Wealth is in many ways a key topic in heterodox economic research: for one, it is a key source of social stratification and determines the class position of individuals and households. For another, the distribution of wealth is highly unequal, which creates socio-economic power asymmetries, that give rise to differential returns, which often reinforce existing inequalities. This latter observation holds on the level of households, but also on the level of nations, where rich nations can often easily acquire key assets in foreign countries biasing the distribution of future returns in their favor. And, finally, wealth is also economically powerful: the investments undertaken out of private wealth are not only a key driver of economic growth, but also shape the developmental trajectory of nations.

Observations like these motivate much of my research on wealth inequality: For about a decade now I, together with some highly cherished colleagues (like Rafael Wildauer⁴, Ines Heck⁵ and Anna Hornykewycz⁶), use the data supplied by the Household Finance and Consumption Survey \(HFCS\)⁷ of the European Central Bank to provide plausible empirical accounts of wealth concentration in Austria and Europe and to assess the potential revenue of a tax on net wealth for the top 1-3% of the population (see., e.g., here⁸, here⁹ or here¹⁰).

This year we got lucky and could publish our estimates right before the national elections took place – and indeed our estimates pointed to significant revenues (about 1-3% of GDP, depending on the exact definition of tax brackets), which gave some credibility to those parties that were pushing for wealth and inheritance taxes. In times of rising inequality and surging inflation, one could expect that voters have some sympathy for such proposals. However, as the results of our national elections¹¹ indicate voters did not favor 'taxing the rich', but, rather, preferred a version of 'hunting the poor' by voting for right-wing populists, who promised to save on refugees and foreign-born citizens. This is a pity as we have to concede that it is much more difficult to come up with plausible economic solutions and suggestions in a discursive climate that is fuelled by rage, disappointment, and hate. In such a climate numbers will drown in narratives and, seemingly, those pushing for more equality need some improved narratives ;-)

On quite a different level wealth inequality in Africa was the key topic of a SummerSchool I organized jointly with Howard Stein¹² and Resty Naiga¹³ at Makerere University in Kampala two weeks ago (see also my last editorial¹⁴). As expected, I could learn a lot from both, presenters as well as students, about how wealth inequality dynamics play out in diverse parts of Africa. A quite general finding was that the formalization of land ownership – that is, transferring communal into private property – is a key issue of contention in many countries. It comes with several drawbacks that often challenge the assertion that formalized ownership is more secure and reliable. Rather, we saw how formal ownership can lead to an overburdening of households with (one-time) fees and (reoccurring) taxes that often undermine land accumulation by local households and families. These costs will eventually create a too high bar for many as income from agricultural production is often too small and volatile to cover the associated costs, which forces people to sell the very land, whose ownership they just formalized.

This amounts to a specific notion of poverty traps, where existing assets are not enough to earn the income needed for sustaining and preserving these assets. For me this pattern illustrates that the notion of cumulative advantage, which is often used to describe 'rich-get-richer' effects, could be completed by a notion of cumulative disadvantage, where downward spirals affect those households that have too few assets to cover the basic costs associated with these assets (see, e.g., here¹⁵ for an applied example). All this illustrates how cumulative (dis)advantage as a shared cornerstone of heterodox economics is a quite general concept that can explain many aspects of wealth dynamics in many different socio-economic contexts.

Best,

Jakob

Call for Papers

6th Congress on Economic and Social History (Berlin, March 2025)

18-20 March 2025 — Humboldt University Berlin, Germany

Conference Theme: "War and Conflict"

Organizers: Gesellschaft für Sozial- und Wirtschaftsgeschichte \(GSWG\)¹⁶ and Wirtschaftshistorischer Ausschuss im Verein für Socialpolitik \(VfS\)¹⁷

The Gesellschaft für Sozial- und Wirtschaftsgeschichte (Society for Social and Economic History) and the Wirtschaftshistorischer Ausschuss as part of the Verein für Socialpolitik (Economic History Committee of the Verein für Socialpolitik) are jointly organizing their 6th Congress on Economic and Social History. We cordially invite submissions to this conference.

The conference will include contributions on the core topic as well as an open part with sections on topics that are not predetermined. The core theme is "War and Conflict."

We live in a world in which the number of wars and conflicts is increasing enormously. In particular, the intensity of military conflicts that take place in our vicinity or that can have a significant impact on Central Europe's economy and society has reached a new dimension in recent years. Trade flows are being redirected, migration flows are intensified, relative prices are shifting, production methods and consumption are changing. But how exactly do these processes work? In this situation, economic and social history is particularly challenged to use qualitative and quantitative analyses to explore what insights can be gained from earlier war and conflict situations. The historically oriented sub-disciplines of the economic and social sciences have a particular responsibility to provide answers to key questions of the present based on a sound understanding of the past.

Submissions related to the core theme may cover the period from the Middle Ages to the recent past and examine the above-mentioned topics from the perspective of individuals, groups, companies, or states. In addition to case studies, comparative contributions and those using new methods of digital history are particularly welcome.

The organizers invite submissions of individual papers and sections in German or English on both the core topic and the open part.

For each contribution, the following information is requested in a single PDF file: Title of the paper; abstract of the paper (max. 200 words); name and short CV of the author(s); contact information.

For the first time, the GSWG is awarding travel and accommodation grants of up to €100 per person. The requirements are:

1. You are invited to present your paper at the Congress.
2. You have not yet successfully completed your doctorate on 15 November 2024.

Conference on "The Great Transition: Reviving post-capitalist solidarities" (Montreal, May 2025)

29 May - 1 June 2025 — Montreal, Canada

"The Great Transition: Reviving post-capitalist solidarities"

With the collaboration of Alternatives and Historical Materialism Tiohtià:ke/Montreal,¹⁹ Quebec, Canada - May 29 to June 1, 2025

The Great Transition collective is calling on all those interested in building a fairer future to propose activities for the fifth edition of its international conference. The event aims to foster reflection on ways to strengthen left forces, social movements, and activist groups, both in their practices and in their theoretical analyses. This edition is also part of the World Social Forum of Intersections 2025 (WSFI), which calls for alliances, joint mobilizations and the decompartmentalization of our movements struggles.

