to;

- Relevant Master's degree or equivalent ( according to Danish Qualifications Framework for Higher Education)<sup>81</sup>
- The academic requirements stated in the job advertisement.

In the assessment regarding enrollment consideration will also be given to the following criteria:

- Educational skills and any further professional qualifications
- Grades at the Master's programme or equivalent
- Scientific originality
- The quality and relevance of the project description
- The quality and relevance of the methodical and theoretical choices
- The consistency and coherence between the research problem and the choice of method and theory
- The realistic and feasible scope of the PhD project
- The relevance of the project to the profile of the Doctoral Schools

Sciences Po (Paris), France

Job title: Postdoctoral Fellowship on the Environment

Sciences Po is launching a call for applications for 10 postdoctoral fellowships as part of the Bruno Latour Fund, a postdoctoral research program on environmental and climate transformations. Ambitious in its scope, this scientific program aims to host at Sciences Po, on the Paris campus, young social scientists wishing to build a collective and multidisciplinary initiative on how ecological and climate crises are reshaping the contemporary economic, social, legal and political order, and how they invite us to reconsider our history.

These 10 postdoctoral contracts, lasting 36 months, will be filled in two recruitment waves:

- 4 fellowships, Autumn 2022, to start from March 1st, 2023: applications to be sent no later than December 1st, 2022.
- 6 fellowships, Spring 2023, for a start in autumn 2023 - schedule to be confirmed.

The remuneration is 3.400 € gross per month. Successful candidates will be assigned to one of Sciences Po's research centers (see list below), according to their wishes and with the agreement of the center. They will thus benefit from its working environment. Each candidate will receive a personal research fund of 5,000 euros for the duration of his/her contract.

All those who hold a doctorate on the date of application<sup>1</sup> and who have defended their thesis within the four preceding years are eligible. Sciences Po relies on a robust expertise on the environment, anchored in criteria of academic excellence, pluralism and critical analysis. Through their research, postdoctoral fellows will deepen and renew existing initiatives within Sciences Po<sup>2</sup> research centers and outreach programs developed in partnership with Université Paris Cité<sup>3</sup>. They will contribute to the structuring of an interdisciplinary environmental research workshop (AIRE) group. Sciences Po is an equal opportunity employer and is committed to ensuring a balanced representation of gender, geographical areas and minorities. Applications from women are particularly welcome. Candidates will be selected on the basis of their scientific merit, their ability to mobilize trans-disciplinary interest, and their dynamic involvement in Sciences Po's research centers.

FUNCTIONS

Successful candidates undertake, for the duration of their contract:

- Research: to conduct their research program submitted, to participate in the scientific activities of their home laboratory and in those of the Interdisciplinary Environmental Research Workshop (AIRE).

- Teaching: to give at least one course per year (24 hours) at Sciences Po (on one of the seven campuses, in French or in English, with content to be defined in coordination with the departments)
- Promotion: to write a working paper for the attention of the contributors of the Latour Fund and the general public.

RECRUITMENT PROCEDURE

The chair of the selection committee is Pierre Charbonnier (Center of european Studies), with Sophie Dubuisson-Quellier (Center for the Sociology of the Organisations), Jérôme Gaillardet (Paris Institut for Earth Physics), Charlotte Halpern (Center of european Studies), Giacomo Parrinello (Center of History), Alain Pottage (Law School), Lucas Chancel (Paris School of Economics), Sandrine Revet (Center for International Studies), and a colleague from a university outside of France. Shortlisted candidates will be invited to present their research work to the Sciences Po academic community at the end of January or early February 2023. This presentation will be followed by an exchange with the selection committee. Applications to be sent no later than December 1st, 2022 per email<sup>92</sup> .

Documents to be provided:

- A resume, including teaching experience and publications
- A research proposal (5 pages max.) describing the issues, methods and objects of investigation, as well as a timeline and academic publication goals.
- The thesis and a significant article or book chapter
- The names of two academic referees

The Department of Economics invites applications for a tenure-track position at assistant professor rank, beginning in the fall of 2023. Applicants must possess a strong desire to teach and pursue research in a liberal arts environment in a department with a reputation for excellent teaching. The successful candidate will teach both required and elective courses in macroeconomics. Primary field requirements are macroeconomics and financial economics. Preferred secondary field is history of economic thought.

