Issue 257 — January 06, 2020 — web¹ — pdf² — Heterodox Economics Directory³

Yesterday, this year's ASSA meeting⁴ in San Diego has ended. The ASSA meeting is probably the greatest gathering of economists throughout the year and it is noteworthy insofar as the ASSA is one of the very few places, where exchange between heterodox and mainstream economists could be facilitated. I say 'could be', because actually this is only rarely the case: mainstream researchers typically do not participate heterodox sessions, while heterodox economists, who do occasionally visit mainstream sessions, often remain invisible there as the standard mainstream session does not allow for much discussion. This separation has been further amplified by an evaluation system used by the AEA, which assigns future slots for session based on past attendance. This scheme creates an additional (and in my view unhelpful) incentive to stick in one's 'in-group' and abstain from interparadigmatic engagement (see also here⁵). By the way, the same incentive - to stick with your in-group - appears in the context of citation-based evaluations (see here⁶ for an elaboration).

However, the ASSA is nonetheless a great to place to stay in touch with major debates in the profession and to find some potential insights and inspiration. Even if I cannot attend personally (as in this year; otherwise you would have gotten a more extended report:-), I always screen the contributions in the heterodox session, which can be quickly assessed here⁷. You have to search of different heterodox associations first to not get lost - a compilation of these can be found here⁸. In case you are interested in participating: the calls for the ASSA meeting typically close between April and May of the year before the event and are typically announced in this Newsletter!

All the best for the upcoming year,

Jakob

EASST+4S Conference (Prague, August 2020)

18-21 August 2020 — Prague, Czech Republic

EASST+4S "Locating and Timing Matters: Significance and Agency of STS in Emerging Worlds"

How has the world changed since 2016 when EASST and 4S met in Barcelona? Since then, efforts to frame "alternative" approaches and futures appear to have been co-opted by powerful actors. Big Data has been fiercely replacing former identities with digital identities for humans, animals and artefacts. Geopolitical and epistemic centres have further multiplied. The global temperature of the planet continues to increase, as do global emissions of CO₂. Wildlife biodiversity is decreasing, while the first CRISPR-Cas engineered babies with altered germlines were born. Modern nation-states have become more unstable even as we see the tentative emergence of new collectives and solidarities. The #metoo campaign has sparked a new wave of articulations of and conflict over gender power asymmetries contributing energy to other ongoing efforts against asymmetric differentiations and exclusions in and beyond academic contexts. These are just some of the major shifts that create feelings of urgency, unease and confusion. Calls to “act now” proliferate. And yet, while technoscience and its products ever more tangibly shape our planet and lives, politicians, publics, and even academics feel helpless.

We invite STS scholars to examine such spiralling changes that generate these feelings of urgency and powerlessness in ways that make our research relevant to wider academic and non-academic publics. For the meeting in Prague, we especially welcome inquiries into longer term continuities and discontinuities and material legacies of modernity—both desired and undesirable—that have been built into our sociotechnical infrastructures and ways of living. We want to pay special attention to the ways in which geopolitical, economic and epistemic globalization is localized and distributed over Planet Earth. What are the means and ends of STS in different places? What does it take to intervene and be relevant here and there? Whom do we want to speak and act with? Who wants to speak and act with us?

We encourage STS researchers to ask reflexive questions with regard to our own existing and potential practical contributions to these ongoing developments. How do we, can we and should we (re)organize our own professional practices to the differences we desire? How may we collaborate across regions, genders, races, religions or disciplines without reproducing inequalities? How shall we publish, (co)author and cite in inclusive ways? How do we rethink and remake ways of recognizing and crediting the work of others in an era of pervasive audit and (self)tracking? How do we liaise, meet up and travel responsibly in a time of climate disruption and overproduction of waste? How can we engage with policymaking and society at large amidst the dynamics of “alternative facts”?

Submission Process

There are three ways how to take part in EASST/4S Prague 2020: Presenting individual paper, organizing Closed Panel, organizing and/or engaging in Making & Doing. Please consult the focus and themes⁹ of the conference program as well as the participation guidelines before submitting.

1.) Presenting Individual Paper

Individual paper submissions should be in the form of abstracts of up to 250 words. They should include the paper’s main arguments, methods, and contributions to STS. When you submit your paper, you will be asked to designate one or more STS Research Areas using a drop-down menu.

⁹<https://www.easst4s2020prague.org/focus-and-themes/>

When submitting your paper, we urge you to consider submitting it to an Open Panel. This method of “crowd-sourcing” panel composition has proven successful in stimulating the formation of new networks and collaborations around topics of interest to the 4S community. Open Panels have been proposed by scholars working on nearly every continent and relating to just about every major STS theme. You can read summaries of all the accepted Open Panels here¹⁰. When you submit your paper to an Open Panel and up to two alternates. Single papers unassigned to an Open Panel(s) will be added into suitable panels (both Open and Closed) by the program committee.

2.) Closed Panel

Closed Panel proposals should contain a summary and rationale of up to 250 words, including a brief discussion of its contribution to STS. A panel proposal must contain between 3-10 paper abstracts. A Closed Panel can extend into maximum two sessions. Note that the Program Committee will take the final decision about panel composition. If your proposal contains fewer than five papers, the Committee may (in consultation with organizers(s)) assign additional papers to your panel to optimize scheduling and participation.

The Program Committee will consider proposals for a limited number of Authors Meets Critics panels. Authors Meets Critics panels must contain two books, both of which are the first books of their respective authors. The panel discussion should address both books together and should reflect the diversity of work and scholarship of 4S. Please submit Authors Meets Critics panel proposals as Closed Panels.

Submitting a panel involves some extra steps. Panel organizers are responsible for assigning roles to each presenter and entering the titles and abstracts for all presentations in their panels. You may want to watch this screencast video¹¹ before beginning (Please note that it was created for the last year NOLA meeting and some details may not apply, such as the Twitter handle).

3.) Organizing and/or engaging in Making & Doing

The STS Making & Doing program invites 4S members to present experimental works and innovative practices in any medium that engage speculative, empirical, reflexive and/or aesthetic approaches to the study of science and technology, broadly defined. Making & Doing encourages the participants to move beyond the printed page and share projects that consider what it might mean to “make do” in the merging worlds. We strongly recommend the organizers read more about Making and Doing¹² and view examples from past meetings before submitting your proposal.

¹²<https://www.easst4s2020prague.org/making-and-doing/>

To submit any of the above types of proposals, visit the program website¹³ and log in with your 4S credentials. If you have submitted a paper to any recent 4S meeting, you already have an account. Please exercise due diligence and look for an existing account before creating a new one. Creating a duplicate account is likely to cause complications. The same caveats apply to entering co-authors and session participants.

Call for Abstracts - Panel 135

Paulina Dobroc, Andreas Lösch and Maximilian Roßmann invite the broad spectrum of STS-scholars to submit abstracts for their open panel “Politicization of Sociotechnical Futures: Prerequisites and Limits” (Panel 135) at the EASST4S conference in Prague (18-21 August 2020):

STS-research on expectations, imaginaries and visions has shown that imaginaries of sociotechnical futures, the promises and fears associated with them, increasingly influence processes of sociotechnical innovations and transformations. In various societal contexts — e.g., research politics, scientific collaborations, parliamentary debates, social movements — these imaginaries serve as visionary resources and capacities to legitimate decisions, coordinate practices, steer developments, raise awareness for specific problem-solutions etc. For this purpose, futures are getting politicized. The objects of politicization materialize in a variety of forms (e.g., terms, symbols, metaphors, narratives, artifacts, traditions, organizations). We assume that both, the specific characteristics of the societal context (e.g. power constellations) and of the forms (e.g., discursive narratives or prototypes) are conditions for the politicization. For example, it makes a difference, if promises of openness are part of hacker practices or part of parliamentary debates about Open Government. At the same time, an in-vitro-burger may serve as an object of politicization differently in the context of 3D printing development compared to public controversies on nutrition transition.