To find out more about how to take part and submit a proposal for a paper, panel, round table or other activity by consulting the call for papers, actions and workshops²⁰. The deadline for submissions is October 13, 2024 at 11:59PM. If you have any questions, please contact us at info@thegreattransition.net²¹.

History of Political Economy: Special Issue on "The Wealth of Nations at 250"

The Journal History of Political Economy \(HOPE\)²² calls for papers for a Special Issue on "The Wealth of Nations at 250".

detractors. This book has provoked intense controversy, as well as the most antithetical interpretations and appropriations. While the debates surrounding Smith’s thought have been continuous, their content has evolved with the great stakes of each era, as well as with the gradual discovery of new primary material.

So much so that each generation has, in a way, made its own Adam Smith. Celebrations for the centenary of The Wealth of Nations revealed the 19th-century Smith as the forerunner of both deductive and inductive economic science, in the midst of the methodological dispute between the classical and historical school. In response to the challenge posed by the well-known ‘Adam Smith problem’, The Wealth of Nations’ sesquicentennial and bicentennial have shaped the 20th-century Smith invoked by some in defense of purely rational self-interested agents, and by others as a portraitist of individuals moved primarily by emotions and feelings.

On the occasion of the upcoming 250th anniversary of The Wealth of Nations, this special issue aims to shed new light on this book by giving us a glimpse of what the controversial Smith of the 21st century might look like.

Submission Process

Full papers (including a short abstract) should be submitted no later than 1 July 2025 to the Guest Editor: michele.bee@unisalento.it²³ After a pre-selection process, submitted papers will be peer-reviewed by anonymous referees in accordance with the regular procedures of History of Political Economy (HOPE). The issue is scheduled for publication as the 5th regular issue of HOPE in 2026.

Submission Deadline (full papers): 1 July 2025

International Conference on "Cyborg Worker 2.0: The Past, Present and Future of Automated Labour" (Brussels, February 2025)

13-14 February 2025 — Brussels, Belgium

The conference “Cyborg Workers 2.0: The Social and Environmental Costs of Big Tech” will be hosted by the European Trade Union Institute (ETUI) in Brussels, Belgium (in February, 13 and February, 14, 2025). The deadline to submit abstracts is November, 1, 2024.

The conference builds on conversations and interventions launched at the international conference, “Cyborg Workers: The Past, Present, and Future of Automated Work,”²⁴ which took place at the Aarhus Institute of Advanced Studies in June 2023.

The main goal and ambition of the conference is to challenge the framing of mainstream discussions about automation of work and to deepen our understanding of the transformation of work by technology, particularly regarding the social and environmental costs of Big Tech. We welcome perspectives from historians, philosophers, and scholars from the social sciences.

Keynote lectures will be delivered by Ursula Huws (University of Hertfordshire) and Jason Resnikoff (University of Groningen).

Abstract Submission

Please submit your proposal of no more than 400 words as well as a short bio of no more than 150 words, via this Google form.²⁵ For co-authored papers, please identify a first author. If accepted, the first author will be presenting the co-authored paper at the conference.

We will send out acceptance notifications by mid-November. We will prioritize notifying participants who will need a visa to travel to Brussels. Please let us know in the Google form if you will need a visa so we can prepare supporting documentation in a timely manner.

We also strive to make limited funds available to accepted participants (first authors) to cover travel and accommodation expenses. Preference will be given to scholars from the Global South. We will be in touch about the details with accepted participants.

Should you have any questions, please feel free to contact Richard A. Bachmann (North America and Global South Contact) at ribachm@umich.edu²⁶ or Michele Santoro (Europe Contact) at santoromichele7047@gmail.com²⁷.

Introduction

The China shock, the rise of nationalism, the climate crisis, the Covid-19 pandemic and the Russian invasion of Ukraine all have a common denominator for the international trading system: these systemic shocks have all led to a major rethinking of trade policies and their relations to other policy spheres. To begin with, the meteoric ascent of China as the world’s first manufacturing producer and exporter has been a tectonic shift in world politics and economics, with dramatic socio economic effects that have been – and continue to be – felt across industrialized countries (Autor et al. 2013; Autor 2023; Autor 2024). This has had three notable consequences for trade linkages. First, the China shock(s) have redefined the links between domestic and international politics by discrediting trade liberalization and free market policies, leading to a resurgence of economic interventionism in multiple forms, not least with new industrial policies (Bulfone, 2023; Criscuolo et al., 2022; McNamara, 2023; Velut 2024). Second, and in parallel, the dislocating effects of Chinese competition have been widely instrumentalized for electoral purposes and connected protectionist discourse with anti-immigrant rhetoric (Noland, 2020; Polaski et al. 2020; Velut, 2018). These new trade-migration linkages have contributed to normalize and legitimize nationalist narratives. Third, the return of great power competition have contributed to a new – or more accurately renewed – “geopoliticization or “securitization” of trade where security and national interests are intricately interconnected. This intensifying geo-economic competition has translated into a diversification of trade policy instruments, a decentering process away from traditional free trade agreements (FTAs) that includes an ever expanding list of export restrictions, the tightening of investment screening and the proliferation of sectoral “mini-deals” ranging from critical mineral agreements to memoranda of understanding and strategic partnerships (Cernat, 2023; Ferdi De Ville, Simon Happersberger, & Harri Kalimo, 2023; Garcia-Duran, Eliasson & Costa, 2023; Claussen, 2023). The Russian invasion of Ukraine has reinforced the prominence of the trade-security nexus and contributed to the diversifying of trade policies, not least with an unprecedented array of economic sanctions ranging from import bans to export restrictions and asset freezes.