The college offers excellent research support. The standard teaching load is 18 credits (typically 5 courses) per year, normally with 2 – 3 preps. New faculty receive a course release in their first year and are eligible for a pre-tenure sabbatical. A Ph.D. in Economics or a related field is required. ABD candidates will be considered if the doctoral degree will be complete by the time of employment.

We are especially interested in candidates from under-represented groups as well as individuals who have experience with diverse populations who can contribute to the diversity and excellence of the academic community through their research, teaching, and/or service. We invite you to discuss any relevant aspects of your candidacy in your cover letter.

Skidmore College is a highly selective liberal arts college with a student body of roughly 2,400 located near the foothills of the Adirondack Mountains, in Saratoga Springs, New York. Skidmore College is distinguished by a curriculum balanced in the natural sciences, social sciences, humanities, and pre-professional programs and offers more than 60 majors. Applications due November 21. We will be conducting interviews via Zoom in early January 2023.

Candidates should submit a cover letter explaining their ability to contribute in the areas described above, a curriculum vitae, one research paper, names and contact information for three references, a research statement, and a teaching statement and/or evidence of teaching capability. We are looking for candidates from the fields of economics or related social sciences (e.g. business engineering, sociology, psychology) with a pronounced interest to work on topics relating to technology and the environment. We are looking for a motivated colleague with previous research experience, who is capable to conceptualize and carry out research independently. You will become part of a large, interdisciplinary project consortia within “The German Marine Research Alliance” that analyzes a novel carbon capture and storage (CCS) technology. Furthermore, you will be part of a large and dynamic working group with plenty opportunities for scientific exchange and collaboration at the Chair of “Innovation and Structural Economics”.

The goal of the research project – “AIMS3 - Alternate scenarios, Innovative technologies, and Monitoring approaches for Sub-Seabed Storage of carbon dioxide” – is to assess a novel approach for carbon capture and storage from both the technological and societal perspective. The working packages for this position include e.g. the assessment of public acceptance towards this novel technology with quantitative and/or qualitative approaches.

Responsibilities:

- Independent, empirical, quantitative and qualitative analyses in the field of innovation and sustainability research
- Collaboration in a large interdisciplinary project consortium
- Leading the content-related and organizational implementation of the designated working packages in the third-party funded project, including budget planning and reporting

Requirements:

- A completed academic university degree (master's/university diploma) in economics or related social sciences (e.g. industrial engineering, sociology, psychology) and a substantially progressed (or ideally finished) PhD thesis, with an empirical focus
- Strong knowledge in the field of quantitative and/or qualitative empirical methods in social and economic sciences
- Openness to apply different empirical methods
- Experience in the use of relevant (statistical) software (e.g. STATA, R)
- Interest in the topics of innovation and/or sustainability
- Good knowledge of the German and English language
- Team orientation and scientific curiosity

Working environment:

- Access to an excellent research consortium within the project coordinated by MARUM
- Freedom for independently designing research within the framework of the research project
- Use of an extensive data infrastructure of the working group
- Technical support in the team of the working group for data work and management
- Collaboration in an international, agile team of about 20 people
- Integration into the international research network of the working group
- Opportunity for advanced training in empirical methods, data science, etc.

- Support in career development and follow-up employment

The University of Bremen intends to increase the proportion of women in the academic field and therefore expressly encourages women to apply. Severely disabled applicants will be given priority if their professional and personal qualifications are essentially the same. Applications from people with a migration background are welcomed.

Application and deadline

If you are interested, please send your application with the usual documents (cover letter, CV, certificates), stating your earliest possible starting date, including an electronic copy of your masters/diploma thesis and your dissertation (if not yet completed, an individual paper from the doctoral project is also welcome) by November 11th, 2022, quoting reference number A298/22 to: University of Bremen, Faculty of Business Studies and Economics, Prof. Dr. Michael Rochlitz, Professor of Economics, Innovation and Structural Economics, Max-von-Laue-Str. 1, 28359 Bremen or to the e-mail address: office-guenther@uni-bremen.de

In case of questions, please do not hesitate to contact Dr. Tobias Wandler<sup>99</sup>, Further information about the working group can be found on the website<sup>100</sup>.