We invite theoretical and empirical papers from the broad spectrum of STS-scholars to discuss and to elaborate questions such as:

- How does the interplay of contextual constellations and forms shape the processes of politicization?
- What are the prerequisites and limits for the politicization of futures (e.g., for the success of visioneers) related to different contexts and forms?
- How do sociotechnical futures evolve in time and context- and form-specific politicizations of futures emerge?

Please submit your abstract of max. 250 words until February 29, 2020 here¹⁴. For more details see the Panel description.¹⁵

18th International Conference of the Charles Gide Association on 'Co-operation' (Lausanne, Sept. 2020)

10-12 September 2020 — University of Lausanne, SwitzerlandThe 18th international conference of the Charles Gide Association will be held at the University of Lausanne (UNIL), 10-12 September 2020, under the auspices of the Centre Walras Pareto d'études interdisciplinaires de la pensée économique et politique (CWP). The theme of the conference will be on 'Co-operation'.

'Co-operation', i.e. 'acting hand-in-hand with someone else' has been, for centuries, central to the way economic and political societies operate. The question of co-operation arises in the 1820s in a number of important and converging ways: in Robert Owen's shadow it was understood as a way of organizing the economy in such a way that it was rooted in co-operative societies, which were constituted on the basis of collective decision making and an equitable distribution of wealth. From the 1820s onward, many thinkers who were influenced by Charles Gide's 'co-operativism' and the Nîmes School considered the idea of co-operation to be at the centre of their reflections. This gave birth to numerous social and economic experiments. In the British case, these ranged from the Rochdale Society of Equitable Pioneers to the Preston Model.

The topic of co-operation raises many questions, especially, for example, in relation to reciprocity and exchange, oscillates between distinct poles. As a 'Third Sector' it differs explicitly from capitalism, liberalism, and socialism. But the boundaries between co-operation and other political ideologies are far from being clearly demarcated. In a broad constellation of concepts, co-operation can be situated next to 'associationism' and 'mutualism', and gave rise to a Theory of Commons, as well as a social-economy of solidarity. Situated between the spheres of individual actions and transactions and state intervention, it co-ordinates and orientates actors in the political and social spheres. A number of economic theories today have developed out of the concept of co-operation. It can be deployed in game theory in order to account for modes of social organization, shedding light on how social institutions, which are emerge out of competing private interests, might be made stable. It is therefore worth studying co-operation's theoretical foundations, its changing, and many meanings, the debates it has generated in the field of economic, social, political, and philosophical thought, and its numerous historical forms.

¹⁴<http://convention2.allacademic.com/one/ssss/prague20/>

¹⁵<https://www.easst4s2020prague.org/accepted-open-panels-all-abstracts/>

Some of the issues raised by co-operation in various fields may provide for fruitful avenues of reflection:

- How were social institutions designed to achieve co-operation and co-ordination theorised and established?
- To what extent does the history of thought shed light on the reasons underlying individual and group co-operation?
- Is co-operation the result of a political will to transform society, or, is it, more prosaically, a good way to do business?

Please note:

- As in previous years, this Gide conference will also host papers on all topics related to the history of economic thought and philosophy of economics.
- Proposals by doctoral students are highly encouraged as practical research workshops and sessions useful for the pursuit of their careers will be organised for the conference.

Proposals should be submitted via the conference website,¹⁶

- for a communication (max. 500 words)
- for a session (max. 800 words, collecting 3 communications separately submitted)

Hilton Istanbul Kozyatagi Hotel on April 4-5th, 2020, Istanbul/Turkey. The finance-real economy nexus at micro and macro levels continues to garner the attention of professionals and academics alike as the importance of connections between these fields has become increasingly well understood. The recent developments in the international economics and politics, associated trade wars, slowing global growth and risks to financial stability and vulnerabilities of monetary and fiscal authorities are crucial and debatable areas. In addition to these economic and financial issues, the dawn of fourth industrial revolution is breaking and artificial intelligence, blockchain and deep learning are emerging technologies with crucial social, economic, political and financial implications.

The 1st International Conference on the Contemporary Issues in Finance, Trade and Macroeconomy (ICOFINT) brings together international scholars and policy-makers to present and discuss research on the frontiers of knowledge in the interconnected fields of Finance, Trade and Macroeconomy. The themes of this year's conference are Financial Stability, Risks to the Global Growth, Financial Integration, Trade wars and Tensions, 4th Industrial revolution, Innovations, Artificial Intelligence, Blockchain & their implications for businesses and society.

32nd Annual Conference of the European Association for Evolutionary Political Economy (EAEPE) (Bilbao, Sept. 2020)

2-4 September 2020 — Bilbao, Spain

”The Evolution of Capitalist Structures: Uncertainty, Inequality, and Climate Crisis”

In recent decades, the global spread of economic liberalization and financial deregulation, has inserted the former socialist economies (e.g. China and Central Europe) into international markets. This has generated deep structural changes in both the evolution of advanced, emerging and developing economies and the global distribution of growth and human development. Many advanced economies implemented economic and welfare reforms to reduce unemployment and match rising competition from these new international actors. Employment policies evolved into labour market policies to promote greater flexibility instead of workers' rights and wages. Similar processes have occurred in emerging and developing economies.

Since the implementation of the policies of the Washington Consensus, governments opened their economies and markets to domestic and international competition and integrated into regional governance systems such as the European Union, the European Monetary Union, the NAFTA, Mercosur, etc. Financial deregulation was one of the outcomes of such policies, which significantly increased the impact of volatile global markets on national economies. Now national financial regulators face challenges in supervising globally mobile financial capital and recurring financial crises have become more widespread due to greater interconnectedness of financial systems.

The globalization process, labour market reforms and technological change, have in many cases, generated high structural unemployment, a decline in labour incomes and security and segmentation in labour markets. In most countries, income distribution inequality, both personal and functional, has increased. This inequality has created additional global economic problems, such as greater economic and financial instability, higher poverty rates, and a stagnation of private consumption that leads in turn to lower rates of economic growth and even secular stagnation. Polarisation of incomes increase in private indebtedness, and youth unemployment remain highly problematic in both. The impact of these structural changes has accompanied a squeezing of public sector capacity to deal with the rising need to protect people through the social and redistributive policies. Governments are expected to be smaller but more efficient despite shrinking fiscal space. Dominant fiscal policies, which are still oriented to reducing the size of the public sector, sustain and control fiscal imbalances.

For the first time in decades there are signs that global economic integration is now threatened, while challenges posed by the processes of internationalization and globalization, rising inequality in income distribution are accompanied by new forms of risk. Greater military and environmental insecurity has forced people from their homes to seek safety abroad. Environmental collapse has changed from a possibility into a process and, soon, an inevitability. National political systems, including democracies, have been stressed by these changes creating hybrid forms of authoritarianism. International forms of cooperation that were seen to order world politics are also experiencing dramatic change. Given the uncertainties and complexity of these structural changes and the threat of an increasingly unstable global ecosystem, alternative theoretical and methodological approaches capable of representing and interpreting these disequilibria are required.