In other words, the “polycrisis” of the twenty-first century (Tooze, 2021) has disrupted both the logic and conduct of trade policies and, most fundamentally, their “embeddedness,” i.e. their linkages with other social and economic policies (Kolben & Rioux, 2023). The legitimation of government intervention and the diversification of trade policy instruments have engendered new ideational collages, institutional arrangements and political economies whose underpinnings and stakes need to be better understood. When issues don't link: in search of trade disconnects Far from being the inevitable or natural convergence of an ever-expanding trade agenda, policy linkages and spillovers are the tip of the iceberg of a contested political economy. On the one hand, business interests have long striven to broaden the scope of trade negotiations in new regulatory fields from investment and trade facilitation (e.g. Chase, 2003; Ravenhill, 2016) to intellectual property rights (Sell & Prakash 2004; Muzaka 2009) and digital trade (Azmeah, Foster & Echavarri 2020). On the other, civil society groups have played a key role in harnessing trade liberalization to labor and environmental standards in trade agreements, whether in the EU (Ahnliid, 2013; Hannah, 2016), the US (Destler & Balint 1999; Aaronson, 2001; Aggarwal, 2013; Kay & Evans, 2018), Canada (Boulanger, Rioux, Zini, 2021), New Zealand or Chile to name just a few policy innovators (Velut et al., 2022). This literature has, however, focused on successful attempts to connect issues, but devoted less attention to failed attempts to link policy spheres, i.e. trade disconnects and silos. The latter can be defined as “persistent deliberative forms of exclusion that explicitly or implicitly marginalize certain political actors and policy issues through a combination of discursive, institutional, interscalar, and countermobilizing processes.” (Velut, 2023, p. 251; see also Velut, Siles-Brügge & Dalingwater, 2022).

In other words, the study of trade disconnects shed light on the dynamics of repression that prevent specific issues and policy stakeholders from boarding on the trade policy vessel. Who governs trade linkages? From exclusive club to inclusive processes The questions of international trade linkages and disconnects are inherently linked to the politics of inclusion and exclusion in trade policymaking, not simply in terms of economic redistribution, but also as a matter of representation and deliberation (Goff, 2021a; Velut, Siles-Brügge & Dalingwater, 2022). Civil society input has been central for the inclusion of social and environmental provisions in trade agreements. Today, a growing number of countries including Canada, New Zealand, Switzerland and Chile are calling for more inclusive trade policies that broaden the traditional range of trade policy stakeholders (industries, unions) and take into consideration the interests of women, indigenous populations, small-and-medium enterprises (SME), subnational governments or cultural actors in policymaking (Broschek & Goff, 2020; DeVille & Gheyle, 2022; Goff 2021a & 2021b; Lequesne & Paquin, 2017; Schiavon, 2019; Velut et al., 2022). Whether these stakeholders are better served through institutional mechanisms (co-optation), social mobilization (contestation) or a mix of both is an open question in both scholarly and political circles. In addition, many questions remain about the potential conflicts between the top-down dynamics of security linkages and the bottom-up pressures to further democratize trade policies. Thus, understanding the political economy of trade linkages is crucial to shed light on the synergies, tensions and potential conflicts between what “procedural” and “substantive” democracy or fairness in trade policy (Miller, 2010; see also Stiglitz 2006; Martens & Orbie 2018). These links between processes and outcomes, causes and effects, have extended throughout the entire spectrum of the policy process – from the negotiating table to the reality on the ground. Facing political pressure from both leftwing and far-right constituents, decisionmakers have devoted increasing attention to the implementation and enforcement phase of trade policies. This “enforcement turn” in trade policies is not only clear in the US and EU, but again, among a growing number of trade powers seeking to ensure that social and environmental provisions in trade agreements have concrete effects on the ground (Hoekman & Bondi 2022; Boulanger, Rioux & Zini 2021; Velut et al. 2022). It is, therefore, all the more urgent to decipher the consequences of integrating or re-embedding trade policies and to disentangle the multiple factors that can help nation-states reach so-called “non-trade” policy objectives through trade, be they environmental, social, cultural or strategic. It is also of utter importance to explain how these different goals interact or conflict with one another, e.g. whether new security imperatives might jeopardize trade and sustainability objectives (Orbie 2021; Garnizova & Velut, forthcoming) or the extent to which trade and environmental linkages might conflict with economic development. More broadly, given the prominent resurgence of nationalism, one may wonder whether unilateral or regional approaches to trade links can still be multilateralized (Bacchus 2022), and whether trade law will be subject to new conflicting interpretations under a “spaghetti bowl” crystallizing deglobalization trends. This special issue invites contributions from a wide range of fields (political science, International Relations, law, economics, sociology, area studies etc.) to decipher the drivers, governance and consequences of new or resurgent trade policy linkages – or conversely, the obstacles to new policy marriages – i.e. the determinants of trade disconnects. Papers can be country-specific or comparative studies contrasting the ways in which countries or groups of countries govern trade linkages (or perpetuate trade disconnects). The purpose is to share multidisciplinary perspectives on the multiple ramifications of trade policies in some of the following policy spheres and beyond:

- Health policies
- Cultural policies
- Security and defense policies
- Digital trade, AI, and the metaverse
- Environmental and climate policies
- Employment and labor
- Inclusive trade policies: trade and gender, indigenous rights etc.
- Others

URPE @ EEA (New York City, February 2025)

21-23 February 2025 — Sheraton Times Square Hotel, New York City

URPE members are invited to submit entire organized sessions or individual papers to URPE for our participation in this year's 51 Eastern Economics Association Annual Conference to be held in New York February 21 – 23, 2025 (see Eastern Economic Association conference website <https://www.ramapo.edu/eea/>²⁹ for more information). In its nineteenth year, URPE @ EEA is continuing to provide a forum for URPE members and economists across the heterodox spectrum to meet and engage with each other, and continue to develop the frontiers of radical political economy.

Workshop on "Austrian economics and political-cultural contexts of bold ideas: The Mises Vienna Private Archive and Interwar Vienna"

The workshop will take place from 17th to 18th February 2025 at the University of Graz³¹, Austria.

While at the workshop first results of our screening of the Mises Vienna Archive will be presented, we welcome contributions on the pertinent development of Mises' thought and its multifaceted contexts, including his development as an economist, social theorist, homo politicus, and "student of civilization".