Winner Announcement: The Italian Association for the History of Economic Thought (AISPE) Awards 2022

AISPE (The Italian Association for the History of Economic Thought) is pleased to announce AISPE AWARDS 2022 winners

The Best Book Award: Ivo Maes, Robert Triffin. A life, Oxford, OUP, 2021
Committee: Antonio Magliulo, Claudia Sunna e Fabio Masini.

Motivation: Ivo Maes' volume (with the collaboration of Ilaria Pasotti) is a brilliant biography that captures the main threads of Robert Triffin's theoretical, intellectual, and policymaking journey. The volume recreates the historical/intellectual/cultural contexts and the evolution of the theoretical debates to which Triffin contributed. Archival sources further enrich the originality of the book. It is written with impeccable professionalism and may have considerable impact on academics and policymakers.

The Best Article Award: Bruce Caldwell, The Road to Serfdom After 75 years, "Journal of Economic Literature", 58:3, 2020, 720-748

Committee: Pier Francesco Asso, Giandomenica Becchio e Gianfranco Tuset

Motivation: Bruce Caldwell's article represents an outstanding paper which combines a rigorous theoretical analysis and a deep insight in the history of economic ideas within a contemporary historical framework. AISPE congratulates Bruce for his work which serves as an example for the all community of historians of economic thought.

The Terenzio Maccabelli Best PhD Dissertation Prize: Eleonora Buono, A Victorian Polymath. An Analysis of William Stanley Jevon's Thought, Dottorato di Ricerca in Scienze Politiche e Sociali, Università di Bologna

Committee: Fabrizio Bientinesi, Katia Caldari e Stefano Fiori

Motivation: Eleonora Buono's dissertation shows a deep mastery of sources and a very good historical and theoretical analysis of Jevon's cultural roots.

Giandomenica Becchio

AISPE Secretary

A Brief History of Economic Thought: From the Mercantilists to the Post-Keynesians

Edited by Hassan Bougrine & Louis-Philippe Rochon — 2022, Edward Elgar

It is now widely acknowledged that history is useful, even essential, because it helps us predict the future. The history of ideas in economics, as in other fields of inquiry, plays an important role in enlightening current researchers as they endeavour to understand contemporary events and anticipate the future of human societies. This book brings together a fine collection of chapters that span contributions from forgotten classics to the most recent new thinking about critical issues such as growth, wealth, its creation and its distribution among members of society. It is A Brief History of Economic Thought, but it will certainly go a long way in helping undergraduate students and other researchers who are curious about the evolution of economic ideas over the last five centuries.

Chapters offer discussions on the main tenets of post-Keynesian economics, and focus on issues of growth, wealth and income distribution. The debate on the role of government

A Modern Guide to Austrian Economics

Edited by Per L. Bylund — 2022 Edward Elgar Publishing

This Modern Guide explores central ideas, concepts, and themes in the Austrian school of economics, with a focus on how both the school and the overall theory have evolved over recent decades. Leading scholars offer their insights into potential directions of future research in the field, pointing towards contemporary debates and their potential conclusions, underdeveloped aspects and extensions of theory, and current applications of interest.

Spanning theories of entrepreneurship to the theory of the business cycle, from methodology to sociology, and from cryptocurrencies to culture, this clear and concise Modern Guide provides an expert curation of the topic. Chapters offer an overview of the present state of scholarship in the field, including discussions on praxeology, the function of entrepreneurship in the market process, spontaneous orders, the Austrian theory of money, and banking.

Written in an accessible style, this will be an invigorating read for economics scholars looking for an alternative to mainstream approaches. It will also be useful for scholars and practitioners seeking an introduction to Austrian economics.