The conference invites delegates to open up their discussion of the dynamics of economic evolution in late capitalism and to test established and novel interpretations of capitalist structure. These might include stock-flow, integrated assessment, agent-based modelling and network analysis or they may address particular challenges such as the consequences of cumulatively worsening climate change. Macroeconomic policies need to gain new inspirations from ecological economics and political ecology, e.g. steady-state perspectives or even confronting the growth imperative of capitalist evolution.

We may also address how hegemonic political economic goals, such as achieving price stability and controlling public debt via austerity policies make it difficult to provide the necessary means for labour and the environment. The conference will provide unique opportunities to revisit the foundations of inequalities and structural change, to discuss alternative points of view at the macro, meso and micro levels, and to enrich traditional evolutionary background with diverse fields such as complexity science, biology, political and international studies, development studies, physics, philosophy sociology, history of thought, and management science among others. The aim is to provide new empirical evidences and fresh insights for policy makers to understand the complexity of structural change and to redefine innovation and formulate new innovation policies. In doing so we aim to allow a rethinking of the role of the State in relation to transition issues; to define and build commons to manage environmental issues; to establish new partnerships with developing countries; to investigate new ways of consuming and producing; to shape new institutions to manage these structural changes; to redefine social interactions related to demand and the labour market; to define new business models relevant to the internet age; to identify new organizing principles in the context of a knowledge economy; and to finance and participate in a greener economy.

4th International Marxist Feminist Conference (Bilbao, Oct. 2020)

15-17 October 2020 — Bilbao, Spain

It is our pleasure to inform you that the 4th International Marxist Feminist Conference will be held in Bilbao (Basque Country), on October 15, 16 and 17, 2020. The event will be organized by Transform! Europe, the University of the Basque Country (UPV / EHU), the Iratza Foundation, Parte Hartuz, Critical Theory Bilbo-Barcelona (BIBA CT), InkriT and the Rosa Luxemburg Foundation.

The conference will be organized in ten thematic axes, and the proposals will have to be included in one of these axes, exposed in the web. Main thematic axis:

²¹https://eaepc.org/?page=events&side=annual_conference&sub=eaepc_2020_cfp

- Unions and social and political movements (included hacktivism). New networks and strategies.
- Dialogue between currents to face heteropatriarchal, racist and colonial capitalism: marxist feminism, materialist feminism, class feminism, black feminism, community feminism, decolonial and postcolonial feminism, lesbofeminism, anarchist feminism and other analytic and propositional frames.
- On Intersectionality: gender, sexuality, race, class and other intersections.
- Production of value and life: analysis and alternative paradigms.
- Territories, decoloniality, sovereignty and national liberation struggles in 21st century.
- Eco-feminism and eco-socialism.
- Bodies, discourse and dissident materialities.
- Art, esthetics, language and culture politics.
- Anticapitalist and feminist law, State and constituent power.
- Rising of the right and the new wave against feminism and socialism.

We welcome papers and panel proposals by activists, academics and social movements, specifically from the feminist movement, unions, new working class associations and autonomous militant groups. Proposals—at least one page and two at most—can be submitted in Basque, English or Spanish via the online platform²². Registration for the event is free and mandatory, and it will be open until April 30, 2020 also through the web. Participants will have to pay for their travel and stay expenses. We will have the privilege of having the following keynote speakers: Cinzia Arruzza, Tithi Bhattacharya, Lorena Cabral, Elsa Dorlin, Nancy Fraser, Francesca Gargallo, Frigga Haug and Gayatri Spivak. In addition, we will have an opening plenary session formed by the Feminist Movement of the Basque Country and the new organizations of working women.

Call for Book Chapter Proposals: "Democracy and Development"

"Democracy and Development" in Elgar Handbook on the Politics of International Development

The notion of “democracy” can be loosely defined to mean “a government of the people, by the people and for the people”. More generally it refers to electoral process and pluralism, civil liberties, the functioning of government, political participation and the political culture of a particular country. Early prophets of development did not establish an association between economic development and forms of government. Moreover, the Brazilian miracle and most works on the developmental state did not originally make a connection between authoritarian rule and development. Classic examples to support this point are Taiwan, Singapore and China. Since the end of the Cold War democracy has often been conceived a prerequisite for development, or at the very least a prerequisite for donor support. The multiplication of democracies across the globe has called into question the nexus between democracy and development. A lively debate revising the absence of the nexus has ensued. Those in support of the linkage argue that the two – democracy and development – are intertwined and depend on or lead to the other. However, opposing views claim that the two concepts are independent of each other, and can easily be achieved without necessarily depending or leading to the other. An important point to note is that both development and democratization are progressions and not a once-off event.

We are seeking chapters that critically investigate the nexus drawing insights, either from theories that investigate the nexus, or from empirical evidence across a variety of countries. The publishing format will be an essay collection for our Elgar Handbook on the Politics of International Development under contract to be submitted in early 2021.

Contributions should be generally oriented around one or more of the following (or thematically similar) questions:

- Has “successful development” happened more frequently under authoritarian rule?
- Is there an empirical or conceptual sequence between development and democracy?
- Is democracy a constraint or a driver of development?
- How does development affect democratization?
- How does democratization affect the course of development?

- What are the democratic demands that development triggers?
- What are the developmental demands that democracy prompts? How are they resolved?

The VII Fair Trade International Symposium³⁵ will take place in Chiapas, southern Mexico, in June 2020. For the first time, this meeting will take place in a country where fair trade actors are mainly small farmers. Chiapas is certainly one of the best places to hold a symposium with and for fair trade farmers, as it is the heart of Mexico and Central America coffee production, as well for honey production from Yucatán to Nicaragua and Argentina. At a wider scale, challenges faced by Mexican farmers are shared in most Latin American countries, and in many ways, close to situations in Africa and Asia.

Jointly with the steering committee, the host institution has identified a series of topics relevant for both academics, practitioners and producers, along three main thematic areas.

- Social and economic themes: FT beyond farm and certification
- Social and political themes: partnerships and sectoral approaches
- Environmental themes: solutions at the landscape scale

For more information about this topics please visit the Themes³⁶ section. Any other research related to FT is welcome. Sessions will be built on the basis of received and accepted papers.

Presenting at FTIS 2020: The symposium will feature plenary keynote addresses, parallel paper presentations, poster sessions and participatory workshops. The main languages of the symposium will be Spanish and English, with simultaneous translation during as many of the sessions as possible. There will be an opportunity during poster sessions for multilingual presentations and discussions.

Papers: Researchers and practitioners who would like to present a paper are invited to submit an abstract (500 words written in Spanish or English). Paper sessions will include time for audience questions and feedback. The abstract should include the theme addressed, the applied theory and methodology, the results obtained and the main bibliography.

Free format presentations: Farmers and people belonging to farmers' organization are welcome to submit a free-format presentation, relating their experience in one of the topics that will soon be announced. These presentations will be part of specific sessions oriented to the exchange of knowledge through a "campesino a campesino" (farmer-to-farmer) method. Texts should be written in a maximum of 500 words including pictures, graphs and drawings.

Posters: Participants are also given the opportunity to submit a 1-page abstract for poster presentations. Poster abstracts can be written in Spanish or English. Limited translation support will be provided, but authors are encouraged to consider an effective presentation format for an international audience.