Proposals for papers (between 350 and 500 words) should be submitted by email to Mises2025EJHET@gmail.com³² no later than 28 Nov 2024. Authors whose proposal is accepted will be invited to send a full paper by 12 February 2025. A selection of papers will be discussed during our workshop in Graz (Austria). We are planning a Special Issue or Symposium on Mises in EJHET. Submission deadlines will be announced shortly after the workshop. Of course, submitted papers will then be reviewed by anonymous referees in line with the regular procedures of the journal. For further information, please contact Lukas Starchl under mises2025ejhet@gmail.com³³.

YSI Pre-IASS Conference Workshop on Adam Smith: Towards the 250th anniversary of The Wealth of Nations (Lecce, March 2025)

27 March, 2025 — Università del Salento, Lecce

2026 marks the 250th anniversary of Adam Smith's Wealth of Nations. Seeking to build on the momentum of Smith's 2023 tercentenary, this major anniversary invites scholars to revisit his groundbreaking work of political economy. The YSI History of Economic Thought working group will organize a one-day workshop on 27 March 2025 ahead of the International Adam Smith Society (IASS) annual conference in Lecce, Italy (28-30 March 2025). This is an excellent opportunity for young scholars working on Smith to be able to discuss their work in detail with peers and senior Smith scholars.

³¹<https://www.uni-graz.at/en/>

³²<mailto:Mises2025EJHET@gmail.com>

³³<mailto:mises2025ejhet@gmail.com>

The workshop’s title “Towards the 250th anniversary of The Wealth of Nations”, deliberately leaves space for a broad range of approaches to re-interpreting Smith’s great work, including, but not limited to:

- The historical significance and legacy of Smith’s political economy
- Explorations of Smith’s ideas in light of today’s socio-economic challenges
- Re-interpreting Smith’s political economy in the context of his wider philosophy

Participants will be asked to pre-circulate some written material two weeks prior to the date of the workshop. This could be a full paper, if available, or shorter draft material (suggested 4000-9000 words). Participants will also need to be registered for the main IASS conference (you can submit your abstract by clicking here³⁴). We are aiming to cover costs for travel to and from the conference (including travel from outside Italy), and accommodation for the night before the workshop. We will provide accommodation for the night before and night of the workshop, at least, and for further nights of the conference, if possible. We will not cover conference fees.

Scholars presenting at this workshop and the subsequent conference will be invited to submit their papers for publication in a special issue of the Adam Smith Review marking the 250th anniversary. In addition, up to three workshop participants will be invited to the International Institute of Research³⁵ of the University of Chicago in Paris to complete their papers following the conference. They will benefit from Faculty support and a workspace, providing the optimal conditions to prepare their papers for publication.

If you are interested in attending the workshop you should:

- (i) be a young scholar (masters, PhD, post-doc);
- (ii) go to the workshop website page³⁶, click the “Apply now” button and fill out the form, including a title and abstract (up to 300 words) for the paper you wish to present

We will let applicants know the outcome by 31st November.

YSI Summer School on "The Sraffa-Keynes Approach: History, Theory and Applications" (Bengaluru, April 2025)

2-5 April 2025 — Azim Premji University, Bengaluru, India

The Economic Development Working Group of the Young Scholars Initiative (YSI)⁴¹ of the Institute for New economic Thinking (INET) and Azim Premji University⁴², Bengaluru is organizing a four-days long summer school, titled "The Sraffa-Keynes Approach: History, Theory & Applications". The summer school will take place at the Azim Premji University campus in Bengaluru.

This summer school follows in the footsteps of two past events that were organized in relation to Sraffa's economics in India, also supported by the Economic Development Working Group of INET-YSI. In 2024, a 3-day workshop was organized on the 'Indian Reception to Sraffa' and in 2022, a 2-day workshop was organized on 'Understanding Economic Theory and Development in a Sraffian Framework', both at the University of Hyderabad.

The summer school has the following objectives:

- To provide a history of the economic ideas of Sraffa and Keynes
- To disseminate the various economic models developed from the Sraffa-Keynes synthesis in especially regards to economic growth, unemployment, and inflation
- To share the growing applied literature that employs the Sraffa-Keynes synthesis to understand economic dynamics both in the Global North and Global South
- To provide space for young scholars to present their research that draws on the Sraffa-Keynes approach and receive comments from senior scholars

Instructors in this summer school include Tony Aspromourgos (University of Sydney, Australia), Zico Dasgupta (Azim Premji University), Santiago Gahn (Università degli

Thomas (Azim Premji University), Limakumba Walling (University of Hyderabad) and Srishti Yadav (Azim Premji University).

The summer school invites applications from two sets of scholars – (a) the advanced-level students, who have engaged with Sraffa’s economic thought who wish to present their work and obtain feedback (Stream 1) and (b) graduate students who wish to be introduced to the Sraffa-Keynes approach and intend to employ the method in their future work (Stream 2).

In Stream 1, a maximum of 7 people will be selected. And in Stream 2, a maximum of 32 people will be selected. They will receive travel stipends, on-campus accommodation and food during the 4 days. The selected participants are expected to arrive at the venue by April 1st (Tuesday) evening and depart by April 6th (Sunday) morning.

Application Process

Stream 1: The young scholars applying for stream 1, i.e., advanced students who wish to present their work that engages with the Sraffa-Keynes approach and get feedback from senior scholars need to submit an abstract by November 31st 2024. All papers must include an abstract of no more than 750 words. If selected, full articles must be submitted by the deadline.

Stream 2: Graduate students who wish to be introduced to the Sraffa-Keynes approach and plan to employ it in their future work need to submit a 700 to 1000 words-long letter of motivation by November 31st, 2024. The letter should specify their research interests and how this summer school may be useful for them to develop their future work.

professor rank, in any of our four scholarly tracks political thought, American constitutional or political thought, economic thought, or statecraft with an anticipated start date in August 2025.