A Modern Guide to the Economics of Happiness

By Luigino Bruni, Alessandra Smerilli and Dalila De Rosa (Editors) — 2022, Edward Elgar

Exploring the modern approach to the economics of happiness, which came about with the Easterlin Paradox, this book analyses and assesses the idea that as a country gets richer the happiness of its citizens remains the same. The book moves through three distinct pillars of study in the field: first analysing the historical and philosophical foundations of the debate; then the methodological and measurements issues and their political implications; and finally empirical applications and discussion about what determines a happy life

A Modern Guide to the Economics of Happiness extends the concept of happiness to that of wellbeing, offering an inquiry into well-being within the paradigm of complex systems. It draws together both recent developments in studies on the economics of happiness as well as its historical roots, covering the concept of Eudaimonia, Aristotle's theories and the important contribution of Italian economists. Critical case studies look at the relationship between physical activity and wellbeing, the value of family for life satisfaction, and the role of social capital for migrant acceptance.

An invigorating read for economics and psychology scholars, this book will also be of interest to those researching welfare and development economics.

Anti-Blanchard Macroeconomics: A Comparative Approach (2nd edition)

By Emiliano Brancaccio & Andrea Califano — 2022, Edward Elgar

Olivier Blanchard, former chief economist of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), is author of one of the most important standard macroeconomics textbooks, which is used throughout the world. Endorsed by Blanchard himself, Anti-Blanchard Macroeconomics critically analyzes prevailing economic theory and policy in comparison with alternative approaches. This thoroughly revised edition represents a field of research that has developed through intense theoretical debates, continual empirical testing and the resultant disputes about economic policy.

Emiliano Brancaccio and Andrea Califano succinctly explore the relationship between theoretical models and economic policies, providing readers with examples and empirical exercises, and showing how the conclusions of different theories can be empirically tested. This updated second edition examines the links between the issues at the core of macroeconomic debate, including economic growth, economic crises, labour market reforms, government debt sustainability, the behaviour of central banks and the stock market, among many others.

Handbook of International Climate Finance

By Axel Michaelowa & Anne-Kathrin Sacherer — 2022, Edward Elgar

The concept of international climate finance channelled from developed to developing countries through public interventions for mitigation and adaptation has been developed over the last decade, but its roots date back to the early 1990s. Despite the high relevance of the topic in the international climate negotiations, illustrated by the (missed) target to mobilise USD 100 billion by 2020, there is no book that provides an overview accessible to academics and practitioners alike.

This comprehensive Handbook of International Climate Finance closes this gap, with contributions from expert researchers and practitioners involved in key climate finance institutions. Chapters assess past approaches to international climate finance, discuss the effectiveness of different channels for climate finance, debate challenges encountered and elucidate national strategies of donors and recipients. An important section elaborates perspectives for sources of international climate finance from multilateral channels, the private sector, and blending of finance including through international carbon markets. The Handbook further elaborates perspectives on ownership and accountability and the role of the private sector. Mapping out pathways for the future, it concludes by providing a vision for international climate finance after 2025.

This forward-thinking Handbook will be a critical resource for scholars and students with an interest in climate change and related policies and environmental politics, policy, and economics more broadly. It provides key input for international climate negotiators, climate activists and international climate finance institutions.

Participation Income An Alternative to Basic Income for Poverty Reduction in the Digital Age

By Heikki Hiilamo — 2022, Edward Elgar.

This innovative book provides the first in-depth analysis of participatory income and its potential role in countering endemic poverty and unemployment in high-income countries. Heikki Hiilamo reviews the concept of basic income and specific basic income experiments before presenting participatory income as a viable alternative in the fight against poverty.

Highly topical, chapters explore pressing issues such as the effects of automation on the future of work and the links between social protection and eco-social transition. Putting forward the argument that any reform of social assistance should continue to enforce reciprocity with reduced means-testing, Hiilamo explores the practical advantages of the participation income model in reducing poverty and developing an eco-social welfare model.

Tackling one of the most heated current debates in social policy, this book will be a key resource for scholars and students in this field, particularly those with a focus on welfare and labour economics, labour policy and the sociology of work. Its use of examples and case studies will also benefit practitioners and policy makers.