Workshops: A workshop is a working meeting that focuses on a specific area related to the conference themes. Proposals for workshops should be 1 page in length. The proposal should include a brief overview of the area of research, teaching or practice that will be addressed, a summary of the session's planned activities, and a brief discussion of the workshop leaders and some tentatively identified participants. A workshop session can require participants to read and prepare feedback on one another's abstracts or do some other preparation prior to the session.

Submission Process

All abstracts should be submitted online³⁷. All abstracts will be evaluated through a peer review process. Notification of acceptance or refusal will be sent within 1 month. Reviewers may formulate suggestions, or in some cases require specific conditions, which will need to be considered for the acceptance of the full paper.

Please make sure the abstract submission includes:

- The intended session format – paper, poster, workshop
- Designated corresponding author

³⁷<http://www.ecosur.mx/ftis2020>

- Contact information (name, address, phone, email) for the author and any other participants (e.g., workshop panelists, symposium presenters, etc.)
- Three keywords to assist in assigning reviewers.

Submission constitutes a commitment that at least one paper author will attend the conference if the submission is accepted. Everyone submitting a proposal should be prepared to serve as a reviewer for at least three other submissions if requested. If you have questions, please contact Andrés Castro Siller³⁸ (ECOSUR).

Historical Materialism: The Rise of New Authoritarianisms and the Agenda for Resistance (Ankara, April 2020)

10-12 April 2020 — Ankara, Turkey

The rise of far right authoritarian regimes, nationalist and populist political parties and movements, and neo-conservative ideologies and politics across the globe, present a new challenge to states and to the global order. For those on the left and the center-right embracing neo-liberalism, the new challenges of autocratic leaders and fundamentalist radicalisms require analyses and responses. The popularity of those right movements, and their political success in both democratic politics and their political success in securing power within democratic politics has jeopardized the main tenets of liberal democracy. Increasingly, authoritarian and populist political strategies have frustrated democratic opposition movements and challenged political resistance. The left needs to understand the rise of the far right parties, examining their social/class basis as well as their historical and geographical context. Equally, the left needs to examine the effectiveness of its resistance and responses to the outrage of the right.

The rise of authoritarianisms has had severe implications at the local as well as global levels, including diplomatic tensions, wars, refugee crises, ecological crises, urban crises, casual cultural and purposeful misogyny and racism. Historical Materialism Ankara invites contributions that enrich radical critical understandings of the present conjunctures. Papers that analysing the problems and developing coherent and effective responses are also welcome. Papers are especially encouraged on the following themes:

- Authoritarianisms old and new, and the lessons from history
- Changing conceptions of national security and democratic openness

³⁸<mailto:ftis2020@ecosur.mx>

- Recent/Ongoing changes in the state and global legal/political apparatuses and state-class relations
- Land politics and new authoritarianisms
- The political economy of new authoritarianism
- Marxist political theory and the genealogy of authoritarianism
- New fascisms: ideology, politics and impact
- Populism, theirs and ours?
- Trump and the state of American Imperialism
- The legacy of the states of emergency/exception: from France to Hong Kong

In addition to these themes, HM Ankara also welcomes panel and paper proposals that advance Marxist and left radical thought and politics. This includes:

- Political economy, value theory and Capital
- Feminist, social reproduction, queer, crip and racial critiques
- The analysis of states: histories, ideologies and politics
- Culture, literature and the arts

The conference will also include the following streams, see this link³⁹ for full details.

Submision Process

1.) Panels: Panels may be papers organised around a theme, roundtable discussion forums or book launches. All have similar requirements. Submit proposals for panels via the online portal.⁴⁰ Please note that papers will only be accepted if they contain:

- The name(s) of the proposer – the lead correspondent will be responsible for communication with their panel members
- The e-mail of the lead correspondent. This will be used for all correspondence
- The names of all panel participants
- The affiliations of panel participants as appropriate

³⁹<https://hmankara.net/call-for-papers/>

⁴⁰<https://hmankara.net/submit-2/>

- The title of the papers where it is a papers panel or the title of the roundtable discussion or the title of the book
- An abstract for each paper, where it is a paper panel of not more than 300 words or a brief outline of the panel contents
- If you are submitting it to one of the streams of the conference, which stream you are submitting to (though the conference organisers reserve the right to allocate as seems most appropriate)
- Details of participation and particular any times/dates you cannot present.
- Those people proposing multiple participation, offering papers and participating in panels, should be aware that we would expect them to attend for most if not all of the conference, and may reject their engagement if they are only attending for their singular participations
- Whilst we recognise that panels can change in respect of personnel, acceptances are made for panels on two grounds, that the original proposal's focus is met, and that there is a clear sense of what and who the panel involves. Vague proposals for panels are unlikely to be immediately accepted

2.) Papers: Submit proposals for individual papers via the online portal⁴¹. Please note that the conference organisers will organise accepted papers into thematised panels. Papers will only be accepted if they contain:

- The name(s) of the paper-givers – lead correspondent first
- The e-mail of the lead correspondent. This will be used for all correspondence
- The affiliations of paper givers as appropriate
- The title of the paper
- An abstract for the paper of not more than 300 words
- If you are submitting it to one of the streams of the conference, which stream you are submitting to (though the conference organisers reserve the right to allocate as seems most appropriate)
- Details of participation and particular any times/dates you cannot present. Please note, we will try to respect these constraints, but papers may be rejected where they are either going to be presented by someone attending the conference for just that purpose, or with very limited time availability given. Those people proposing multiple papers or offering papers and participating in panels should be aware that we would expect them to attend for most if not all of the conference, and may reject their engagement if they are only attending for their singular participations. All participants MUST be registered for the conference either prior to the conference or when they arrive at the conference.

⁴¹<https://hmankara.net/submit-2/>

Multinational Companies in Turbulent Times: Strategies, Norms, and Experimentation across Borders (Seoul, April 2020)

16-17 April 2020 — Seoul, Republic of Korea

Turbulent times is an apt metaphor for today's global economy. Economic, political, and technological uncertainties have grown continuously, and digitization accelerates the blurring of temporal and spatial boundaries of global business and work. Despite contributing to the creation of turbulence, MNCs must also cope with turbulent times by altering not just business matters, but the ways in which their workforces operate globally. MNCs exist in contested fields where organizational actors compete, negotiate, disrupt, and consistently create-and-recreate work norms in rapidly changing environments. In this conference, we are keen to share scholarly efforts that aim to answer questions regarding how these norm changes occur in MNCs. We also explore their production networks and uncover how the mechanisms of norm changes differ across countries and regions during turbulent times.

We are particularly interested in the roles played by individual and collective actors, otherwise known as globalizing actors. These actors intend to create, maintain, and disrupt norms in multinational organizations while dealing with fluctuating environments and increasingly diverse workforces in their day-to-day operation. These globalizing actors exercise reflexive agency to create, diffuse and negotiate norms in the iterative and fragile process of institutional experimentation, engaging in MNC's strategic action fields. As individuals play the roles of globalizing actors, they exploit ambiguities, form alliances, employ formal and informal resources, and interact with existing institutional and normative beliefs to advance their interests without risking their relationship with the companies. This conference intends to shed light on the less documented topics of strategic and reflexive roles of globalizing actors and the implications of their actions in MNE strategies, norms, and experimentation.

This conference welcomes scholarly works in any social science discipline that enhances our understanding of both emerging and established MNCs as the strategic action fields. We identify three themes for theoretically rich and timely discussions as follows, and submissions can address one or cross-cutting themes.