About The School of Civic and Economic Thought and Leadership

U.S. News and World Report has repeatedly ranked Arizona State University (ASU) as the most innovative university in the country ahead of Stanford and the Massachusetts Institute for Technology. Contributing to that no. 1 ranking is the School of⁷¹ Civic⁷² &⁷³ Economic Thought and Leadership⁷⁴,⁷⁵ which aims to create a new kind of leader by blending tradition and innovation, and blending liberal arts and civic education. SCETL plays a leading role in the intellectual and civic life of ASU and the various communities that it serves. Because the academic mission of the School is to renew the nexus of classical liberal arts education and American civic education in a leading public university, the School's courses aim to prepare thoughtful citizens and civic leaders for America's constitutional republic, in civil society or public affairs, regarding domestic and international realities.

The School of Civic & Economic Thought and Leadership (SCETL), entering its eighth year, is a growing academic and civic enterprise with an undergraduate major and minor, undergraduate PPE certificate, an M.A. degree in Classical Liberal Education and Leadership, an ambitious speakers program – the Civic Discourse Project – and two Centers for research and public outreach. The Center for American Civics focuses on civic education, especially American political and constitutional thought, for a broad public and for higher education and particularly for K-12 schools. The Center for the Study of Economic Liberty pursues national and international research on economic thought, debates about markets, and policies affecting economic liberty. See <https://scetl.asu.edu/>⁷⁶ for more information about the School.

About The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences

The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences is the academic heart of Arizona State University, committed to improving communities on a local, national and global scale. We support the professional development and growth of our faculty and staff in their cutting-edge research to advance these aims. Within The College, our faculty engage with a large,

Eastern Oregon University, US

Job title: Fixed Term Instructor of Economics

This job posting is for an introductory position in economics (non-tenure track, but with potential for conversion) at a small heterodox-friendly public institution. Eastern Oregon University⁸¹ is a beautiful campus in the western mountains surrounded by an embarrassment of recreational opportunities. Boise, ID is 2 hrs by automobile and Portland is 4.5 hrs. The state of Oregon has very generous public benefits.

Eastern Oregon University is Oregon's designated Rural University. So, a candidate that is working on rural issues, such as poverty, the environment, resource use, economic sustainability and development, all in the context of dynamic change due to market dynamics, climate change, energy use, agriculture, land use planning, input-output modeling, recreation, or any number of other interests that the candidate might want to teach. The program is relatively new, but will likely be moving in an environmental/natural resource direction and would benefit from an institutionalist (among others) perspective on this. The College of Business at Eastern Oregon University (EOU) is now accepting applications for a full time, fixed term, Instructor in Economics to join our dynamic undergraduate business instructional team. The Economics degree at EOU promotes a pluralistic approach to understanding economic issues, teaching core mainstream approaches while leaving room for understanding complex social and economic issues from a variety of important multidisciplinary viewpoints.

Special consideration will be given to those candidates that have an interest, experience and understanding of regional economic issues, including environmental or resource economics, economic impact analysis and economic value analysis from both the neoclassical and the Institutional (with a focus on social and historical factors that go beyond simple economic impact) framework of analysis. The Eastern Oregon Center for Economic Information is a research arm of the College of Business and the Economics department that works on projects that directly impact our region, including a socioeconomic analysis for an ongoing forest revision project in conjunction with county leadership, non-profit agencies and the U.S. Forest Service. This position will value both theoretical and applied research, but most importantly a great teacher of economics.

This is a 9-month, full-time, fixed-term position that is eligible for the full spectrum of comprehensive benefits. There is potential for this position to be renewed to meet continuing program needs.

Responsibilities

- The typical full time, fixed term 9-month teaching contract at EOU includes 45 credits of teaching (appx. 4 courses per quarter).

⁸¹<https://www.eou.edu>

- Primary teaching responsibilities in undergraduate courses both in-person and on-line.
- Learning assessment and collaborative work with colleagues, staff and community members.
- The successful candidate will bring education and experience to teach in-person and online lower and upper division courses within the business discipline. Course assignments may include Principles of Micro and Macroeconomics, Intermediate Microeconomics, Intermediate Macroeconomics, Money and Financial Markets, Environmental and Natural Resource Economics, Public Finance, History of Economic Thought and Regional Economic Development, along with other economics courses aligned with the candidate's area(s) of specialization and experience.

Minimum Qualifications

- Hold a master's degree in Economics, or be ABD working toward PhD in Economics.
- Experience with a Learning Management System (e.g., Canvas) and the ability to teach effectively online
- Commitment to personal and professional growth of students, including communication competence, written and oral skills, and problem-solving abilities.
- Must satisfactorily complete EOU criminal and credential background check. Having a criminal history is not an automatic bar to employment.
- In compliance with federal law, all persons hired will be required to verify identity and eligibility to work in the United States and to complete the required employment eligibility verification form upon hire. Eastern Oregon University will not sponsor applicants for employment visas.

Preferred Qualifications

- PhD in Economics or Natural Resource Economics
- Demonstrated excellence in teaching and engaging students in a broad range of economics courses at lower division level in both face-to-face and on-line modalities.
- Experience assessing and reporting student learning outcomes.
- Online teaching professional development, credentials and/or certification (e.g., Quality Matters).

Application Process

Applicants should submit

1. A letter of interest that addresses relevant expertise and teaching experience.
2. A current curriculum vitae
3. One-page statement of teaching philosophy.
4. Names, telephone numbers, and email addresses of three professional references.

Candidates are encouraged to review the values and principles of Eastern Oregon University⁸² .

Application Deadline: open until filled

Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona, Spain

Job title: 4-year PhD position on precariousness and mental health

IGOP researcher Lara Maestriperieri has launched a call for PhD students who want to join the OUTIP project which aims to study the impact of precariousness on the psychological well-being of young people through an intersectional analytical framework.