Rosa Cusminsky: el estructuralismo hereje

By Mariano Arana & Samantha Vaccari — 2022, Ed. Universidad Nacional de General Sarmiento

It is the first book about a female Argentine economist where we make a synthesis of her main ideas from the 1970s: on the place of Latin America in the world economy and the possibilities of integration in the new era of capitalism, the identification of the effects of foreign debt in the 1980s and the consequences in our region of the macroeconomic and arms policies that the United States deployed due to the decline in industrial production.

Mariano Arana and Samantha Vaccari present in this book an important part of the ideas that the Argentine economist and political scientist Rosa Cusminksy displayed since her arrival in Mexico in the mid-1970s. In these pages you will find a diagnosis of the place of Latin America in the world economy and its possibilities of integration in the new era of post-Fordist capitalism, the identification of the severe effects of the foreign

The Cambridge Economic History of China: 1800 to present

Edited by Debin Ma and Richard von Glahn — 2022, Cambridge University Press

China's rise as the world's second-largest economy surely is the most dramatic development in the global economy since the year 2000. Volume II, which spans China's two turbulent centuries from 1800, charts this wrenching process of an ancient empire being transformed to re-emerge as a major world power. This volume for the first time brings together the fruits of pioneering international scholarship in all dimensions of economic history to provide an authoritative and comprehensive overview of this tumultuous and dramatic transformation. In many cases, it offers a fundamental reinterpretation of major themes in Chinese economic history, such as the role of ideology, the rise of new institutions, human capital and public infrastructure, the impact of Western and Japanese imperialism, the role of external trade and investment, and the evolution of living standards in both the pre-Communist and Communist eras. The volume includes seven important chapters on the Mao and reform eras and provides a critical historical perspective linking the past with the present and future.

The Entrepreneurial Solution to Poverty and the Science of What is Possible

By James O. Fiet — 2022, Edward Elgar

Engaging and accessible, The Entrepreneurial Solution to Poverty and the Science of What is Possible examines the systematic practice of poverty alleviation. Using the science of informational economics (IE), based on leveraging specific information, as well as decades' worth of experimental evidence, James Fiet demonstrates how poverty may be mitigated through entrepreneurial practices.

This visionary book suggests a number of key practical methods by which poverty can be alleviated, even without resources or personal connections. Classifying IE as ‘the science of what is possible’, Fiet demonstrates how to substitute information – the lowest common denominator of what individuals already possess or can acquire – for resources. The book employs 30 years of experimental results as the basis for its entrepreneurial approach to poverty alleviation, inviting its readers to extend the science of what is possible and succeed regardless of their circumstances.

Holding the potential to alter how work is approached and carried out in the area of poverty alleviation, the innovative ideas explored in this book will be of significant interest and inspiration to researchers and students, but also beyond academia to government agencies, foundations, and charities, as well as individuals and organizations invested in solving the problem of poverty.

The Future Is Now: An Introduction to Prefigurative Politics

By Lara Monticelli (Editor) — 2022, Bristol University Press

The gloomy prospect of climate change and ecosystems’ collapse calls for an urgent rethinking of all aspects of our life: how we work, produce, eat, spend, take care of each other, relate to nature, and organize our societies.

Prefigurative initiatives are attracting a growing amount of attention from scholars and activists precisely because they are envisioning alternative futures by embodying radically different ways of living in the present.

Thanks to the contribution of leading researchers, ‘The Future is Now’ represents the go-to book for anyone seeking a comprehensive, state-of-the-art, and thought-provoking introduction to the thriving field of prefigurative politics.

The Origins and Dynamics of Inequality: Sex, Politics, and Ideology

Jon D. Wisman — 2022 Oxford University Press

Whereas President Barack Obama identified inequality as “the defining challenge of our time,” this book claims more: it is the defining issue of all human history. The struggle over inequality has been the underlying force driving human history’s unfolding. Drawing on the dynamics of inequality, this book re-interprets history and society. Beyond according inequality the central role in human history, this book is novel in two other respects: First, transcending the general failure of social scientists and historians to anchor their work in explicit theories of human behavior, this book grounds the origins and dynamics of inequality in evolutionary psychology, or more specifically, Darwin’s theory of sexual selection. Second this book is novel in according central importance to the critical historical role of ideology in legitimating inequality, a role typically ignored or given little attention by social scientists and historians. Because of the central role of inequality in history, inequality’s explosion over the past 45 years has not been an anomaly.