- Theme 1 is globalizing actors in MNCs, referring to individuals who create, diffuse, interpret, and negotiate norms (which includes rules, principles or guidelines) across international operations (Kern, Almond, Edwards, & Tregaskis, 2017). Relevant topics include but are not limited to: roles and strategic actions of globalizing actors, GVC- and organizational-level conditions that enable or constrain these actors, comparison between globalizing actors in MNCs from various regions and phases of global integration, etc.
- Theme 2 concerns institutional experimentation within and involving MNCs that aim to promote better work. Our discussion of better work and associated experimentation goes beyond the issue of the quality of jobs and includes concerns for worker well-being, collective representation of worker interests, and democracy at work. Such initiatives can stem from social activists in and around MNCs, as they can express CSR pressures from consumers and buyers along GVCs or new sets of obligations stemming from free-trade agreements, or they can result from domestic and transnational worker organizations and strategies. We are interested in submissions that explore individual, organizational or institutional initiatives aimed at experimenting for better (or worse) work in the increasingly fluctuating global business context.
- Theme 3 pays special attention to emerging MNCs. We aim for an inductive understanding and theorization of emerging MNCs that may reflect the institutional legacies of their country of origin, and their experience navigating GVCs. We are also interested in comparative studies between emerging and established MNCs to investigate whether and how the roles that globalizing actors play in disrupting and creating norms within their day-to-day work.

Submission Process

Participants will have an opportunity to submit their full papers for consideration of a special issue in Spring 2021 at the Journal of Asian Sociology⁴². Interested participants of the conference should submit their abstracts with a maximum length of 1000 words to Dr. Jinsun Bae.⁴³ Please email inquiries to this address as well.

Post-Keynesian Conference (Lille, Dec. 2020)

9-11 December 2020 — Lille, France

⁴²<https://www.jstor.org/journal/jasiasoci>

⁴³http://mnctt2020@gmail.com

The ADEK (French Association for the Development of Keynesian Studies) organize a Post-Keynesian conference in Lille in December 2020. This conference is the successor of the Dijon and then Grenoble rendez-vous which were the bi-annual international conferences organized by French Post-Keynesian economists.

In 1930, John Maynard Keynes wrote his famous essay where he tried to anticipate the economic situation which would prevail 100 years later. 90 years ahead, two questions can be addressed:

- how has the economy evolved since the 1930s;
- how do Keynes' grandchildren now imagine the economy for their own grandchildren?

The conference welcomes papers dealing with these two questions. When Keynes wrote the Economic Possibilities, the economy was in the middle of one of the most severe economic crisis the World has ever experienced. The economic mood was very pessimistic at the time, but Keynes tried to see beyond the short-period crash and look at the long run future of our society. He assessed that the economic problem would be solved, or nearly so, within about 100 years. There are only 10 years left now, and the problem of "poverty in the midst of plenty" is still relevant today. After several decades of rising inequalities, a new economic and nancial crisis has casted doubt on the limits of conventional economic policies, especially monetary policy. Meanwhile, some issues have emerged that challenge the economic problem, especially the "ecological problem". Why aren't we where Keynes thought we would be? The conference encourages proposals which are dedicated to explain why we are so far apart from the picture Keynes drew in 1930. The conference will also try to anticipate the economic future of our own grandchildren. How can we anticipate the economic situation at the end of the XXIst century? Are we able to promote economic policies dealing with the ecological problem? What are the monetary and nancial reforms needed to shape a more stable economic environment? The working language for the conference will be English. Some parallel sessions in French will be held. This conference will be held in Lille (France) and is being organised by the Clerc e (Centre lillois d'études et recherches sociologiques et économiques, UMR CNRS 8019), University of Lille, and ADEK (French Association for the Development of Keynesian Studies). We encourage economists from various strands of post-Keynesian economics, as well as from other heterodox traditions, to submit papers that fall within the scope of the general theme of the Conference, as well as within the scope of post-Keynesian economics. As 2020 is also the 50th anniversary of the death of Michal Kalecki, papers that honour his memory are also welcomed.

Submission Process

Paper proposal: on the conference theme and/or within the scope of Post-Keynesian economics (and its relation to other Keynesian schools of thought);

Panel proposal (one coordinator, one theme, and three to four contributors).

Please submit your proposal(s) (abstract with less than 200 words) via the official website.⁴⁴

Review of Evolutionary Political Economy (REPE): Special Issue on “Networks dynamics, economic transition, and policy design”

Special Issue on “Networks dynamics, economic transition, and policy design” in the Review of Evolutionary Political Economy (REPE)

The structural change of modern economies due to rapid technological advancements is a multifaceted and complex phenomenon and nowadays often discussed as transition towards a knowledge-based economy. In this sense, recent issues challenging the economy and society are for example the global sustainability goals, the energy question, new market structures driven by new technologies, rapid changes through digitalization etc. Cooperation is one way for firms to cope with an increasing level of complexity in high velocity market environments and outperform competitors. Cooperation enables mutual exchange of knowledge, provides learning platforms and paves the way for collective innovation processes for the actors involved. The sum of micro-level cooperation activities for a well-specified set of actors is reflected in network patterns at higher aggregation levels. Networks can drive – but also hamper – transition processes and are themselves affected by economic transition in various ways.

Empirical research shows that innovation processes are in many cases the outcome of collaborative activities of heterogeneous actors. In nearly all industries and technological areas we see a pronounced R&D cooperation intensity and the emergence of innovation networks with dynamically changing compositions over time. At the same time, we know that economic actor's innovativeness is strongly affected in various ways by its strategic network positioning and the structural characteristics of the socio-economic environment in which the actor is embedded in. In this sense, R&D cooperation and innovation networks, geographical closeness and other dimensions of proximity, inter-regional differences in innovation activities, industry dynamics, structural change and systemic instabilities, path-dependencies and lock-in effects, bounded rationality, herding behavior, and self-enforcing system dynamics – to name just a few relevant issues – need to be considered appropriately to gain an in-depth understanding of innovation processes. Even though these issues have been proved to play a key role, they are typically neglected in traditional economic models. Systemic approaches – rooted in evolutionary economics – provide a more realistic and comprehensive theoretical basis to capture the highly complex and socially embedded nature of innovation processes. Interdisciplinary research on complex adaptive systems provides a prolific toolbox for analyzing and understanding system inherent dynamics compared to traditional, exclusively prize-quantity and cost-benefit oriented frameworks. This perspective allows us to identify systemic failures, which slow down or hamper innovation. Within the systemic perspective widely unexplored innovation policy-related issues can be analyzed, which are of a theoretical and an applied interest.

⁴⁵<mailto:pklille2020@sciencesconf.org>;

The objective of this special issue is to promote theoretical, conceptual, and empirical research on system dynamics, system failures, systemic interventions and innovation policy design. Possible research questions are outlined below. Exemplary research questions:

- Which factors in innovation networks fuel or might hamper transition processes?
- How can an innovation systems perspective contribute to the governance of transformation processes?
- What is the role of different networks actors (e.g. producers, consumers, science organizations, civil society) during the transition process?
- What role do incumbents play and what role do start-ups play in transition networks?
- How can we identify system failures in technological, sectoral or regional innovation systems?
- What are the insights from innovation systems research concerning the exploration of new technological opportunities?
- How can we use the innovation systems perspective to govern the transformations towards sustainability?
- What role can consumers play in innovation systems?
- How do different relationships between established companies and start-up companies influence the dynamics of innovation systems?
- What is the role of the relationship between urban and periphery regions in innovation systems?
- Do digital technologies influence the emergence, the development and the composition of innovation systems?