The project involves research in the project, under the supervision of Prof. Mireia Bolibar⁹² and Lara Maestriperieri⁹³, and in collaboration with other members of the OUTIP team. Do not hesitate to contact lara.maestriperieri@uab.cat⁹⁴ if you need more information regarding the position. Read more about the position and the project here: <https://tauler.seu.cat/pagDetall.do?idEdicte=520319&idens=11>⁹⁵ (code of the project: PID2023-147403NB-I00).

Job description

The successful applicant will become part of the research team PID2023-147403NB-100. In close collaboration with the principal investigator and the rest of the research team, the selected candidate will be able to: i. develop a doctoral thesis on a topic related to the project, ii. assist in the development of the research project, iii. present and publish related publications with the results of the research, iv. help organise and participate in the conferences, dissemination events and seminars of the project. In particular, we expect the applicant to be involved in the following research activities:

- Carrying out an in-depth review of the literature on the relationship between labour market insecurity, economic insecurity and the perception of insecurity (precarity) in advanced capitalist countries;
- Management and analysis of data related to the longitudinal survey on precariousness and mental health among young people at the state level;
- Carrying out, managing and analysing biographical interviews with young people with a vulnerability profile;

Profile of the candidate

We are looking for a person with a master's degree in social sciences, primarily sociology or political science, with an interest in developing a doctoral thesis in the field of social sciences, preferably in sociology. We will value both the theoretical and methodological preparation of the candidate and, in particular, their competence in data collection techniques and analyses with a quantitative and qualitative approach and the ability to frame a research object within broader theoretical debates. Our ideal candidate has skills in both approaches and knows how to carry out quantitative and qualitative research with a relative level of autonomy. People with research experience with mixed methods will be particularly valued, as well as those candidates with research experience around the topic of precariousness and youth. Competence in English will also be assessed, which is the official working language of the research group of this project, given that the composition of the team is international, with the collaboration of the Politecnico di Milano (Italia), Université of Geneva (Switzerland) and the Fundació 1Maig (Spain). Competencies in Spanish or Catalan are not required at the outset. Still, we expect that the selected person acquires this language competence throughout their pre- doctoral career to develop autonomously their qualitative fieldwork. Candidates' competence with qualitative and quantitative data analysis software will also be assessed, such as STATA, SPSS, R or Atlas.Ti and N-Vivo.

Presentation of the project PID2023-147403NB-I00 (OUTIP)

The general objective of OUTIP is to study the impact of precariousness on the psychological well- being of Spanish youth, considering the mediating role of vulnerability through an intersectional analytical framework. This project conceives precariousness as perceived insecurity based on a subjective assessment of current labour and/or economic conditions. Opting to apply this notion of precariousness allows us to unite two currents of literature (job precariousness and economic insecurity), developed mainly independently despite having points in common in their research object. The first original point of this project is to analyse the impact of precariousness on psychological well-being, considering at the same time its dimensions of insecurity related to work and the economy. As a second original contribution, we argue that youth's increased vulnerability to mental health problems depends on various economic and social determinants as well as specific individual circumstances. Vulnerability mediates between precariousness and psychological well-being and will be conceived from an intersectional gender perspective. We focus on young people because the stage of the life course they are in makes them particularly vulnerable to precariousness and mental health problems.

This project addresses the following research questions:

- i. How does precariousness influence the psychological well-being of young people?
- ii. To what extent does an intersectionally-conceived vulnerability mediate this relationship?
- iii. Are there any specific intersections that are particularly exposed to the adverse effects of precariousness on psychological well-being?

OUTIP will take a mixed methods approach to address these questions among the population of 20-34 year olds. We will conduct an original longitudinal survey to explore the influence of labour market precariousness and economic insecurity on subjective feelings of precariousness over time (2 waves, 18-month span). A second research action will address the most vulnerable profiles of young people and explore difficult-to-intercept meanings through a survey. We conduct 20 biographical interviews to reconstruct the life course of young people and understand the intersectional complexity of their vulnerability. This will allow us to understand if specific intersections of inequalities magnify the person's exposure to the negative consequences of precariousness on psychological well-being. The policy implications of the empirical evidence gathered within the project will be disseminated through personalised actions to the public, civil society associations and policymakers.

Deadline for applications: 31 October 2024

Awards

Call for Nomination: William R. Waters Research Grant

The William R. Waters Research Grant was established in 1999 in honor of William R. Waters, editor of the Review of Social Economy for many years and President of ASE in 1987. The purpose of the William R. Waters Research Grant Program is to inspire scholars to organize their research in social economics and social economy along the lines suggested by William Waters in his 1988 presidential address to the Association for Social Economics:

“The major concern of social economics is explaining the economy in its broadest aspects; that is, showing how human beings deal with the ordinary business of using human and physical resources to achieve a level of material comfort. Explanation includes cultural, political, and ethical details as they are needed for a full understanding. As in any economics, there are three parts to social economics. First is the philosophical base of the social economist, which may or may not be a reflection of the philosophical base or ethos of the society he/she is studying. Social economics (or any economics) builds upon it. It is the hard core as in the recent popular literature of the philosophy of science. The second part of the discipline is a description of the significant characteristics of the economy. The economist must observe the multiplicity of economic reality and abstract those characteristics that are substantive. The two together, the philosophical premises and the empirical observations, will determine the third part of the discipline, social economic policy. Policy formulation is thus a mix of the first two.”

William R. Waters, presidential address, “Social Economics: A Solidarist Perspective,” Review of Social Economy, 1988, p. 113 ff.

The research grant is for promising graduate students in Ph.D. programs who have not yet completed their dissertation, those holding post-doctoral positions, and for new faculty members who have not yet been granted tenure or who are tenured but have not yet achieved the rank of Associate Professor (or its equivalent outside the US). The current amount of the annual grant is up to $5000.