It is a return to the political dynamics by which elites have, since the rise of the state, taken practically everything for themselves, leaving all others with little more than the means with which to survive. Due to elites’ persuasive ideology, even after workers in advanced capitalist countries gained the franchise to become the overwhelming majority of voters, inequality continued to increase. The anomaly is that the only intentional politically driven decline in inequality occurred between the 1930s and 1970s following the Great Depression’s partial delegitimation of elites’ ideology.

The Political Economy of Geoeconomics: Europe in a Changing World

edited by Milan Babić, Adam D. Dixon, and Imogen T. Liu — 2022 Palgrave Macmillan

This book is part of the Palgrave International Political Economy (IPE) series. The IPE series has tracked its development in both analysis and structure over the last three decades. It has always had a concentration on the global South. Now the South increasingly challenges the North as the centre of development, also reflected in a growing number of submissions and publications on indebted Eurozone economies in Southern Europe. An indispensable resource for scholars and researchers, the series examines a variety of capitalisms and connections by focusing on emerging economies, companies and sectors, debates and policies. It informs diverse policy communities as the established trans-Atlantic North declines and ‘the rest’, especially the BRICS, rise.

As part of the IPE series, this book brings together researchers from different disciplinary backgrounds and analytical perspectives to offer a broad geographical, methodological, and empirical account of the emerging field of geoeconomics.

The Tragic Science: How Economists Cause Harm (Even as They Aspire to Do Good)

by George F. DeMartino — 2022, Chicago University Press

A forceful critique of the social science that has ruled—and damaged—the modern world. The practice of economics, as economists will tell you, is a powerful force for good. Economists are the guardians of the world’s economies and financial systems. The applications of economic theory can alleviate poverty, reduce disease, and promote sustainability.

While this narrative has been successfully propagated by economists, it belies a more challenging truth: economic interventions, including those economists deem successful, also cause harm. Sometimes the harm is manageable and short-lived. But just as often the harm is deep, enduring, and even irreparable. And too often the harm falls on those least able to survive it.

In The Tragic Science, George F. DeMartino says what economists have too long repressed: that economists do great harm even as they aspire to do good. Economist-induced harm, DeMartino shows, results in part from economists’ “irreparable ignorance”—from the fact that they know far less than they tend to believe they know—and from disciplinary training that treats the human tolls of economic policies and interventions as simply the costs of promoting social betterment. DeMartino details the complicated nature of economic harm, explores economists’ frequent failure to recognize it, and makes a sobering case for professional humility and for genuine respect for those who stand to be harmed by economists’ practice.

At a moment in history when the economics profession holds enormous power, DeMartino’s work demonstrates the downside of its influence and the responsibility facing those who practice the tragic science.

Understanding Economic Inequality – Bigger Pies and Just Desserts

By Todd A. Knoop — 2020, Edward Elgar

Over the last 25 years, nearly two billion people across the globe have risen out of poverty and income levels have risen worldwide. Yet in the US, the top 1% earn twice the amount of income as the poorest 50% of the population. In the midst of rising prosperity, economic dissatisfaction—driven by the persistent fear felt by many that they are “falling behind”—is higher than at any point since the 1930s.

In Understanding Economic Inequality, the author brings an economist’s perspective informed by new, groundbreaking research on inequality from philosophy, sociology, psychology, and political science and presents it in a form that it is accessible to those who want to understand our world, our society, our politics, our paychecks, and our neighbors’ paychecks better.

As any history of the 21st century would be incomplete without understanding “the 99% versus the 1%”, the insights provided by the author will prove valuable to any reader. This book also provides the foundation for undergraduate courses on wealth and income inequality, and an essential reading for introductory economics, labor economics, public policy, law, or sociology courses.