- How can innovation systems stay innovative when they face disruptive technological change?
- How do interrelationships with actors at higher spatial levels (national, international) influence innovation systems?
- What can be learned from innovation systems research concerning innovation policy for peripheral areas?
- What role do borders play for the evolution of cross-border regional innovation systems?

Structure of the planned Special Issue

Currently, we plan to include a maximum number of six to nine research papers, organized in three separate, but closely related thematic sections and an opening (editorial) paper. The first section focuses on issues mainly concerned with ‘network and system dynamics’, the second focuses on ‘economic transition and structural change’, and the third relates to ‘policy design and implementation’.

Submission process

Please consult the submission guidelines before submitting the paper. We only consider papers submitted via the online editorial management system⁴⁶.

Studies in Emergent Order and Organization (SIEO): Special Issue on "Carl Menger and Classical Liberalism"

Special Issue on "Carl Menger and Classical Liberalism"

The aim of this issue will be to highlight the role of the founder of the Austrian School of Economics within the tradition of classical liberalism. A special focus will be directed on the connection between his theory of institutions as emergent orders related with the notion of spontaneous order, later developed within the School, which is fundamental in understanding political and economic classical liberal tradition.

Contributors are required to send their proposals on the following possible issues:

- Menger’s thought about economic action within a context of uncertainty.

⁴⁶<https://www.editorialmanager.com/repe>

- Menger's contribution on methodological issues to understand complexity in society.
- Menger on education aimed to shape a liberal society in political and economic terms.
- Menger's ideas on creativity as a way to develop the notion of entrepreneurship as it had been developed within the Austrian school.
- Menger's philosophical background which possibly influenced his vision on social institutions, with a special attention for the Viennese tradition.
- Menger's investigation on economic analysis which collocated him within classical liberalism (differences and analogies with Manchesterism and German Historical School).

Please, send your proposal to giandomenica.becchio@unito.it⁴⁷. Notification of acceptance will be sent by March 15, 2020. A proposal for a session at the next SDAE conference (November 2020, New Orleans, LA) may be on the table, depending on feedback and timing. Please, let the organising committee know whether you will be able to eventually join the Conference, in case the session proposal will be accepted by the SDAE committee. Submission Deadline: 1 March 2020

Workshop on "Understanding Economic Theory and Development in a Sraffian Framework" (Hyderabad, Oct. 2020)

19-20 October 2020 — Hyderabad, India "Understanding Economic Theory and Development in a Sraffian Framework"

Neoclassical economics continues to dominate contemporary economics teaching and research, despite the 2007 Global Financial Crisis posing a serious challenge to the Neoclassical understanding. While there have been several attempts to strengthen alternative approaches to economic theory post the crisis, the attempts have been limited and its impact has remained marginal. In this context, Sraffa's contribution and its further developments, along with the economic understandings by John Maynard Keynes and Michal Kalecki, offer a coherent theory of value and distribution and an alternative theory of output and economic growth that can be applied in the context of both advanced and developing economies. In the recent couple of decades, much work has been carried out in the areas of monetary economics, public economics, firm theory, capital theory, economic growth, environmental economics using a Sraffian framework. In this workshop, we will engage with Sraffa's contribution to economic theory and with works that analyze various economic questions in a Sraffian framework. Through this workshop, we will attempt to engage with the logical difficulties of mainstream neoclassical framework and with the Sraffian theory as an alternative framework for understanding contemporary economic processes and economic development.

⁴⁷<mailto:giandomenica.becchio@unito.it>

YSI, in collaboration with University of Hyderabad, Hyderabad and Azim Premji University, Bengaluru, is organizing a two-days long workshop on:

- Sraffa's contributions to the field of economic theory, notably, value theory and capital theory;
- the influence of Sraffa's work on applied political economy, particularly in the developing countries; and
- its relevance for enhancing our understanding of the path of economic development in developing economies.

This workshop aims to provide a platform for Masters' and PhD students with these interests to present their work, obtain feedback from senior scholars, and to obtain an understanding of the frontiers of the Sraffian research programme. The Workshop will also invite a set of senior scholars who will deliver lectures on the theme of the workshop and engage with the young scholars. The workshop is particularly directed towards researchers and students with an interest in classical political economy (CPE), history of economic thought, and economic development from a CPE perspective.

The workshop will comprise of a set of plenary talks by invited scholars and a set of presentation sessions for young scholars to present their work based on the theme and obtain valuable feedback from the senior scholars. This call for abstracts is organized by the Economic Development Working Group. Contact the organisation team⁴⁸ regarding any questions.

If submitting initial drafts, please provide a good roadmap of how the project will be developed. The Initial drafts should be no less than 5000 words. If selected, full articles must be submitted by the deadline for full paper submission. All papers must include an abstract no more than 500 words To submit an abstract visit the official website.⁴⁹

Event Invitation: "Recession ready: Green planning to beat tomorrow's downturn" (London, January 2020)

16 January 2020 — London, UK

The New Economics Foundation are hosting a discussion on 16 January 2020 on planning a green response to the next recession, with speakers including Lord Adair Turner, Professor Daniela Gabor and Caroline Lucas MP.

Failure to respond to the last recession by scaling up investment in a socially just way to tackle climate breakdown was a missed opportunity. Austerity saw vital public services and investment cut back after 2010, prolonging economic pain, increasing inequality and suppressing average living standards. But worse still, failure by governments to fund a cleaner, zero-carbon economy after the recession has left a permanent scar on our planet. Not enough investment was brought forward in the crucial months after the recession. With annual growth at its lowest in a decade, recent figures suggest Britain's flagging economy dodged a bullet by narrowly avoiding a recession. With the likelihood of another recession now higher than at any time since 2007, the question is no longer a matter of when will the next economic downturn come, but what to do once it strikes?

Ten years on, UK policy makers find themselves once again unprepared for another recession but also in the midst of a climate emergency. Yet there is also clear potential for change. How do we get there? From Green New Deals, to carbon taxes, to green monetary policy, to fiscal rules – join NEF for a discussion of the possible responses.

The event (which is free to attend) will take place at the Royal Society in London, between 9:30am – 11:30am on Thursday, 16 January 2020.

Job title: Assistant Professor Position in Macroeconomics of Development

⁵⁰<https://neweconomics.org/2019/12/recession-ready-green-planning-to-beat-tomorrows-downturn>

⁵¹<mailto:Lukasz.Krebel@neweconomics.org>

The International Institute of Social Studies (ISS) is a leading academic centre for international development studies. While part of Erasmus University Rotterdam, the ISS is based in The Hague. ISS was established in 1952 as a post-graduate institute of policy-oriented critical social science and development-oriented research. ISS offers a PhD in Development Studies, a 15.5 month MA in Development Studies, a joint MA in Public Policy (Mundus MAPP), and post-graduate Diploma courses. The two positions have been created as part of ISS's ongoing ambition to diversify the composition of its academic staff with recruits from the Global South. ISS has identified key partner countries and, in particular, for these two positions, we seek applicants from the Global South whose work focuses on Ecuador and/or Colombia.