To apply for the current round of grant funding, the following materials need to be submitted by 5pm Eastern Standard Time on Wednesday October 30, 2024:

1. A completed cover sheet¹⁰⁴ .

2. A 4 to 5 page narrative (in 12 pt Times New Roman font single-spaced) explaining the following:
 - a) The purpose of the project: What will be learned from the research to be undertaken, and what will be its contribution to knowledge? What are the expected outputs from the work?
 - b) A description of the research project to be undertaken, including the issues to be examined, the research methods to be employed (this needs to be sufficiently detailed), and why this constitutes innovative work in comparison to the available evidence in the field.
 - c) The relationship of the project to social economics: What conceptual frameworks, topical concerns, and/or empirical methodologies drawn from social economics will be used in the present project? How is the project expected to contribute to social economics?
 - d) The plan of work: Include a timetable for the project, resources to be used, travel plans, etc.
 - e) The estimated budget: Indicate all costs that would be covered by the grant (e.g., travel expenses, research costs, summer stipend, etc.)
3. An up-to-date curriculum vitae.
4. Two letters of recommendation: For students, one letter should be from their dissertation advisor.

The winner of the Waters grant will be announced at the ASE Presidential Breakfast at the ASSA Meetings in January 2025.

All application materials including letters of recommendation should be uploaded to the google folder here¹⁰⁵ . If there are any questions, please write to the committee chair Farida Khan at fkhan@uccs.edu¹⁰⁶ .

Winners' Announcement: Elinor Ostrom Prize

2024 Elinor Ostrom Prize

The 2024 Elinor Ostrom Prize¹⁰⁸ was awarded on 21 September 2024 at the WINIR Conference on Institutional Resilience & Recovery¹⁰⁹ (Pittsburgh, USA). The announcement was made by Esther-Mirjam Sent, JOIE's Co-Editor-in-Chief.

The Elinor Ostrom Prize has been established in 2014 in honour of the Nobel laureate Elinor Ostrom¹¹⁰ (1933-2012), who was an enormously creative scholar and a pioneer of the interdisciplinary field of institutional research.

Ostrom's most famous work focused on the problem of managing and maintaining common-pool resources, but she also applied her ideas to problems of political governance and climate change. Her theoretical work on rules is of paramount importance. In her last decade she became increasingly interested in how rule-systems (or institutions) evolve. Her articles published in the *Journal of Institutional Economics*¹¹¹ (JOIE) are among the journal's most-cited papers.

A prize of £1500, funded by Millennium Economics Ltd. (the owner of JOIE), is awarded each year for the best full-length article published in JOIE in the preceding calendar year. Each annual prize competition is judged by an international committee of experts in the field of institutional research.

This year's winner is Jon Murphy (Nicholls State University, USA) for his outstanding article:

“ Cascading Expert Failure¹¹² “ Journal of Institutional Economics 19(1): 52-69.

Crude Capitalism: Oil, Corporate Power, and the Making of the World Market

by Adam Hanieh — 2024, Verso Books

This expansive history traces the hidden connections between oil and capitalism from the late 1800s to the current climate crisis. Beyond simplistic narratives that frame oil as 'prize' or 'curse', Crude Capitalism uncovers the surprising ways that oil is woven into the fabric of our modern world: the rise of an American-centered global order; the breakdown of Empire and anti-colonial rebellion; contemporary finance and US dollar hegemony; debt and militarism; and the emergence of new forms of synthetic consumption. Much more than an energy source or transport fuel, oil has a foundational place in all aspects of contemporary life - no challenge to the fossil fuel industry can be effective without taking this fact seriously.

Crude Capitalism maps the varied geographies of oil, including the rise of OPEC, the importance of revolutionary and Post-Soviet Russia, the crucial role of African upstream reserves, and the new petrochemical circuits that link the Middle East, China, and East

Development Ethics: Political Economy and Morality

by Nikos Astroulakis and Nikolaos Karagiannis — Springer International Publishing, 2024

This book provides a fresh perspective on international development. By integrating ethical concepts and moral philosophy with political economy, Nikos Astroulakis and Nikolaos Karagiannis explore three levels of ethical analysis: meta-ethical, normative ethical, and applied ethical. This approach underscores the importance of ethics in shaping development goals and strategies tailored to an individual society.

The book uses a framework rooted in heterodox political economy to redefine what it means to be a “good society.” It challenges conventional economic models and proposes development ethics as a compelling alternative. Readers will discover new ways to understand the purpose of development and innovative methods to evaluate its success. Development Ethics explains how ethical principles can transform development policies, making it an essential read for those committed to building a more just and equitable world.

Gender and the Dismal Science: Women in the Early Years of the Economics Profession

by Ann Mari May — Columbia University Press, 2022

The economics profession is belatedly confronting glaring gender inequality. Women are systematically underrepresented throughout the discipline, and those who do embark on careers in economics find themselves undermined in any number of ways. Women in the field report pervasive biases and barriers that hinder full and equal participation—and these obstacles take an even greater toll on women of color. How did economics become such a boys’ club, and what lessons does this history hold for attempts to achieve greater equality?

Gender and the Dismal Science is a groundbreaking account of the role of women during the formative years of American economics, from the late nineteenth century into the postwar period. Blending rich historical detail with extensive empirical data, Ann Mari May examines the structural and institutional factors that excluded women, from graduate education to academic publishing to university hiring practices. Drawing on material from the archives of the American Economic Association along with novel data sets, she details the vicissitudes of women in economics, including their success in writing monographs and placing journal articles, their limitations in obtaining academic positions, their marginalization in professional associations, and other hurdles that the professionalization of the discipline placed in their path. May emphasizes the formation of a hierarchical culture of status seeking that stymied women’s participation and shaped what counts as knowledge in the field to the advantage of men. Revealing the historical roots of the homogeneity of economics, this book sheds new light on why biases against women persist today.

How Silicon Valley Unleashed Techno-feudalism: The Making of the Digital Economy

by Cédric Durand¹⁷⁵ ; Translated by David Broder¹⁷⁶ — 2024, Verso Books

The rise of the IT industry in the nineties promised a new era of freedom and prosperity. It didn’t deliver. Certainly, algorithms are everywhere, but capitalism is no more civilised than ever.

In fact, in the hands of private corporations, the digitalisation of the world drives us towards a darker future. The return of monopolies, the dominance of a few platforms, the blurred distinction between the economic and the political all epitomise a systemic mutation. Information and data networks push the digital economy in the direction of the feudal logic of rent, dispossession, and personal domination.