Visions and Strategies for a Sustainable Economy: Theoretical and Policy Alternatives

By Nikolaos Karagiannis, John E. King (Editors) — 2022, Palgrave Macmillan

The multidisciplinary edited book Visions and Strategies for a Sustainable Economy: Theoretical and Policy Alternatives provides a thorough examination – at the theoretical and, especially, policy levels – of a number of key topics related to a sustainable economy and a better society. With important contributions by distinguished academics, the book presents alternative views, provides an assessment of contemporary realities in an era of ecological emergency, and offers visions, strategies, and realistic policies towards a better

Heterodox Graduate Programs, Scholarships and Grants

EPOG+ Erasmus Mundus Joint Master Degree

Economic POLicies for the Global transition (EPOG+)<sup>225</sup> is an Erasmus Mundus Joint Master Degree in economics, supported by the European Union. It offers a world-class integrated Master’s programme on the (digital, socioeconomic, ecological) transition processes with a pluralist approach and interdisciplinary perspectives.

The main objective of the programme is to give birth to a new generation of international experts, able to define and assess economic policies and evolve within different political, social and regional contexts. Towards this objective, the EPOG+ Master’s programme goes beyond the reach of standard economic theory to include various heterodox/institutionalist political economy approaches.

The full partners (degree awarding institutions) include a wide set of prestigious institutions:

- University of technology of Compiègne (UTC),
- Sorbonne University,
- University of Paris,
- University of Turin,
- Berlin School of Economics and Law,
- University of Rome 3,
- Vienna University of Economics and Business,
- University of the Witwatersrand (Wits).

ESHET Research Grant Scheme (Reminder-Call for Proposals)

Following an announcement during the last General Assembly on the 10th of June 2022, ESHET is resuming its Research Grant Scheme with the aim of fostering innovative and small-scale research initiatives without the usual administrative and management costs associated with international competitive research programmes.

Applications are open to ESHET members and grants will usually be awarded to projects featuring early-career scholars. An ‘early career scholar’ is defined as someone who has completed a Ph.D. no more than seven years from the date of the deadline for the application. Scholars who in that period have been on parental leave or had other reasons for career breaks can ask for an extension of the seven-year period (an extension of one year per child is possible).

A small number (1 or 2) of research projects annually will be funded up to an amount of € 2000. The duration of each research project is typically one year, with the obligation to present a final report at the end of the project. The research projects should commence between 1 January 2023 and 30 June 2023. Projects must be completed by 30 June 2024.

The ESHET Executive Committee and Council invite proposals of up to 1500 words outlining the aims of the research project, a plan of implementation, and a costing. Research proposals will be judged by a three-person jury that will be composed after the closing date of the call. The jury reserves the right to not fund any projects in case that none of the proposals submitted are deemed worthy of funding. The assessment of the project proposals will be based on the quality, the scientific merit and the innovativeness of the project, as presented in the proposal.

Applications will be open from 2 September 2022 through 31 October 2022. Please address proposals to the ESHET General Secretary, Sylvie Rivot email: rivot@unistra.fr<sup>227</sup>

For further details of the requirements for proposals please read the full specification of the grant scheme on the ESHET website<sup>228</sup> .

FINRA: Foundation Dissertation Completion Fellowship for underrepresented groups

The FINRA<sup>229</sup> Investor Education Foundation 2023–2024 Dissertation Completion Fellowship program seeks to expand the pipeline of researchers from racial and ethnic backgrounds whose underrepresentation in the U.S. professoriate has been severe and longstanding.

The Fellowship will provide an award of up to $40,000. Applicants must have completed their doctoral coursework and be in the final year of writing their dissertation focused on topics such as financial capability, investor protection, access to financial services and the capital markets, fintech services, or understanding the systemic barriers to financial inclusion. Graduate study may be in any academic discipline. A selection committee of scholars and research experts from diverse fields will select award recipients.

The Fellowship program is one component of the FINRA Investor Education Foundation’s larger Financial Inclusion Framework. The Financial Inclusion Framework advances communication, education, and research to address systemic wealth disparities and lead to better outcomes for communities of color and underserved communities.