The position is meant for early-career academics, that is, those with a recent (or soon to be completed) PhD and offer the possibility of pursuing a career at ISS while creating or enhancing strong connections with academic institutions in Ecuador and Colombia. The successful candidates will be embedded in the institute's research program and will work with a team of researchers who will ensure that the candidates receives support from within the organization and are enabled to participate in research, teaching and engagement with institutes in Ecuador and Colombia. The expectation is that the successful candidates will play a leading role in developing further collaborative activities in these two countries, such as joint research and PhD supervision, double degree MA programmes, exchange of researchers and students, and engagement with alumni.

The successful candidate will be expected to carry out high-quality and societally-relevant research in the broad areas of Macroeconomics of development, with expertise in areas such as financial flows, financialization, trade. Candidates with a heterodox economics perspective are encouraged to apply. The candidate will have a teaching base in the Major in Economics of Development (ECD) and/or the Major in Agrarian, Food and Environmental Studies (AFES). They will also be expected to contribute to institute-wide teaching efforts, such as in research methods.

Desired skills and expertise

We are looking for candidates who meet the following requirements:

- Ideally a recent (soon to be completed) PhD in a relevant field of social sciences (such as development studies, development economics, macroeconomics, human geography, sociology, gender studies, international relations, ecological economics)
- Comfortable and experienced with both qualitative and quantitative/econometric methods (especially for the Macroeconomics position)
- Networking abilities
- Documented extensive academic experience in Ecuador and/or Colombia

- An active publication strategy and/or a good publications record (in line with career stage)
- Ability to acquire research funding
- Demonstrated capacity and skills in teaching MA students and supervising MA research papers in multicultural environments
- Possession of BKO (Basis Kwalificatie Onderwijs) certificate/Teaching in Higher Education Certificate or willingness to obtain this qualification after joining ISS
- Ability to conduct or contribute to advisory and capacity building/development programs and to attract external finance for such programs;
- Evidence of social and academic valorization, including e.g. contributions to public debate, policy briefs, stakeholder engagement
- Team spirit and willingness to collaborate in interdisciplinary teams and projects.

Conditions of Employment

The selected candidate will be offered a contract at the level of Assistant Professor, starting as soon as possible, with the possibility of tenure and promotion to the rank of Associate Professor after 6 years upon successful performance as judged according to specified tenure track conditions. To help develop candidates with the tenure track from assistant to associate professor, they will be offered:

- Relatively more time for research (65%) in the first three years of the appointment with the remainder for teaching, valorisation and management
- Mentoring/coaching

In accordance with the conditions applied at Erasmus University Rotterdam as indicated in the Collective Labour Agreement (CAO NU) of the Dutch universities, the salary is dependent on the candidates' experience and corresponds to scale 11, which is between € 3637 and €4.978 gross per month, on a fulltime basis. In addition, EUR pays an 8% holiday allowance and an end-of-year payment of 8.3% and offers excellent secondary benefits. Erasmus University Rotterdam, in cooperation with the nearby universities of Leiden and Delft, offers a Dual Career Programme to assist spouses of international employees in their search for a job on the Dutch Labour market.

How to apply

Please submit your application, including a CV, a motivation letter, two sample papers, and a 3 page (maximum) description of your focus areas in research and teaching. This document should also indicate key academic partner/s in Ecuador and/or Colombia and discuss how ISS may build collaborative activities with institute/s in Ecuador in the coming three years. Applications may be sent by email⁵². Additional information may be received by contacting Prof. Mansoob Murshed, Chair of the Selection Committee via email⁵³ or via the official website⁵⁴.

University of Luxembourg / Luxembourg Institute of Socio-Economic Research (LISER), Luxembourg

Fully funded PhD researcher in Economic Geography

In a joint research project co-coordinated by both the University of Luxembourg (UL) and the Luxembourg Institute of Socio-Economic Research (LISER), we are looking for two PhD candidates interested in the realms of green/sustainable finance and alternative/circular economies. One position will be recruited by the University (main supervisor: Christian Schulz), one by LISER (main supervisor: Sabine Dörry). Together with the supervisors, the two candidates will be closely collaborating on the AltFin project.

The AltFin project seeks to better understand regional economic development at the interface of alternative economy approaches, here circular economy (CE), and sustainable finance, in order to comprehend mechanisms that will guide regional transitions towards sustainable development. Fundamentally, transitions as directed, yet open-ended, social processes require institutions to adapt and change. Thus, AltFin scrutinises in particular regional institutions in the three neighbouring countries France, Germany and Luxembourg, where national and regional initiatives have started to support CE endeavours. CE is indeed a prominent example of broader alternative economy approaches with particular – long-term – financing needs. At the same time, powerful financial firms, mainly embedded in international financial centres (IFCs) to serve global circuits of capital, have started to shift parts of their business towards sustainable finance. For example, large investment funds seek to invest in projects and assets that not only generate financial returns but also ecological and/or social benefits (impact investing). CE is an area that potentially matches these investment criteria, but, so far, the majority of financial firms anchored in IFCs invest much more on a global than on a national/regional level. Further, finance is a powerful player and may promote change in a different direction than that intended by CE agents. The proposed project builds on preliminary evidence from Luxembourg that although there is strong demand for financing CE projects on a national level, financial firms in Luxembourg's IFC – which has heavily specialised in green bonds and green investment funds – primarily invest in extra-European regions and, there, mainly in climate finance projects. We hypothesise that one reason for this organisational, financial and geographical mismatch is a corresponding mismatch in Luxembourg's institutions that are currently unable to (re-)align local finance needs in regional alternative economic projects with global finance supply in IFCs. We seek to investigate empirically in a comparative manner the power-induced relationships between sustainable finance designed in the IFCs Frankfurt, Luxembourg and Paris, and alternative economic activities in the three regional economies. Ultimately, AltFin seeks to develop a new framework of institutional change and its key mechanisms and practices at the interface of sustainable finance and alternative economies to strengthen regional economies and their sustainable development.

The Doctoral Candidate will be a member of the department of Urban Development and Mobility (UDM) and do his/her research within the framework of the AltFin research project

Tasks include:

- Prepare a doctoral thesis on sustainable finance and its opportunities and challenges for regional transition economies;
- Contribute to co- and single-authored publication endeavours of the project team;
- Participate in the everyday management of the project, including public outreach activities, site visits, stakeholder workshops, social media communication etc.

Your Profile:

- Master in economic geography, heterodox economics, financial sociology or a related discipline;
- Methodological skills and/or previous qualitative research experience in an urban or industry context and in the use of related software tools;
- Strong interest in finance and finance-related issues, and sustainability oriented transitions and innovation in this sector;
- Excellent verbal communication and academic writing skills in English and German and/or French;
- Enthusiasm for research, critical thinking, including some first experience in publishing;
- The project's comparative case study framework requires frequent travelling to the financial centres in Paris, Frankfurt and Luxembourg, and the successful candidate is expected to possess well-developed intercultural and social skills to conduct research in these environments.

Required Documents:

- a letter of application outlining your thematic interest, motivation and profile;
- a CV;
- copies of relevant degree diplomas, especially Master degree;
- two letters of recommendation (to be uploaded with the application documents or sent separately to recruitment@liser.lu);
- a relevant written document (e.g. a working paper, a chapter from your MA/MSc thesis, a seminar paper).