¹⁷⁵<https://www.versobooks.com/blogs/authors/durand-cedric>

¹⁷⁶<https://www.versobooks.com/blogs/authors/broder-david>

How Silicon Valley Unleashed Techno-feudalism offers a fresh genealogy of the Silicon Valley consensus and its contradictions. It disentangles the principles of an emerging systemwide rationale. Large firms compete in cyberspace to gain control over data, and ordinary people are increasingly at the mercy of tech giants. In this new economic order, capital is moving away from production to focus on predation.

University of Göttingen on the occasion of Stephan Klasen's farewell lecture to honor his achievements for development economics research in Göttingen and his commitment for the training of young scholars. The fellowship period is April 1st, 2025 through March 31st, 2026. Fellows are expected to relocate to Göttingen for the period of the fellowship.

Candidates from low- and middle-income countries according to the OECD DAC list of ODA recipients are eligible to apply. Candidates are further required to hold a PhD in development economics (or similar) before the start date of the fellowship. We are looking for early career researchers who completed their PhD within the past five years. Based on your specific conditions (please indicate, e.g., rearing of small children, severe illness, disability etc.), longer periods will be considered. At least one of the two fellowships will be awarded to a female candidate. Disabled persons with equivalent aptitude will be favored. The university has committed itself to being a family-friendly institution and supports their employees in balancing work and family life.

Further details are provided here: www.uni-goettingen.de/klasen-fellowship Please send application documents in one single pdf file and in this order: 1. Cover letter addressing research plans for the near future and policy relevance of your work, 2. CV with contact details of at least two academic references, 3. one publication or working paper that is representative for your work. Applications should be submitted to bewerbungen@wiwi.uni-goettingen.de¹⁸².

International Network for Economic Method (INEM) Call for Proposals: Frontiers in Philosophy of Economics

Call for Proposals: Frontiers in Philosophy of Economics

The executive board of the International Network for Economic Method \(INEM\)¹⁸³ is pleased to announce the call for proposals under the theme 'Frontiers in Philosophy of Economics.' We invite scholars, researchers, and practitioners to submit proposals that advance our understanding and visibility of the philosophy of economics. We would like to encourage debates about new topics in philosophy and methodology of economics and/or advance novel approaches or perspectives on the ongoing discussions. We also encourage scholars at various stages of their careers, including specifically early-career scholars, to apply. We especially welcome applications from scholars affiliated to institutions outside Western Europe and the USA.

¹⁸²<mailto:bewerbungen@wiwi.uni-goettingen.de>

¹⁸³<https://econmethod.org/#:~:text=The%20International%20Network%20for%20Economic,of%20closely%20related%20social%20sciences.>

We support organisation of events or initiatives that advance the following goals:

1. Provide novel perspectives on ongoing discussions or neglected areas of philosophy and methodology of economics

We seek proposals that develop innovative approaches in well-established areas or neglected domains within philosophy and methodology of economics. We encourage submissions of workshops, lectures, conferences, seminars, symposia or novel formats that:

- explore under-researched areas,
- introduce novel methodologies, approaches or perspectives.

Proposals that foster inclusion and support for early career scholars and underrepresented groups are particularly encouraged.

1. Enhance the visibility of INEM as an institutionalised scholarly network and of philosophy and methodology of economics at allied societies.

We welcome submissions that aim to increase the visibility and impact of INEM and of philosophy and methodology of economics as a scholarly field within related academic domains and professional societies. We seek proposals for:

- collaborative projects with other organizations.
- outreach and engagement activities.
- symposia, workshops, or special sessions that promote philosophy and methodology of economics during conferences of cognate societies or neighbouring disciplines.

We particularly encourage proposals that foster inclusion and support for early career scholars and underrepresented groups.

1. Increase the visibility of INEM and philosophy and methodology of economics as a scholarly field outside of Western Europe and the US/Canada

We welcome submissions that aim to increase the visibility and impact of INEM and philosophy and methodology of economics in regions outside of INEM's traditional reach, i.e., Western Europe and the US/Canada. Those would be proposals for:

- collaborative projects with organisations in regions beyond Western Europe and the US/Canada.
- outreach and engagement activities in the direction of new geographical regions

- workshops, conferences, or symposia that promote the field of philosophy and methodology of economics that help bridge geographical regions.

We particularly seek proposals of this sort that also foster inclusion and support for early career scholars and underrepresented groups.

Submission Guidelines

Submissions should include the following: Description of the topic of the project, planned activities, preliminary schedule, scholars involved and their role and explanation of how the project fulfils the goals of this call. Description of the proposal should be between 1,000 and 1,500 words. Detailed budget for the whole project period. Please submit one file in PDF format via email to inem.econmethodology@gmail.com¹⁸⁴ Selected proposals will receive funding support up to 4000 USD. The amount of funding will depend on the scope and needs of the project. We can fund the costs of rental of a seminar room, travels to the event of invited speakers or underfunded scholars, accommodation of invited speakers or underfunded scholars, coffee breaks and snacks, social dinner, and promotional materials, among other things. For any anticipated costs not listed here, please seek clarification using the contact information below. We will support both in-person and hybrid events. In justified cases the costs of purchasing equipment for organizing hybrid events can be covered. Early-career scholars are PhD students and scholars who obtained their PhD after January 2020. Selection of proposals will be by members of the INEM Board. Applicants will be notified of the selection results by mid-December 2024.

Verso Books calls for support

Verso Books needs your help to launch its Autumn 2024 list of books after the bankruptcy of one its most trusted partners.

For more than fifty years Verso Books has been an essential radical publisher, publishing landmark books by Benedict Anderson, Judith Butler, Noam Chomsky, Mike Davis, Norman Finkelstein, Nancy Fraser, Walter Rodney, and Edward Said. Our world is changing quickly, from environmental collapse to the rise of right-wing political movements and new economic crises. What has not changed is Verso's 50-year commitment to radical