All interested can find more details about the Dissertation Completion Fellowship program here<sup>230</sup> .

Frederic S. Lee Heterodox Economics Scholarship

The application for the Spring 2023 semester is now open. The scholarship was awarded over $65,000 in scholarship money to 20 different students over the last 8 years.

In order to be eligible, students must be enrolled in a doctoral heterodox economics program in the United States and demonstrate financial need. This scholarship will not provide scholarship aid for dissertation credit hours or for credit hours that are not directly relevant for the completion of the doctoral program's coursework.

Selection criteria include:

- Priority will be given to students who have no scholarship support at all and need the support to continue in their heterodox doctoral program. Students who have only partial scholarship support and need additional support to continue in their heterodox doctoral program will also be considered.
- Preference will be given to students who are interested in working in heterodox microeconomics. Applicants from other elds of study are also encouraged to apply, especially if they are willing to do heterodox economics in an integrative manner (as opposed to adhering to a single heterodox tradition).

Read more about the heterodox economics of Frederic S. Lee at website<sup>231</sup> .

Scholarships will be awarded prior to the fall and spring semesters on an annual basis. Scholarships are not renewable; however, previous recipients may reapply.

Amount: Varies. Tuition and fees for up to three classes per semester.

Apply here<sup>232</sup> .

To continue to support graduate students who will be the future of Heterodox economics, the Scholarship Fund needs to generate more funds. Donations can be made at here<sup>233</sup> .

News from the Monetary Policy Institute

The awarding of the Nobel Prize to Ben Bernanke, Douglas W. Diamond, and Philip H. Dybvig has provided the Monetary Policy Institute (MPI) the opportunity to respond with two blogs so far.

The first, by David Fields, is titled "Déjàvu! The Sveriges Riksbank Prize in Economic Irrelevance".

It can be found here<sup>234</sup> .

The second one is by Louis-Phillippe Rouchon, "Ben Bernanke, the "Nobel" Prize, and setting monetary policy back 50 years". You can find it here<sup>235</sup> .

Interestingly enough, our blog responses and Twitter comments have generated considerable attention. In one day, the @monetaryblog on Twitter gathered close to 200 new followers in a single day, including some people from central banks, and the chief of staff of the Canadian Deputy Prime Minister. We are now at 1320 followers, after just 3 months, and have been read more than 10,000 times.

There have been a few more recent noteworthy blogs, including:

The Central Bank of Brazil and Climate Change, by Douglas Alencar and Wallace Perreira. Their blog is here<sup>236</sup> .

Finally, another one by Lousi-Phillippe Rouchon on inflation paranoia, inspired by a round table discussion at a recent workshop the MPI hosted on Monetary Policy and Income Distribution. The blog is here<sup>237</sup> . It seems economic conditions keep giving us the opportunity to thrive. More logs are coming, including a few more commentaries on Bernanke/Diamond/Dybvig.

For Your Information

Postkeynesian Economic Society (PKES) announcement: new Chair and Secretary of PKES

Following the September Board Meeting of the Postkeynesian Economic Society PKES<sup>239</sup> committee, it is with great pleasure that we announce the new Chair and Secretary of PKES.

- Annina Kaltenbrunner will take over as PKES Secretary. She has been a PKES board member since 2013 and has acted as working paper editor (2013-2019), co-organiser of the PKES PHD workshop, and since 2019 as the internal secretary organising the board meetings and ensuring that the societies' activities receive support.
- Jo Michell will become Chair of PKES. Jo has worked closely over the last decade with Mark Hayes and Engelbert Stockhammer to rejuvenate PKES by refreshing the committee, overhauling and redesigning the website, and reorganising membership management procedures.

Please join me in congratulating Annina and Jo and in thanking them for taking on these new duties! Another big round of thanks as well to Engelbert Stockhammer and Gary Dymski, who previously served in the roles of Chair and Secretary.

Best wishes,

Christina Wolf
Senior Lecturer, University of Hertfordshire