Please submit your complete application via the online platform.⁶⁹

European Commission under the H2020 framework and comprising twelve European institutions. The aim of CASCades is to study the implications of extra-European climate risks on various domains of European societies (trade, finance, geopolitics, policy, etc.). The aim of the Work Package led by WU is to achieve: i) a comprehensive assessment of the exposure of European businesses and private/public financial institutions to direct and indirect extra-European climate risks and opportunities, from the perspective of both individual organisations and the financial system as a whole; ii) the identification of appropriate changes in business models, portfolio allocation strategies and public policies to reduce the exposure of European businesses and investors to climate-related risks and make use of opportunities.

The responsibilities of the post holder will be to contribute to:

- the development of the financial database model
- the collection of time series data of financial exposures of EU financial actors to Extra-European firms via financial contracts (equity holdings, corporate and sovereign bonds) from main financial data providers (e.g. Bloomberg, Thomson Reuters Eikon, Bureau Van Dijk, Datastream)
- the cleaning of data and the creation of a dataset of financial exposures, and
- the analysis of the data using statistical and financial econometric model techniques.

The post holder will work in close connection with Dr. Emanuele Campiglio, Dr. Irene Monasterolo, the place of work will be the WU Institute for Ecological Economics in Vienna. This position does not involve any teaching. We offer a dynamic, international, collaborative professional growth in the field of climate finance.

Applicants should have:

- A masters' degree or PhD in finance, economics, physics or statistics
- Experience in financial data collection, database development and management, and big data analysis, proven experience in financial analysis either in the academia or in the financial sector
- Strong analytical, modelling and coding skills; experience with network analysis, big data analysis and applied complex systems analysis is particularly welcome
- Experience with statistical and modelling software (e.g. Matlab, R)
- Excellent written and communication skills in English (knowledge of German welcome but not required)

- The ability to work independently, as well as part of a multicultural team effort; and to respect tight deadlines
- International and cross-cultural experience and understanding
- Interest in climate finance and macro-financial risk is a plus

The required skills and experience will be assessed taking into consideration the applicant's level of qualification (i.e. pre doc or post doc level) and/or previous experience in the private sector.

Please submit:

- a CV with the contact details of two referees
- a letter of motivation discussing how you fit the role and its specifications.

For the pre doc position the minimum gross monthly salary is € 2,864.50 (for 40 hours/week), subject to adjustment if candidates can document relevant prior professional experience. The gross monthly salary for the post doc position is € 3,803.90 (for 40 hours/week). This employee position will be limited to a period of one year, starting on February 15, 2020 (commencement date subject to change). For further information visit the official website.⁷²

Call for Nominations: Kurt-Rothschild Award for Economic Journalism and Research

In memory of the considerable achievements of Austrian Professor of Economics, Kurt Rothschild, the Karl-Renner-Institut and the Social Democratic Parliamentary Club established the Kurt Rothschild Award for Economic Journalism and Research. Through his work, Kurt Rothschild left a sustained impact on science, politics and society in Austria. As a socialist of Jewish origin, Kurt Rothschild had to flee Austria after its annexation into Hitler's Nazi Germany. It was particularly this time in exile that contributed to his societal approach to economic research.

The prize recognizes contributions to the economic and social sciences, which propose new approaches to the major challenges of our time, beyond standard and mainstream economic theory and in the spirit of Kurt Rothschild. Qualified submissions for the award consist of two combined components. The first consists of articles directed at a broad media audience, including commentaries and contributions to newspapers, magazines or blogs; and the second consists of academic work published in academic journals, books or as working papers. The applicant must be explicitly identified as a (co-)author in both items submitted. The submission form is available online⁷⁴.

The overall sum of the award money of the Kurt Rothschild Award is 10.000 €. A jury decides upon the division of this overall sum between the multiple awardees. No late submissions will be accepted (date of e-mail or postmark). The publication of submissions should have taken place in the 12 months prior to the final submission

Marxism: Karl Marx's Fifteen Key Concepts for Cultural & Communication Studies

by Christian Fuchs — 2020, Routledge

This book is a critical theory toolkit on how to make use of Karl Marx's ideas in media, communication, and cultural studies. Karl Marx's ideas remain of crucial relevance, and in this book, Christian Fuchs introduces Marx to the reader by discussing 15 of his key concepts and showing how they matter for understanding the digital and communicative capitalism that shapes human life in twenty-first century society. Key concepts covered include: the dialectic, materialism, commodities, capital, capitalism, labour, surplus-value, the working class, alienation, means of communication, the general intellect, ideology, socialism, communism, and class struggles.

Money Power and Financial Capital in Emerging Markets

by Ilias Alami — 2019, Routledge

This book provides a comprehensive investigation of the messy and crisis-ridden relationship between the operations of capitalist finance, global capital flows, and state power in emerging markets. The politics, drivers of emergence, and diversity of these myriad forms of state power are explored in light of the positionality of emerging markets within the network of space and power relations that characterises contemporary global finance. The book develops a multi-disciplinary perspective and combines insights from Marxist political economy, post-Keynesian economics, economic geography, and postcolonial and feminist International Political Economy. Alami comprehensively reviews the theories, histories, and geographies of cross-border finance management, and develops a conceptual framework which allows unpacking the complex entanglement of constraint and opportunities, of growing integration and tight discipline, that cross-border finance represents for emerging markets. Extensive fieldwork research provides an in-depth comparative critical interrogation of the policies and regulations deployed in Brazil and South Africa.

This volume will be especially useful to those researching and working in the areas of international political economy, contemporary geographies of money and finance, and critical development studies. It should also prove of interest to policy makers, practitioners, and activists concerned with the relation between finance and development in emerging markets and beyond.

Letter to Peter L. Rousseau (AEA) regarding the allocation of session at the ASSA meeting

Dear Dr. Rousseau:

We, representatives of several associations that participate in the annual meetings of the American Social Science Association (ASSA), wish to express our objections to the AEA policy regarding the allocation of sessions at these meetings, as described in your letter of November 7, 2018. The policy would have the effect of contributing to the problem of the lack of diversity within the economics profession and run counter to the recently expressed commitment of the AEA to address the issue of racial and gender discrimination.

The allocation of sessions is, understandably, based on attendance at the sessions of participating organizations. Our objections are both to the method of counting attendance, and to the proposed cutting of sessions by organizations whose median attendance falls below 13. We note that the policy proposes only methods of cutting sessions, with no consideration of possible additions.

¹³¹<https://www.routledge.com/Money-Power-and-Financial-Capital-in-Emerging-Markets-Facing-the-Liquidity/Alami/p/book/9780367276478>

Specifically, we object to the exclusion of presenters, chairs and discussants in counting the number of people attending sessions. Our organizations are committed to providing opportunities for participation in these sessions to scholars whose work is less well-known and who are more likely to be at the beginning of their academic careers. We therefore encourage them to contribute to the development of the discipline of economics through such participation, particularly as discussants. By doing so, we actively counteract the racial and gender discrimination that plague our profession. The AEA's proposed method of counting attendance directly limits our ability to do so.

The benefits of diversity extend beyond racial and gender composition to include those whose work challenges the theoretical orthodoxy that is well represented within the ASSA. Presentations of new ideas understandably draw smaller audiences than those that have already achieved recognition. Thus the policy of reducing the sessions for organizations with lower attendance necessarily reduced the opportunities for the ongoing development of the discipline that is vital to address the multiple real-world problems that we are experiencing. These include not only the lack of racial and gender equality, but the increasing inequality both within and between countries, as well as the dangers of climate change.

We therefore request a reconsideration of the policy on allocation of ASSA sessions, and look forward to hearing from you.
